Five Youths Attacked Near High School

Five Winchester youths — one boy and four girls — were assaulted Friday night in two separate incidents near the high school by four or five unidentified males bearing a metal pipe and tire iron. No one was seriously injured in the attacks but one of the attackers used a crowbar to smash the windshield of the car in which the four girls were traveling. The girls had just been dropped off by their coach behind the school gym after returning from the state track meet.

As the girls were about to leave the parking lot, they saw four or five youths in their late teens approaching the car. At first the girls thought they knew the youths. As they got closer, however, it became apparent that the youths were strangers. It also became apparent that they were trying to conceal a pipe and crowbar beneath their coats.

As the girls were backing out of the parking place, one of the youths swung the crowbar, smashing the windshield of the car.

The girls then drove toward the police station. The youths followed them, ramming the car twice from behind at the stop light at the intersection of Skillings rd. and Washington st. When the girls pulled into the police station, the attackers sped off.

One hour earlier, at approximately 9:30 p.m., a single male was chased and attacked by two youths. The student was allegedly struck on the head with a car jack. Police said the youth, who was reportedly returning home from a movie at the high school, suffered no visible injuries from the assault.

Police Chief John McHugh said, "We are looking into the theory that the attackers in the two incidents were the same individuals. The male youth reported his two attackers as being approximately 18-19 years of age and traveling in a green or brown station wagon. The girls described their attackers as being of similar ages and driving a small, tan station wagon with wood paneling and a roof rack.

"It could be the same car," said McHugh Tuesday. "Everybody in the department is looking for a car matching that description."

"I've lived here all my life and I have never heard of anything like this happening before," said Officer Kevin Mawn, who was on duty when the girls arrived at the station. "They were very rattled and had no idea who the attackers were or why they did it."

"They were very lucky," said Mawn. "With glass flying into the car, they could have suffered serious injuries."

Chief McHugh said that it is the first time in his experience that girls have been the subject of a violent attack. "I keep asking myself the question, 'Why the girls?' And I don't have an answer," he said. "Usually there is a reason. I would like to figure it out."

'It Was A Real Close Call'

By JOHN WILPERS

Their first reaction was fear. A strange, almost foreign feeling in Winchester.

"It was scary," said the mother of one of the Winchester High School girls attacked in the school parking lot Friday night by four or five male youths carrying a metal pipe and tire iron. "It was awfully scary."

My daughter is afraid now to be in the house alone," said another mother. A third parent said their daughter was uncomfortable just going into Winchester center Saturday night. "And that is really a shame in a town like this," the parent said. "It's a shock to have something like this happen in your own backyard," said a fourth. (The parents of all four girls requested anonymity as the attackers have not been identified or apprehended.)

The fear, however, particularly on the part of the parents, quickly gave way to relief and thanksgiving. "The fact that they smashed the windshield means they could have done something more, much more," said one adult. "It was a real close call."

"Thank God they are all safe," sighed another parent. She felt that the girl driving the car should get a "medal of honor" for having the

Water Rates May Rise By 32 Percent

Selectmen Monday boiled down their discussion of a proposal to increase town water rates to a public hearing date.

That hearing, slated for April 8 at 7:30 in Town Hall, will have residents discuss the water proposal and a suggestion by Town Manager Tom Groux that a sewer use charge be implemented as two ways to meet the requirements of Proposition 2.5.

In introducing a $23.3 million budget last week, Groux suggested the tapping of the Stabilization Fund and of the Sale of Land Account Fund as other ways to meet the requirements of 2.5.

Town Meeting approved a water rate increase last June, from .42 cents per 100 cubic feet to .65 cents per 100 cubic feet.

Groux told Selectmen Monday that a .21 or .22 cent increase was necessary to meet revenue needs.

In discussing a public hearing date, Groux said an April meeting would be ideal for a number of reasons.

The town will have by that time a better idea of the amount of aid it can expect from the state. Groux also said a survey of water rates in surrounding towns would be complete at that time. An April date would also allow Coffin and Richardson, a Boston-based engineering firm, to complete work on a sewer system study, Groux explained.

"April would be a suitable month for the meeting," Groux told Selectmen. He said he didn't want to schedule the hearing before having specific figures to bring before citizens.

Groux also emphasized the water rates may not have to be increased if other budget-trimming measures are successful in dealing with 2.5.

While most Selectmen expressed a willingness to discuss the proposed rate hike, Selectman Michael Saraco was anything but pleased with the suggestion. "The citizens of Winchester still haven't gotten over the sting of last spring's increase," Saraco said. "Here we are talking about increasing the water bill another 20 cents and no one can show me a reason why. I can't see it. I won't vote for it."

A Town Meeting appropriation approved $280,000 for water improvements last year.

Saraco said that since only approximately $140,000 has been spent thus far, he expects a $100,000 reversion.

However, Selectman John Williams said he would consider the increase.

"It impacts least on those who can afford it least," Williams said. Williams also cited the message of 2.5 and conservation concerns. He said higher prices might result in greater conservation.

"I support the increase in principle," Williams told the Board. "Right now, I'm convinced this is the place to go."

A later discussion of warrant articles Monday had Selectmen deciding to offer Town Meeting two separate articles, one dealing with the proposed water rate increase while the second would deal with the sewer use charge.

If the increase gains Town Meeting approval, rates would be up approximately 100 percent from the .42 cent level they were at prior to the increase granted last June.

Special Report

Phone Costs May Rise

By SUSAN SCHNECK

Star Reporter-Intern

Within the next two years, telephone calls from Winchester to Brookline, Wellesley and other nearby towns could become toll calls.

If New England Telephone (NET) gets its way, Winchester residents and businesses might have to pay 60 to 80 cents for five-minute calls that are now free.

The NET request pending before the state Department of Public Utilities (DPU) would drastically shrink the scope of the Boston toll-free calling area within the next two years. It would leave Boston with the smallest local calling area of any major city in the nation, according to a study by a prominent telecommunications expert.

This situation was discovered by the Winchester Chamber of Commerce in the course of a recent conversation with telecommunication expert Lee L. Selwyn.

"He (Selwyn) gave us some frightening information," said Chamber Executive Director Rita Spence.

The Chamber had sought out Selwyn's advice after NET finally drafted a proposal offering Winchester businesses, schools, churches, town offices and other non-residential users a flat rate option — a rate structure the Chamber has been seeking for almost a year.

However, this NET proposal also arbitrarily moved Winchester from eight to nine miles away from Boston. That seemingly insignificant change would place Winchester in NET's proposed toll-call category for calls to Boston, a fact NET did not explain to the Chamber.

"The phone company has no cost or distance justification for moving Winchester an extra mile away from Boston," Spence asserted. "It's utterly ridiculous!"

If the Chamber were to accept NET's flat rate proposal and the DPU granted NET's proposal to convert multi-message unit calls to toll calls, Winchester's flat rate advantage would be wiped out within two years.

At that point, a call from Winchester to Boston would cost between 60 and 80 cents and Winchester would be worse off than it is now.

"It's a lose-lose situation," said Spence. "The phone company holds all the cards and they deal them out only to their advantage."

"It's a crummy deal," said Selwyn. "They (the Chamber) had no other choice but to file legislation."

So last week the Chamber appeared before the legislature's Committee on Governmental Regulations to demand a flat rate option — without unfair clauses — for all towns in Massachusetts deprived of the flat rate option. Spence expects the committee to act on the bill within two weeks. (See related story.)

Regardless of the DPU's decision, Boston area residents already pay the highest local message unit rates in the country, computed both in terms of the charge per message unit and the limited amount of local calling service which one message unit buys, according to Selwyn's research.

"If the NET's plan to shrink the scope of the Boston calling area

The Budget Battle: A Political Judgement For Town Meeting

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

In all the recent debate over how much the schools should cut from its budget and how much the town should cut, perhaps the single, most important political body has been ignored.

For when all the smoke clears, when the School Committee and the Selectmen come to an agreement over whose share will be what, when the Finance Committee is done making their recommendation on what it feels the budget should look like, the final arbitrator will speak.

Town Meeting. "Is a fireman more important than a teacher? That's a political judgement for Town Meeting to make," Finance Committee Chairman Robert Frank told the School Committee this week. "It's basically asking the rhetorical question of whether school services or town services are more important."

School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander concurs. Even assuming the School Committee and the Selectmen reach an agreement over who should have to cut how much, it will remain for Town Meeting to decide how much will be cut from where.

"I'm fairly sure we'll come to an agreement," Alexander said in anticipation of tonight's meeting with the Selectmen at Town Hall. "But I don't think, however, that it is going to provide any answers for either department. Town Meeting is going to have to weigh their priorities," Alexander said.

But prior to the start of Town Meeting on April 27, the town and school departments will try to work out their differences over how much each should have to cut. Town Manager Tom Groux's calculations show that the overall budget still has to be cut by $362,000 if Town Meeting is to be presented with a balanced budget.

Groux maintains through a formula called the Tax Rate Recapitulation Sheet that the schools would have to add —Selectman Candidate Interviews—

John Williams and challenger Mark Lombardi.

John Williams

Why should John Williams be re-elected to the Board of Selectmen?

"I think I have the experience to be productive on the Board. I'm a former Finance Committee member and a Town Meeting member. I think I have contributed while serving on the Board and will continue to contribute. In the era of Proposition 2.5, there are some tough decisions to face."

"We can't let on-going program-stop. We have to have some sort of continuity."

What do you see as the major problems facing Winchester in the next year and who would you suggest dealing with those problems?

"Proposition 2.5 is a major problem, not just for the year ahead, but for the year after. It is a continuing problem unless we get help from the State Legislature. The challenge is great this year and is even greater the next. Proposition 2.5 is not realistic. It limits the levy to 2.5 percent per year. If inflation and business costs were increasing at that rate, then 2.5 would be realistic. But there's not."

"The plus of 2.5 is the closer scrutiny now given municipal budgets. One negative aspect of 2.5 is the limitation of growth to 2.5 percent

Mark Lombardi

Why are you challenging the incumbent?

"First of all, I really think there should be a challenge to the incumbent in any race. Without a challenge, the Board thinks its position is the right one. A challenge represents a healthier situation for the town."

"Basically, I'm a businessman and I take a business-like approach to most everything. I'm a doer. The first night I'm on the Board, the people will hear from me. I don't think the incumbent is doing that."

"The most important is that this Town Meeting, in the face of Proposition 2.5, will make decisions that will affect the town for a long time. If the right decisions are made, the town can live with 2.5."

What do you see as the major problems facing Winchester in the next year and how would you suggest dealing with those problems?

"The major problem is the implementation of Proposition 2.5. We have to live within the requirements

Principals Granted Increase

The School Committee approved by a 5-1 vote this week a two-year contract that will give the town's 11 principals 7.25 percent raises each year.

The salary increase equals the amount the teachers received in October. Total cost of the contract is $25,000 the first year and $26,000 the second year. The current salaries of the principals range from $27,047 for an asst. principal at the high school to the $38,912 salary of High School Principal Vincent Larocco. The contract takes effect in June.

The major concessions that the principals agreed to were acceptance of no new benefits or provisions and the deletion of their right to take sabbaticals, according to committee member Mary Jean Weylman, who represented the committee during the negotiations.

Thomas P. Budrewicz, Asst. Principal at the high school and head of the principals bargaining unit said he hoped "a big deal" was not made of the settlement because it was not a significant amount of money.

"We are not a big unit and we are not a costly one. It (the contract) is not as good as we would have liked and it's probably better than what the School Committee wanted but that's the essence of negotiating. They can live with it and we can live with it," Budrewicz said.

School Committee member Roger Bauman was the sole dissenting vote, however, because he felt the salary increase was high in light of Prop. 2.5.

"I'm disappointed that the principals received the same increase as the teachers, mainly because a difference existed and that's because 2.5 passed," Bauman said, referring to the fact the teachers' pact was signed before the passage of Prop. 2.5 in November.

While he sympathized with the principals because of inflation, he had still hoped for a smaller increase.

"Given what we're facing in possible cuts I'm sorry that we didn't come up with a lower percentage increase," Bauman said.

Budrewicz said the principals did make concessions by not seeking additional provisions in the contract and the forfeit of the sabbatical privileges.

"The only advantage over last year's contract is the salary adjustment," Budrewicz said. "We've really got to put the thing in the proper perspective. There are 11 principals. Even if we went down to 6.5 percent it would be what, about a $2,000 difference? In the scheme of things that is not a significant amount of money," he said.

He also added that even though the principals did agree to give up the sabbaticals, it was a right that had not been abused since it was first bargained for in 1965. Under the agreement principals, as a group, were entitled to two sabbaticals over a six year period. In the 15 years since, only two principals (Robert Forrest, one full year and Martha Grenzeback, less than half a year) have gone on sabbatical.

A person on sabbatical receives his regular annual salary during that time.

The principals also agreed that if schools are closed in September then those principals that lose their administrative duties would not receive a raise.

State Appeal

Withdrawn

An appeal of a state order of conditions filed by the Lexington Conservation Commission for the Pepper Hill Estates II in Winchester has ended an attempt to block construction of a 26-unit condominium.

The Lexington Commission was joined in the appeal by residents of Winchester and the town of Arlington. The group was concerned that development of the 10-acre site adjacent to Lexington's Whipple Hill conservation area would result in more pollution in the Reed's Brook and the Arlington Res swimming facility.

The appeal was withdrawn after Frederick Uehlein, an attorney representing the Franchi Construction Company, the developer, said his client had agreed to include a storm water retention system and a drainage easement.

Two Winchester men were arraigned in Woburn District Court Tuesday on charges of possession of narcotics with intent to distribute after they were arrested in the parking lot of the White Hen store on Main st.

Steven Johnis, 23, of 245 Ridge st., and Timothy J. Carrigan, 18, of 2 Elmwood ave., were arrested Friday following a surveillance at the store by Winchester Police Lt. Joseph Perritano and Inspector Bill Nash.

According to reports at the department, the police moved to the scene after receiving information that a drug sale would take place in the parking lot.

The officers began the stakeout at 6 p.m. Friday and made the arrest approximately an hour later.

Police said they watched Johnis leave a car occupied by Carrigan and move to a blue Thunderbird. However, before police could make the arrest, a store patron pulled into the lot and inadvertently blocked police access to the suspect.

Two Face Drug Charge

When the blue Thunderbird left the lot, police followed it. After 10 minutes, the officers returned to the scene and arrested both Johnis and Carrigan.

Police reports list a number of bags containing a white substance, allegedly cocaine, $1,200 in cash and a number of other what appeared to be drug-related items as being taken from the Johnis and his vehicle. A bag of what was apparently marijuana was recovered from the glove compartment of the Johnis vehicle.

Fire Response Time Unaffected

Even though proposed cuts in overtime and positions in the Fire Department will leave fewer men to fight fires, Chief Robert McElhinney believes response time to fires won't be adversely affected.

When he announced his proposed budget for fiscal 1982 last week, Town Manager Tom Groux included a $62,000 cut in overtime and positions in the fire department. Since three of those positions are presently unfilled and a fourth fireman is slated to retire this summer, the fire department won't lose any firefighters to Groux's efforts to meet the requirements of Proposition 2.5.

Groux said in an interview with The Star last week that those cuts might affect the response time to fires. McElhinney disagrees.

"Certainly, any cuts in personal services will affect our ability to cover fire," McElhinney said Monday. "We'll just have to try and perform our duties the best we can."

"We'll just have less manpower on fire calls," McElhinney said. "If we get one fire call at a time," the Chief explained, "our response time won't be affected."

Groux also proposed the consolidation of fire and police communications, a suggestion that drew fire from McElhinney.

"I believe it (communications) belongs in the fire service," the Chief said. "I oppose combining the two. I think it's an intricate part of the fire service."

Selectmen Monday filled two vacancies on Winchester's Historical Commission.

composure to drive straight to the police station despite a shattered windshield and the continuing pursuit of the attackers.

As the immediacy of the incident wore off, the parents' reaction became more analytical. They all seem to have accepted the fact that it was an isolated incident, that steps can be taken to help prevent similar incidents, and that, in the long run, it may have given their daughters a healthy sense of reality.

But for all of the cold analysis, there is still the baffling, unanswered question: Why?

"Our kids are good kids," said one parent. "They're involved in sports; they behave themselves. You're not supposed to have to worry about something like this happening to kids like ours. I simply can't believe it happened."

"I felt very confident and safe about my daughter being out and going to the track meet," said another parent. "I didn't think there could be any problems."

Now, however, parents and students alike realize that there can be problems, even for those who mind their own business and do all the right things. "I'm sure everybody will be much more careful from now on," said one mother.

"The kids are more aware now that things aren't all that nice out there, even in Winchester," said one adult. "Now they know that they have to keep their eye out even when they walk around in downtown Winchester."

"My daughter has always been a trusting and open person," said another parent. "Now she will probably be less so. Maybe that's healthy. Maybe now she'll have more respect for the possibilities."

Maybe the town, too, will now have that same respect, suggested another parent. "We've all been pretty complacent," the parent said. "Nothing this bad has happened so we don't have any preventive medicine. Maybe it wouldn't be a bad idea to have a group of people sit down now and talk about how to help prevent similar incidents in the future."

School Closing Meeting Monday

School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander said this week that she doesn't expect more than one elementary school - and possibly none - will be closed and suggested the committee has all but ruled out the idea of shutting down the McCall Junior High.

The Committee To Study School Closings is expected to present their recommendations formally to the School Committee Monday night.

"I think two school closings would be too drastic in such a short amount of time," Alexander said this week. "Only one might be considered and I'm not sure the committee will even go along with that," she added.

The closing of an elementary school would save approximately $120,000 while the closing of McCall would save about $230,000.

a year."

"There are other concerns facing the town, among them the on-going water project to upgrade the system."

Town Manager Tom Groux has proposed an increase in the water rates, the implementation of a sewer use charge and the tapping of the Stabilization and Sale of Land Account Fund as a way to deal with the effects of Proposition 2.5. Would you support these proposals?

"Yes. Frankly, the alternatives are unpalatable to me. Without Town Meeting approval of these proposals, the bulk of the cuts would have to come from the town side of the budget. The impact on the schools would be minimal. I don't like to increase the water rates twice in one year, but as I say, I don't like the alternatives. As far as the sewer use charge is concerned, we're obligated to do this by the MDC. I favor the philosophy of both these things for three reasons."

"First, these charges represent nothing we're not paying for indirectly through taxes anyway. The cost to the taxpayer, on the average, is no greater than it was before."

"Secondly, the fees put the burden of paying for use on those using the service. If, for example, you don't use a lot of water, you don't have to pay for it."

"Finally, there the conservation considerations. If people have to pay more, it may very well be they will use a lot less."

"As far as the use of the Stabilization Fund is concerned, that fund exists to ease us over rough times. It's a cookie jar. I can't think of any rougher times than those we're facing now."

"As I said, I am willing to support the philosophy of the water and sewer use fee proposals. I'm willing to live with the collective wisdom of Town Meeting as far as the amount of those increases are concerned."

+Establish a committee of parents, teachers, police, students and others to consider other methods of increasing security and safety.

"The worst thing that could happen would be for everybody to become paranoid," said one parent. "We have to realize and accept that these things can happen to us and our kids. But we also have to go on living, just more carefully now."

With the benefit of four days perspective and the blessing of no serious injuries, one parent was able to conclude that "it is good for the town to know this has happened - maybe it will help us prevent a 'next time' when we might not be so lucky."

Groux's proposals, Winchester would be faced with cutting $1,076,513 from the fiscal 1982 budget. How would you make these cuts and where?

"We'd look first at non-essential areas, areas that are not essential to the operation of the town. I realize that's a judgement call."

Police Honor John DeCologero

John DeCologero has become something you don't see much of anymore.

At 14, John is, well, a real-live hero.

Ask anyone at the Winchester Police Department. They'll tell you in a minute.

His testimony was instrumental in the conviction of Mark A. Giannino, a 17-year-old Charlestown resident, in connection with the armed robbery of the Winchester Savings Bank last March 22.

John was approached by Giannino on the afternoon of the robbery. He asked John if he knew where he could find a pay phone. John pointed out the pay phone in front of the Winchester Police Department.

After the call and after sending John for cigarettes, Giannino came home with the boy where he used the family phone to call for a ride out of Winchester.

While at the boy's home, Giannino asked John if he'd heard anything about a robbery. He also told John he'd seen a group of men leave the high school parking lot in a "stolen" blue car.

John had Giannino write down that information and later, when police came around asking people if they'd seen anything, John stepped forward with the information Giannino had given him.

He gave police a description of Giannino and later, identified him from a group of photos the police showed him at the station.

End of story, right?

Wrong.

The phone calls started then; phone calls that threatened John if he testified against the robber.

John went on to testify at two grand jury hearings and a trial. John's testimony, coupled with other evidence the police were able to gather, resulted in Giannino's conviction.

The police department, grateful for John's role gave the youth a plaque recently thanking him for his help.

Legislature Eyes Phone Dispute

By SUSAN SCHNECK
Star reporter-intern

Disagreement between the Winchester Chamber of Commerce and the New England Telephone Company (NET) over an alleged 55-year-old discriminatory rate structure is now in the hands of the state legislature.

Continuous negotiations to change the rate structure imposed on Winchester and ten other Massachusetts towns resulted recently in a phone company proposal to the Chamber which Chamber officials insist would leave Winchester worse off than it is now.

Under the NET proposal, a call to downtown Boston would be a toll call for all towns more than eight miles away. This would make a five-minute call from Winchester to downtown Boston roughly 60-80 cents.

"It is a crummy deal," said telecommunications expert Lee Selwyn, who is presently fighting the NET proposal on behalf of Boston University, Harvard University and other institutions. "The Chamber had no other choice but to file legislation."

So last week, the Chamber appeared before the legislature's Committee on Governmental Regulations and presented their case.

Senator Samuel Rotondi and Representative Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh, who are sponsors of the bill, spoke in its favor. Lobbyists for NET argued against the bill. The bill would require that flat rate non-residential exchange telephone service be offered to all non-residential subscribers in the Commonwealth by all phone companies operating in the Commonwealth.

Town offices, churches, schools, fire and police departments and most medium and small businesses in Winchester are paying far more than they would pay if they were located in an adjoining community with a flat rate structure, Spence said. Instead, all non-residential, non-switchboard customers must purchase measured unit service.

Under measured unit service, customers pay almost 11 cents per phone call after approximately 90 calls per month. For Winchester's town offices, said Spence, the option to purchase flat rate service could save the town approximately $20,000 a year.

Chamber Telephone Committee member, attorney Robert P. Bigelow, presented the proposed legislation to the committee last week and Selwyn served as an expert witness.

If the legislative committee accepts the bill, it will be sent to the House and Senate.

"We want a standardized process without undue costs," said Spence. "They (NET) want the same thing (a standardized process) but they want it their way."

Spence expects the committee to act on the bill within two weeks.

"The groundwork is laid," she said. "The phone company knows we mean business and we've brought the matter to the attention of the public."

"We'd much rather settle this without legislation but we have no other choice at this point," she said.

becomes a reality, Boston would undoubtedly have the smallest local calling area of any major city in the nation," Selwyn said in testimony before the DPU on behalf of Boston University, Harvard University and other institutions lobbying against NET's proposal.

The NET proposal is based upon their assertion of customer-perceived similarity between a multi-message unit and message toll calls.

At the hearing, Selwyn testified that customers do not perceive multi-message units and toll call units to be the same. And, in contrast to the phone company's proposal to shrink the toll-free calling area, Selwyn recommended that it be enlarged. "The scope of the Metropolitan Boston Exchange should be enlarged to more accurately track and reflect the geographical expansion of the Greater Boston region," Selwyn testified.

"The phone company employs a bizarre type of criteria to determine rate structures and they use it to their advantage as they need it," Spence said.

John Williams

John Williams

Selectman John J. Williams has announced his candidacy for re-election to that Board.

Williams was first elected to office last June to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Barbara S. Hankins, and is now seeking a full three year term on the Board.

"The need for experienced leadership has never been greater," states Williams. "Reasoned and responsible efforts must be the hallmark of our compliance with Proposition 2½. Our priorities must recognize the future welfare of our town, taxpayers, and dedicated employees. Improved communications, cooperation, and more effective use of our resources are the keys to this effort."

I believe that my previous experience and commitment to our community have made me an asset to the Board. I hope to continue that service."

Williams has been a Town Meeting member since 1973; spent five years on the Finance Committee, serving as Chairman in 1977; was a member of the Cable TV Advisory Committee; and is a past president of the Winchester Jaycees.

A Senior Computer Systems Analyst, Williams has been employed by New England Telephone and Telegraph Company since 1953, following four years in the Air Force. He and his wife, Phyllis, have lived in Winchester for forty-three years. They have five children and one grandchild.

Mark Lombardi

Mark Lombardi

Mark A. Lombardi of 14 Ware rd. announces his candidacy for the office of Selectman. Lombardi is seeking the one seat that is available this year on the Board of Selectmen in the March 31 election.

In declaring his candidacy, Lombardi stated his desire to put his long and successful business experience and acumen to work for the people of the Town of Winchester. Mr. Lombardi, a 30 year resident of the Town, currently is a Realtor associated with the Bixby & Porter Company.

Lombardi has always been interested in the welfare of Winchester, having served on the Finance Committee for three years; a Town Meeting Member for 12 years; Winchester Architectural Review Study Committee; Past President Friends of the Winchester Band and Orchestra; Past Director Washington School Dads Club; Director, Winchester Rotary Club; Served on negotiating group with firefighters; Past Commodore Winchester Boat Club.

It is Mr. Lombardi's belief that his experience in running a successful business of his own for a great many years will be most useful in serving on the Board of Selectmen.

Lombardi, a Marine Veteran of World War II, is married to the former Pauline B. Ferro of Winchester. They have three children, Kevin 21; Denise Randall, who lives on Sargent rd. with her husband, Jonathan; Mark who resides with his wife, Doris, on West Chardon rd. and two grandchildren.

Sandra Rodgers

Sandra Rodgers

Sandra Rodgers, 5 McCall rd., announces she is a candidate for re-election to the school committee.

"Education is this community's most important resource. Decisions we make now will be critical to the future quality of education in Winchester. With my continuous involvement for the past ten years in Winchester school matters, I believe I can contribute greatly to careful and rational decisions necessary in a time of fiscal constraint," she said.

A Winchester resident for twenty years and a town meeting member since 1976, she has three sons, a Winchester High School graduate, a high school senior and one who will enter the high school next fall. Before being elected to the school committee in 1978, she served as President of the Parkhurst Parents' Association, President of the Community School Association and as a member of numerous committees working on such subjects as consolidation of school facilities, curriculum planning and declining enrollment.

"I know the responsibilities of being a member of the school committee and am currently involved in many important issues facing the schools. I would like the opportunity to continue to use my experience and dedication to work for the benefit of all the students and citizens of the town," she said.

Mary Jean Weylman

Mary Jean Weylman

Mary Jean Weylman is seeking re-election to the Winchester School Committee in order to continue her support for basic athletic and educational programs.

Her voting record over the last three years clearly demonstrates her enthusiasm for the athletic program, her belief in the importance of fundamentals, her dedication to an improved English curriculum, and her insistence on accountability from the administrative staff.

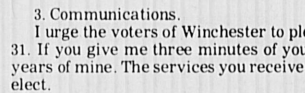

Declining enrollment and the pressures of Proposition 2½ have made Mrs. Weylman aware that primary emphasis should continue to be placed on maintaining excellence in the teaching of fundamental skills rather than on support services.

Mrs. Weylman has voted consistently against long term contracts and automatic raises for administrators. She realizes that school budget funds are primarily to provide the best education for all the school children of Winchester.

Mary Jean Weylman believes in the public school, continues to educate her own children at all levels of the system and remains responsive to the needs and wishes of the community.

A vote for Mary Jean Weylman on Tuesday, March 31, is a vote for excellence in public school education for all Winchester students.

Mary Pronski

I, Mary G. Pronski of 128 Washington Street am announcing my candidacy for re-election to the Winchester School Committee.

I am a life long resident of Winchester and have been active in Winchester school affairs for many years as a volunteer and parent of three Winchester Public School system graduates. I served on the Winchester School Committee from 1974-1977 and was elected chairman for the 1976-1977 school calendar year.

In announcing my return to public life, I point out the unresolved problems of a school population that continues to shrink and the budgetary problems brought forth by Proposition 2½.

My feelings are that the School Committee needs my experience and abilities to cope with these problems without being forced into unnecessary legal challenges or court actions.

In commenting on the status of the Winchester Public Schools I point to three major areas of concern:

1. The ever widening demand of parents for more challenging education for their children.
2. The need to improve employee morale.

and a list of other candidates, see page 6.

Joseph Geary

Joseph F. Geary Jr. is pleased to announce his candidacy for re-election to the Winchester Planning Board. As a past chairman with eight years service on the Board, his relevant zoning insight and experience are attributes worthy of serious consideration in the coming election.

A Purple Heart veteran of WW II, Geary served both in Europe and the Pacific. For his participation in the Normandy assault as a member of a naval landing party, he was awarded the "Croix de Guerre avec Palme" by the French government.

A Registered Professional Engineer, Geary received his undergraduate training at Northeastern University and did graduate work at the University of Maryland. He was employed as a mechanical engineer at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory in Maryland until 1958 when he transferred to what is now the Air Force Geophysics Laboratories at Hanscom Field. His duties at AFGL encompassed both engineering and management as they related to the design, assembly and launch of varied aerospace research payloads and rocket vehicles. Mr. Geary retired from this position in 1980 after almost 34 years of federal government service.

Geary and his wife, Ruth, are Ridge st. residents, are Boat Club members and were committee workers in the successful WISBA fund drive for new uniforms for the high school band. Their children, Joe and Steve, are Winchester High graduates.

Joseph Geary

John Regan

I, John J. Regan, announce my candidacy for the Winchester Housing Authority. This position will be vacant due to the decision of Charles Doucette not to seek re-election after many years of dedicated service.

I graduated from Winchester High School with the class of 1960, and have been on the Winchester Fire Department for 18 years. I am married to the former Ruthann Garvey and am the father of three children, who are enrolled in the Winchester School System.

I have the energy and desire to work for the best interests of all the Townspeople in the capacity as a member of the Winchester Housing Authority. I am anxiously awaiting this new challenge.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the people who signed my nomination papers, giving me the privilege to seek election to this very important position.

ABC Program Celebrates 10th

Winchester's A Better Chance celebrated its tenth year Saturday night with the Dartmouth College Glee Club singing to a capacity crowd in the High School auditorium.

Immediately following the intermission President Vandy French introduced each of the current A.B.C. students: seniors Blair Bradley, Kevin Thomas, and Donald Jordan; juniors, Ervin Beeman, Rolando Looor, and Orlando Ossorio; and freshmen, Sean Barnave and Courtney DeShong.

He then brought onstage four returning alumni who had been invited back to Winchester especially for this tenth benefit concert. Tony Johnson, who graduated from Winchester High School last June, is a freshman at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. Charles Grannum and Douglas Moody both graduated from W.H.S. in 1977 and are seniors at the University of Pennsylvania.

Grannum will be going on to graduate school with plans to become a dentist. When asked about his experiences in Winchester, Grannum highlighted his experiences working with Dr. William Wilson, an orthodontist, as part of the Max-Ed program. He says that opportunity, among others, was an invaluable part of his Winchester education.

Moody also participated in the Max-Ed program by taking an architecture course from Alan Schoennegge and has majored in architecture at Penn. Moody emphasized that his two years in Winchester had prepared him well for college.

The fourth alumni, Jose Rivera, was one of the first group of A.B.C. students to come to Winchester and he graduated in 1973. He seemed pleased to have been invited back and when asked, "was it all worth it?", he replied firmly, "Oh sure it was". Rivera now works for the Boys Clubs in New York City. He says that he learned not only from school but from the community and he looks forward to returning again to lend his support to the program.

Local Officers Assist In Arrests

Winchester Police Officers Larry Hill and Thomas Faulkner were credited with aiding the Woburn Police Department in the arrest of two Woburn men in connection with a breaking and entering incident at Case's Drug Store.

Donald D. Lamudge of 43 Warren st., Woburn, and Jim Bouhuys of 14 B Totman st., Woburn were charged in connection with the incident after local police stopped their car following the break.

Winchester police are also looking into breaking and entering incidents on Pond st., on Stevens st. and on Washington st.

The Pond st. break occurred between 10:30 p.m.-10:55 p.m. Feb. 23. A dirt bike valued at $120 was taken in the incident.

The Steven st. break occurred between 11 a.m.-5:30 p.m. Feb. 26.

The Washington st. break occurred between 7:30 a.m.-3:45 p.m. Feb. 26 and resulted in the loss of cash, silver coins, figurines and jewelry.

Pavlska Speaks To Area Realtors

Janet M. Pavlska, President of the Arlington Five Cent Savings Bank addressed a group of realtors on the subject of Mortgage Financing in 1981 recently and indicated that the rules of the game have changed dramatically in the last few years.

She stated that mortgage instruments are considerably different than they were just a few years ago. The terms under which a bank will agree to write a mortgage have changed. Through the last three recessions, the Arlington Five Cent Savings Bank has maintained a position of being active in the mortgage market never having been in the position of refusing applications in its service area.

Wyman Finalists Named

The Alternative School Use Committee will be paring down the proposals of six finalists that are seeking to buy the Wyman School and turn it into an 18-unit condominium complex.

The committee interviewed the six finalists earlier this week and are expected to eliminate some of those proposals before the final interviews on March 17-18, according to Re-Use Committee member Carolyn Ward.

The proposals range in price from $315,000 to $414,000.

The six finalists, culled from an original list of 19 proposals, are: MB Group - Robert S. Bowditch of Boston. A bid of $315,000. Crowninshield Corp. - Philip H. Singleton of Peabody. A bid of $350,000. Wyman Development Associates - Stanton V. Abrams, Paul Maggiore and Paul Ferrazzi of Boston. A bid of $350,000. Hilon Development Corp. - The Banani Corp. - Haim S. Eliachar and Lili Banani of Chestnut Hill. A bid of $378,000. Mark Grossman Associates, Inc. - From Wayland. A bid of $400,000.

The Blakeley Corp. - Robert F. Blakeley and Robert F. Walsh of Boston. A bid of $414,000.

Under the guidelines drawn up by the Re-Use Committee, the development must consist of no more than 18 units of privately financed condominiums. Also, no major additions will be allowed but exterior architectural changes will be encouraged. The current landscape design that has the building set back from Church st. will not be altered.

Ward said she did not know how many of the six finalists will be invited back for the final interviews later this month. Under the timetable established by the committee, they hope to make a recommendation to the Selectmen by March 23.

The Planning Board would then hold public hearings on the necessary zoning changes prior to April 30. Town Meeting would then vote on zoning changes and the purchase and sale agreement at the spring Town Meeting.

The developer that is selected would then take over the property on Aug. 1. Wyman's current tenant, the privately-owned Bartlett School, is scheduled to move into the Parkhurst School building on Aug. 1.

Seminar Eyes Bad Checks At Bank On Feb. 24

On Tuesday Feb. 24, Tom Dickinson, Vice President of the Winchester Savings Bank was host to approximately fifty employees of the combined Winchester banks for a seminar sponsored by Crime Prevention Officer Kevin P. Mawn in cooperation with the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council. The topic for the seminar was — Retail Security: The Problems of Fraudulent Checks.

Speakers for the evening were Thomas Chuda from the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council; William Phipps of the Retailers' Association of Massachusetts; Lieutenant Andrew Crawford, prosecutor for the Winchester Police Department and Crime Prevention Officer Mawn.

Topics encompassed fraudulent checks, the cashing of these checks, employee responsibility, types of fraudulent check writers.

Nelson's Bakery, Salvy's Bakery, Randall's Restaurant, and Taylor Rental provided a collation for those in attendance.

John DeCologero: The Town's Hero

We'd like to add our voices to those praising young John DeCologero for his role in aiding the police investigation of the bank robbery at Winchester Savings Bank last March.

John showed no small amount of courage when he identified robber Mark A. Giannino. That courage continued through weeks of threatening calls, testimony before two grand juries and finally, through the trial of the robber.

At 14, John showed us all something we haven't seen for sometime. He showed us how a hero acts; how one citizen with the courage to follow through, to become involved in what could have ultimately been a dangerous situation, can make a difference.

The Winchester Police Department recently gave John a plaque thanking him for his help. We join the department in their sentiments.

Thanks, John. And congratulations. You have both our admiration and respect.

Selectmen, School Meeting Important

In what has become known as the year of the cut, the era of Proposition 2.5, we feel that it's important for citizens to involve themselves closely with the preparation of this year's budget.

Town Manager Tom Groux submitted a $23.3 million spending sheet to Robert Frank's Finance Committee last week and, as we said here last week, while the picture isn't exactly rosy, neither is it bleak.

Sure, cuts will have to be made even if Town Meeting approves Groux's plans to tap the Stabilization Fund and the Sale of Land Account Fund and to increase the water rate and implement a sewer use charge.

Without that approval, town-wide budget cuts will total more than $1 million.

Selectmen will meet with the School Committee tonight at 8 p.m. to continue budget talks. Right now, the schools are expected to have to trim approximately $300,000 in addition to $750,000 in cuts already proposed.

Among the items slated for discussion is the amount of revenue the town and schools will receive.

During a recent Selectmen's budget meeting, only one Town Meeting member bothered coming. We think that's a poor showing.

We urge Town Meeting members and other interested citizens to come to Town Hall tonight.

As we've said on a number of occasions in this space, it's your town and any cuts will affect you. So speak up now or hold your peace later.

Prop. 2 1/2

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

It's no surprise that Proposition 2 1/2 is bogged down when public service administrators such as the Winchester Town Comptroller continue to "blast" Proposition 2 1/2 as reported in the Star last week (Feb. 26).

How can the taxpayers of Winchester, or any other community for that matter, expect Proposition 2 1/2 to work when the very same "public servants" who fought it tooth and nail are now, unfortunately, charged with the responsibility of making it work.

Rather than taking a positive approach by proposing responsible and realistic budget cuts to implement the mandate of the majority (Prop 2 1/2), the minority "public servants" are still desperately trying to gum up the works.

We still hear the same scare tactics and watch the same sabre rattling just as we did before the taxpayers clearly spoke last November. The "I told you so" negative, vindictive approach is appalling and pathetic to the taxpayers who know that Proposition 2 1/2 can and will work in spite of the "public servants" continued opposition to it.

It's up to each and every one of us who voted for Proposition 2 1/2 to remind the administrators and politicians that they have a clear responsibility to the citizens to make sure it works.

Foreign Relations

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

What is the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission?

Most Americans have never heard of these two organizations. But knowing something about them is essential to understanding what is happening today and what has been going on in America for several decades. So, let us examine, first, the Council on Foreign Relations and then, later the Trilateral Commission.

The Council on Foreign Relations was incorporated in 1921. It is a private group which is headquartered at the corner of Park Avenue and 68th street in New York City, in a building given to the organization by the Rockefeller family in 1929.

The C.F.R.'s founder, Edward Mandell House, had been the chief advisor of President Woodrow Wilson. House was not only Wilson's most prominent aide, he actually dominated the President. Woodrow Wilson referred to House as "my alter ego" (my other self) and it is totally accurate to say that House, not Wilson, was the most powerful individual in our nation during the Wilson Administration, from 1913 to 1921.

Unfortunately for America, it is also true that Edward Mandell House was a Marxist whose goal was to socialize the United States. In 1912, House wrote the book "Philip Dru: administrator." In it he said he was working for "Socialism as dreamed of by Karl Marx." The original edition of the book did not name House as its author, but he made it clear in numerous ways that he indeed was its creator.

In "Philip Dru: Administrator", Edward Mandell House laid out a fictionalized plan for the conquest of America. He told of a "conspiracy" (the word is his) which would gain control of both the Democratic and Republican parties, and use them as instruments in the creation of a socialistic world government.

The book called for passage of a graduated income tax and for the establishment of a state controlled central bank as steps toward the ultimate goal.

Both of these proposals are planks in the Communist Manifesto. And both became law in 1913, during the very first year of the House dominated Wilson administration.

The House plan called for the United States to give up its sovereignty to the league of Nations at the close of World War I. But when the U.S. Senate refused to ratify America's entry into the league, Edward Mandell House's drive toward world government was slowed down. Disappointed, but not beaten, House and his friends then formed the Council on Foreign Relations, whose purpose right from its inception was to destroy the freedom and independence of the United States and lead our nation into a world government—if not through the League of Nations, then through another world organization that would be started after another world war. The control of that world government, of course, was to be in the hands of House and like-minded individuals.

From its beginning in 1921, the C.F.R. began to recruit men of power and influence. In the late 1920's important financing for the C.F.R. came from the Rockefeller Foundation and the Carnegie Foundation. In 1940, at the initiation of President Roosevelt, members of the C.F.R. gained domination over the State Department, and they have maintained that domination ever since.

Rupert Kuglin

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

We recently moved to Winchester because we believed this was the best town in the Commonwealth to raise our family. We quickly grew fond of the people and their well-kept neighborhoods, which exemplifies what the American dream is all about.

This quality of life is now being threatened by large scale condominium developments. They will destroy the quaintness of our town and place a tremendous burden on our public facilities, such as, sewer, water, fire protection, etc.

We are not condemning growth, since growth allowed us to build our home here. What we are condemning is the irresponsible manner by which Zoning Codes can arbitrarily be changed without due consideration for families in the Carriage Hill neighborhood, and similar neighborhoods throughout Winchester. We will not stand idly, while condominiums destroy the character of this centuries old town. Will you?

Suicide Talk

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to the parents and teachers at Winchester High School. All interested citizens are invited to attend.

Dear Parents and Teachers:

The Parent Faculty Association of The Winchester High School and the Winchester Hospital invite you to a jointly-sponsored program to be presented Tuesday, March 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the Social Studies Open Area on the second floor of the High School.

Dr. John Carper and Sarah Benet will speak and lead a discussion on Adolescent Depression. Dr. Carper is an M.D. and the director of the Adolescent Center at Boston City Hospital and Benet is the Coordinator and Program Developer at the Center.

What are some of the causes of adolescent depression? How can we as parents and teachers recognize the symptoms? How can we help our teenagers deal with depression in themselves or their peers; and more important, how can we help to prevent the possible tragic end result of adolescent suicide?

Dr. Carper and Ms. Benet will address these and other questions, and there will be time for a question and answer period.

We hope this program will give parents and teachers the opportunity to join together to learn more about this growing concern for our young people.

Betsy Spiller, President
Parent Faculty Association
Winchester High School

Heating Costs

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

We wonder why there are so many grim appearing people today. Why shouldn't they feel bad when there is a new surprise each day in our papers, such as fuel oil, gas.

I do not think our big men in Washington D.C. could live on the minimum wage. Too bad they can't try it for a while.

Take home pay around two hundred dollars. With two children this can't be done even if you go cold turkey. Some of these men do the best they can but with fuel oil going up 15 cents per gal. and gas and gasoline up again and no raises, how can they pay their bills.

I always think of the folks who are cold and hungry. I hope our new president will think of them when he is asking Congress to cut everything.

Louise Chase

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Again this year, our legislators are asking for a raise, not all of them but most.

How come they need a raise when they are telling everyone else not to ask for one.

Most low paid people today have the same bills the same worries, the same stress, but live on so much less. I really do not know how a man with a family of four live and pay their bills. No wonder these men can't sleep nights. They can't pay their bills, it is impossible on this minimum wage today.

Think of it; $3.50 per hour, at most these men's take-home pay is $175, if they work 6 days is not enough. Their grocery bills are at least for 6 people $100 to $120 per week and with rent and the rest, it is hopeless.

Well, you will say their wives work. This is what is wrong today, mothers must work when they should be home caring for the family's needs.

Why should a woman be a housekeeper, a cook, nurse, and everything a woman does in a day which is exhausting.

When people get overtired, they get irritable and the kids suffer. Too bad for the kids.

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to Winchester Hospital President Jack Hunter.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Once again I feel compelled to write you to tell you how much I appreciate the care given by personnel at your hospital. When my husband was a patient there last March, I wrote you after his death expressing my deepest appreciation for the care given him and me during his last illness.

After all these years (I'm 84) I had my first hospital confinement. I was in A304 for five days and again I cannot express enough my appreciation for the care given in your facility.

The nurses, the nurses aides and even your cleaning help were all of the highest calibre, and I told them and other patients I did not see a "cross" face or an impatient mood. I cannot praise the atmosphere of the hospital enough.

And the food was so artistically prepared with extra nice eye-appealing touches that commendation should go to your dietitian and her staff for making meals a pleasure.

Every citizen in Winchester should support your drive for funds to enlarge the Hospital and its needs in order to keep such an exceptional facility in our town.

PURAN BAIR AND SAPHIRA LINDEN-BAIR will conduct a universal worship service at the Unitarian Church next Sunday morning including scriptures and music of the world's leading religions.

Unitarians To Participate In Worship

Sunday, March 8, at 10:30 a.m. the congregation and visitors to the Unitarian Church will participate in a Universal Worship, the religious service of the Sufi Order in which reverence and gratitude is offered to all the religions with the lighting of candles, reading from their sacred scriptures, music and chanting.

In closing everyone will join in "Toward the One", moving in a circle together to a mantram of words and gestures symbolizing Hinduism, Zoroastrianism, Buddhism, Judaism, Christianity and Islam. Visual symbols of these religions will be displayed on banners hanging in the chancel.

The service will be conducted by Puran Bair and Saphira Linden-Bair, leaders of the Sufi Order in Boston. Puran, a computer scientist, is president of Serapis Corporation, a firm which teaches purpose directed meditation for the development of insight and capacity in business people; Saphira has been artistic director of Theater Workshop Boston since its inception fourteen years ago and has developed several original plays and educational counseling programs. The theater opened a new original play, "Guests of My Life" last Saturday in Boston.

Both leaders have been long time disciples of Pir Vilayat Khan, son of Hazrat Inayat Khan who founded the Sufi Order in the West in 1910. Thus the ancient wisdom derived from the rich spiritual traditions of the East is merged with the tradition of logic and technology of the West to help bring about the basic unit of the human family.

Malik Daniel Rose will accompany the music on the piano, clarinet and drum and will sing with the Unitarian Choir.

The service is sponsored by the Worship Committee including Stephen Thomases, chair, Lois Anderson, David Drolet, Deborah Ebeling, Charles Rzepka and Paulett Taggart. A discussion hour with the leaders will follow the service and refreshments will be provided by Janet Spencer and the Fellowship Committee.

Winchester Trails Sets Courses For March 12, 19

Winchester Trails is beginning the spring season with a two-part course, "Nature with the Curious Young."

The course, which is free and open to the public, will take place on two consecutive Thursdays, March 12 and 19, from 10 to 11:30 a.m. in the Meeting Room of the public library. Winchester Trails volunteers will make presentations about five different environments commonly found at nature sites, and will discuss various methods of introducing different concepts to children.

The session planned for March 12, will include presentations on the microhabitat of a decaying log, with Louise Ahearn, and a brief study of rocks, with Jean Smith. The session scheduled for March 19 will include presentations on field and meadow, with Fran VerPlanck and Maggie Howard; marsh and pond, with Betty Vanderbilt; and the woodlands, with Sally Wund.

Each of these presentations will involve actual samples from local nature sites so that participants can handle and closely observe them. Questions, comments, and active participation by the audience will be encouraged. This "hands-on" approach is designed to help anyone interested in exploring nature with children. Winchester Trails guides, teachers, Scout leaders, and anyone interested in nature is warmly invited to attend. If a sufficient number of people are interested in attending an evening course, Winchester Trails volunteers will arrange a repeat of the various presentations for the convenience of working parents. Please call Betty Vanderbilt at 729-3144 for more information about the course, "Nature with the Curious Young."

Prop. 2½ Bites Max Ed At Winchester High

By JEANETTE PAMIR

To cut or not to cut — that is the proposal.

For eight years, Winchester High School has provided its students with an alternative to their standard courses: the Max-Ed program. This program, which is under the guidance of Diane Boettcher, annually places around 100 high school students in career internships within the school and around the community for one semester and 2.5 credits.

And now, with the arrival of Proposition 2.5, it is one of the programs that the School Committee is considering to eliminate from the high school curriculum next year.

Max-Ed grew out of the open campus idea in the early seventies. Its purpose was, and still is, to give students "a meaningful community option" to their regular courses and also training and experience in the job market, says Boettcher. Students would not only get a feel for the career but also would add a new depth and understanding in their schooling and education.

The range of possibilities to look into with Max-Ed programs are tremendous. Along with the programs that have been set up in previous years, such as those in business, medical, or journalism fields, students can also formulate their own individual programs. In the past, students have looked into and done everything from piano repair to apple farming to animal care.

Most of the students who have participated in Max-Ed courses were satisfied with them. In a survey of the course evaluations by the students for last semester, none of the participants rated the course below fair; the majority rated it very good and excellent. Not only does the program help students decide possible careers, whether they discover they love a field or cannot stand it, but it also provides their supervisors with young and inexpensive help.

Jay Finn, a Winchester insurance agent, is one such supervisor and is very pleased with the program.

"It's a fantastic program. It provides a good opportunity for both the students and the businessmen," Finn said they train the students from "top to bottom in everything." The agency shows them how to bookkeep, type different types of policies, write and read policies, and explain them to the customers.

David McKenney, a student who worked for Finn on Max-Ed last year, now works for Finn part time while he attends Bentley College. McKenney was interested in business and took the Max-Ed course "as something different" and is now still continuing his work there. He says, "I like what I'm doing."

Stephanie Sarno, who recently began the program this semester with Finn, also enjoys her work. "It's a break from the old courses and yet I'm learning just as much from it."

There are many business internships in town. Julie Barbarian worked with the College Marketing Group last semester, filing, writing letters, and coding information. Although some of what was going on was "a little hard to understand," Barbarian, who is interested in business as a career, said she was always learning and enjoyed the experience. This semester, Barbarian is taking another Max-Ed course, this time with the Probation Court in Woburn.

For some, like Linda Gurissi who has a business internship in the accounting department of Winchester Savings Bank, the experience is very positive. "It's more fun than I expected," Gurissi says it not only gives her "on the job experience" but adds, "I love it."

Others occasionally find the work "a little boring" and long. Valerie Ewing, who worked as a lab technician last semester at Winchester Hospital, said the three hours per week that she spent at work were long. Maybe two would have been better, she suggested. Ewing is interested in becoming a lab technician and said, "I liked the lab."

Eric Law, who worked with Arthur Sarno at the high school last semester, said he didn't have enough work to do. Law helped write programs and wants to pursue a career in the computer field. Max-Ed "was pretty good. It wasn't as good as it could be . . . they didn't need much done."

Blair Bradley, who is interested in architecture, says his Max-Ed course with Mr. Schoenegge gave him "more respect for the profession" and an idea of "what demands would be expected." He said the work gave him "the chance to be confronted with a problem" and he valued the challenge and experience.

Students who are interested in politics can arrange to work in political offices through Max-Ed. Leslie Keats worked in State Sen. Samuel Rotundi's office last semester. She helped the staff and whenever there wasn't anything for her to do, she said "we would sit in the House of Representatives and listen to debates." Max-Ed "was really, really good. It would be terrible if it is cut," she said.

Sarah Hunter helped teach first graders at the Lincoln School last semester under Mrs. Collins. She said her experience was "really worthwhile" and she looked forward to it. Hunter thought she wanted to teach first graders but now says she would perhaps prefer to teach second or third graders. Teaching first graders "brought me to reality. It's not so easy teaching and you don't always see the results."

Last semester Robert Tolentino worked with special needs children.

Tolentino, who plans to major in child psychology, said helping special needs children was a "great experience" and is still continuing his work this semester with the children, although not for credit. If the Max-Ed program were cut, he thinks "It would be a great loss."

"I hate to see it go. I think it's the only program at Winchester High School that helps a kid get a feel of what he or she wants to do," says Ann Howell of the Max-Ed Advisory Committee. "It makes them aware of the power and potential at the high school level."

She feels the program improves relations between high school students and the rest of the community and makes them "feel good about each other."

Six Local Students Nominated

U.S. Rep. Edward J. Markey has announced that six Winchester students have received nominations from his office to the U.S. Naval, Military, Air Force, and Merchant Marine Academies.

"This year's candidates for admission to the service academies are fine young men and women who have excelled academically, as well as in service to their communities," said Markey. "The strict guidelines established by my Service Academy Review Board to examine the students' credentials made competition for Congressional nominations keen," he added.

The Service Academy Review Board selected by Congressman Markey screened the candidates and made selections based on SAT scores, high school transcripts, extra-curricular activities, and athletic potential.

This year's board carefully reviewed each candidate and made fair decisions concerning the capabilities of each individual," Markey said.

A Congressional nomination is essential if a student is to be considered for admittance to West Point, Annapolis, the Air Force Academy or the Merchant Marine Academy.

The students are: David Guthrie, son of Dr. Andrew and Catherine Guthrie, of 54 Everett ave., has received a principal nomination to the U.S. Naval Academy. He is a senior at The Citadel in Charleston, S.C.

David Lawton, son of Frances and Mary Lawton, 111 Pond st., has also received a principal nomination to the U.S. Naval Academy. He is a senior at Winchester High School.

Christopher Harnett, son of Charles and Joan Harnett, 1 Lagrange st., has received an alternate nomination to the U.S. Air Force Academy. He is a senior at the Belmont Hill School.

James Fallon, son of John and Loret Fallon, 61 Hutchinson rd, has received a nomination to the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy. He is a senior at Winchester High School.

Christopher Porras, son of Salvador and Norma Porras, 8 Robinson cir. has received an alternate nomination to the U.S. Military Academy. He is a graduate of the Hebron Academy and is currently attending the U.S. Military Academy Prep School in New Jersey.

Eliot Gross, son of Dr. and Mrs. Brian Gross, 1 Webster st. has received an alternate nomination to the U.S. Naval Academy. He is a senior at the Buckingham, Browne, and Nichols School.

Church Slates Recital March 7

The Music Committee of the First Congregational Church has announced the recital program to be presented by the Winchester Music Society Saturday, March 7, at 8 p.m.

This will be the third event in the 1980-1981 Musicales series and will take place in the sanctuary of First Church on the Common. Eight members of the Society will perform vocal and instrumental compositions from the Baroque and the Romantic periods as well as the 20th century.

Opening the concert will be Allen Hill playing a Baroque flute, accompanied on the organ by John Skelton, in a piece entitled Trisonata in D, written by J.J. Quantz in the mid-eighteenth century.

This will be followed by some Biblical Songs of Anton Dvorak, sung by Lori Lerman, Soprano, accompanied by pianist Kathleen Weaverling. John Willis, Jr. will then perform Claude Debussy's Four Preludes, which are considered quite characteristic of this famous impressionistic composer.

After a brief intermission, Robert Bousquet and Carole Davidson will perform the Sonata for Oboe and Piano by Paul Hindemith, written in 1938. The final offering will be the Prelude and Fugue in e minor by J.S. Bach, played by organist Elizabeth Durfee Hengen.

Following the performance an informal reception will enable members of the audience to meet with the artists.

Tickets are available at Henderson's Stationers and the church office, and will be sold at the door March 7. Regular admission $3.50, Students and Senior Citizens $2.50.

Fellowship Set

Paul and Mona Johnian will be holding their weekly interdenominational Christian Fellowship at the Jenks Centre this Monday, March 9, at 7:30.

Foreign cosmetology is an exotic titilating mystery... a hedonistic delight that would gratify Cleopatra.

I peered apprehensively into a mirror.... there was no transformation, no miracle.

A European Facial: Fantasy Versus Reality

By ROBIN WIEST
Star Reporter-Intern

There is something about the lore of European beauty techniques which sparks the imagination.

Foreign cosmetology is an exotic, titilating mystery and even the humblest dreamer can envision a hedonistic delight that would gratify Cleopatra. I've always pictured foreign beauty boudoirs filled with exotic, heady perfumes and fine-textured Moroccan mudpacks managed by tight-lipped, thin, moustachioed Frenchmen who speak fluent highbrow and do everything but anoint your feet with oil.

So in search of wanton luxury and dizzy with preconceptions, I walked into the Main Street salon of Scruples, a relatively new hair salon where esthetician James Olivadoti performs his rendition of the European facial.

Shortly after I arrived, Olivadoti faded into the spacious hair salon where two brightly-dressed women snipped away on clients. He wore a white lab coat over a pale blue silk shirt, unbuttoned to reveal a gold shark's tooth on a chain.

With a soothing voice and manipulative direct eye contact, he ushered me through a very narrow but brightly lit room. A tall canvas director's chair sat in front of a room-length mirror and a ledge strewn with an array of shiny cases, pots, pencils and bottles of muted-color make-up. Tucked away at the end of this hall was the room in which the facial was to take place. It was no bigger than a doctor's examining room.

The boudoir fantasy faded. Fast.

An over-stuffed recliner, which sat prominently in the center, took up most of the precious space. It was covered with a clean white sheet and clean, rough, white towels were draped over the back.

"You'll have to take off your shirt," the soothing voice said. I flashed him my most significant, questioning, but unflustered glance while inching my way inauspiciously to the door.

"And put on one of these smocks," he added, taking, I believe, graceful pleasure in my loss of composure.

The elongated peasant top was crude and loose-fitting. As ordered, I removed my shoes and jewelry.

The room seemed cool, but most of all, clinical. What was intended to be a fanciful indulgence seemed like serious business.

Maybe beauty spa Clientel aren't all glamorous people to begin with, but why would anyone subject themselves to all these mirrors unless they thought so?

I looked up to where my blouse and sweater hung innocently on a wire hanger on the closet door. With a drawn-out sigh, I sank into that marvelous, white-sheeted cloud of an arm chair, eased back, lifted my feet and reclined.

The ever-courteous Olivadoti covered the chair and me with a soft beige blanket. I was drifting off into the dreams of the spoiled when Jim, now sitting cross-legged in a red chair, asked me if I drank an abundance of beverages loaded with caffeine. Did I get enough sleep? Have a stressful job?

Was he implying that my skin is not of the optimum?

He then recited a stream of biological facts about skin, noting the ins and outs of pore care and purifying procedures. I wasn't sitting in the office of one of the beauty industry's flim-flam men. This man is a scientist, a micro-analyst of the dermis. It may have been his starched-white lab coat, or the antiseptic whiteness of the room, or the white heat warming my forehead from a movable lamp clamped somewhere beside the chair, but the situation evoked trust and I wanted to offer my face up for salvage.

The meticulous specialist flattened back my hair and secured it with a turban. I relaxed and rolled my head to the right coming face-to-face with a cold, chrome orb with an opening that stared at me — a rather obtrusive metal fist that jutted from behind the recliner and into my face. Meet the steam machine.

Olivadoti delicately placed two cotton pads over my eyes and turned on the curious contraption. The vapor bathed my face with its warm, thick mist and the soft damp blast caused droplets of precipitation to collect, pause and then trickle down my neck and shoulders. The effect was intoxicatingly disarming.

I surreptitiously lifted the eye pads with my lashes. The esthetician was busying himself around his white cart laden with cotton balls, lotions, Q-tips, gauze, Vaseline and other sundries. He was whipping up some potion in a cup.

I felt a twinge of nostalgic sadness as he switched off the vaporizer, but the warmth was replaced by that of an architect's lamp maneuvered to spotlight my face. Using a thin tissue, Jim delicately absorbed the droplets, now growing cool, from my face. Such precision. Such grace.

With two round natural sponges, he cleansed the skin with a frothy, milk-like substance and followed with the application of a clear astringent which smelled like beauty salon perfume and felt tight and cool. The sensation was reminiscent of emulating father's morning routine with a brisk slap of Aqua Velva to the cheeks.

Olivadoti brought the light down closer to my face and then carefully removed the eye cottons leaving little fibers webbed between the lashes.

I laid in my soft throne, relaxed, soothed, satisfied. Then his precision hands moved into the pore-cleansing process. It was a squeezing, scraping procedure which brought tears to my eyes. But it is necessary, I was told, to alleviate blackheads (which, by the way, victimize 90 percent of the population).

Then he pulled out the ray gun. Beauty spas too have surrendered to high technology. Move over you heady, intoxicating potions, now we have high frequency machines to kill sebaceous bacteria and germs in the skin.

A pink and black contraption no bigger than a clock radio sat on a table behind the steam machine. Out of the side of the machine a long black coil attached to a thin glass wand with a bulb on the end. When turned on, a beautiful lavender ray flowed through the glass toward the tip which sparked and sputtered when it made contact with the skin. The latest in battling the blemish. With the steady grip of a surgeon, he touched the wand to my face in a few choice points. I felt the shock you receive when you walk across a new shag carpet and pass mild electricity through your fingertips to a bystander's arm.

Finally, the massage. No doubt the most luxurious sensation in existence. With light sesame oil, he firmly encircled my eyes, forehead, cheeks and, with broader strokes, massaged under my chin and across my shoulders. It was all done without taking his hands away from my face from the moment he commenced. The continuous, purposeful movement was such that I could feel the texture of the hands and fingerprints. All 28 of my facial muscles have never been so numbly at ease.

The hour-long facial was polished off with a mask of zinc. I looked like a mime with the opaque white cream, now drying and taut, lathered on my face.

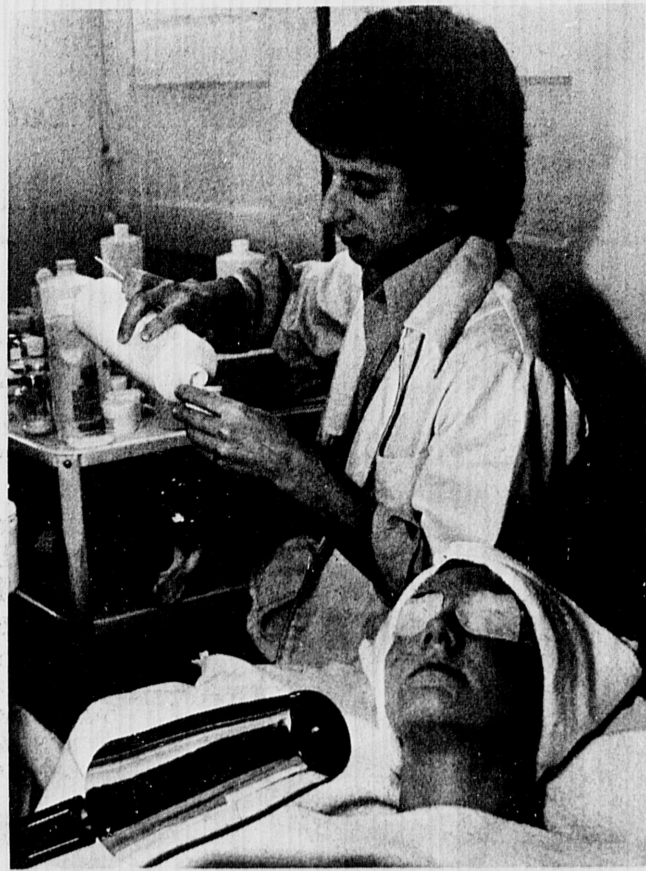

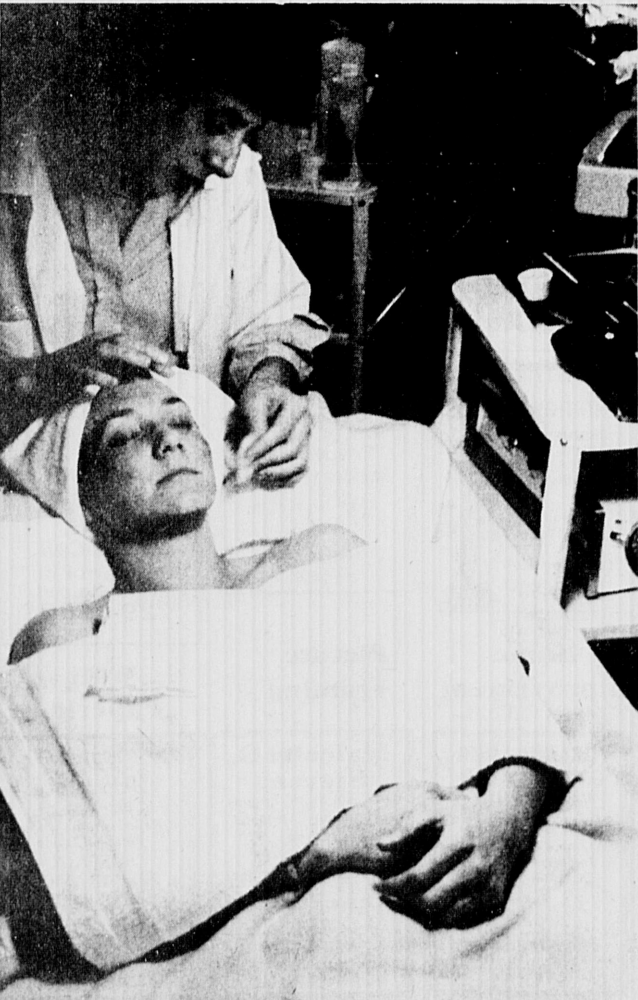

Once the mask and all the extras — towel, headpiece and cotton eyepatches — were removed, I peered apprehensively into a slender, white hand mirror.

There was no transformation, no miracle. But my face felt clinically clean, relaxed, and so smooth it seemed to have a different texture.

The esthetician folded up the white hand towels like a boxer's manager after a successful fight.

Good show.

Local Author's Book Eyes Theatre

Some books take six months to write, others take two or three years.
"This one took my whole life, really," says Peter Arnott of Winchester, chairman of Tufts University's drama department and author of a new 566-page college textbook, "The Theater in Its Time."
He smiles, as if to acknowledge the appearance of an overstatement in those words, then explains, "The book is really the summation of the lectures that I have given and the other books that I have written throughout my entire career, and my practical experience in the theater for more than 30 years."
The book, released in mid-February by Little, Brown, is a history of the theater, bringing the reader from drama's earliest known roots to contemporary musical comedy and community theater and encompassing virtually everything around and in between.
"I hope, however," Arnott said, "that it is not merely a history of theater, but a philosophy of theater—why it existed and why it should have existed. I have tried to answer the why questions as well as the how and what questions."
In his attempt to answer the why questions, Arnott places his emphasis, as the title of the book suggests, on looking at theater not as an isolated discipline, but in the context of the various societies in which it has existed.
In writing about the English "cycle plays," for example, he attempts to evoke the feelings of the times by providing illustrations of the guild halls and chapels of ancient York, while in the section on Roman drama he selected a photo of a mosaic illustrating a Nile expedition to show "the Romans' love for the exotic."
Throughout the book appear photos of reconstructions of ancient theaters and of historically accurate productions of old dramas and comedies, intended to help the reader envision the physical contexts in which the plays were originally performed.

"Reconstructions are so much better than sketches because they give the reader a tie-in with practical reality," says Arnott, who shot many of the photos himself during a two-month tour of England last summer. In all, more than 170 illustrations are provided, including pictures of performances ranging from Tufts Summer Theater shows to original Stanislavsky productions at the Moscow Art Theater.
Among the diverse aspects of the theater that Arnott has chosen to highlight in retelling its history are its relationship with liturgy and with politics, the effect of movies on the living stage, and women's place on the stage.
There is abundant commentary on the technical aspects of theater throughout the centuries, as well as sections on actors' unions, on showboats, wild west shows, minstrel shows and burlesque shows, on black theater and on numerous individual playwrights.
Arnott has worked in the professional and college theaters since the 1940s, as an actor, director, professor, author and puppeteer. Before coming to Tufts in 1969, he taught for 10 years at the University of Iowa. An English native, he holds a B.A. degree from Oxford University and B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Wales, and is widely known for his expertise in Greek theater. "The Theater in Its Time" is his 26th book.
And his 27th won't be far behind.
"They've already approached me to write a shorter version of this same book, for survey courses that do not take such an in-depth approach," he confides, adding with a weary but satisfied laugh, "Just when you think the work is over, it starts again."

Barones Attend GOP Press Talk

Dr. and Mrs. William D. Barone attended the press conference recently observing Senator William Owens' "switching" from the Democratic to the Republican Party. The affair was held at the Parker House and was attended by Republicans and many Democrats as well.
Owens, a resident of Mattapan, was the first black to be elected to the Massachusetts Senate and the highest ranking black Democrat in the state today.

He is now serving his fourth term. His decision to change his registration was especially important to the Republicans as he becomes the eighth Republican in the body, therefore allowing that Party to force the Senate to vote by roll-call, a privilege denied them for some time.
The Barones also attended a reception for Senator Owens at the Engineers' Club in the Prudential Feb. 27.

Gary Errico

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

He reacted the same way he did during the football season when he scored 15 touchdowns, including the winner over those hated Tanners.

No big deal. He reacted the same way he did during the dual match wrestling season in which he recorded 13 consecutive pins.

No big deal. So it shouldn't have come as any surprise that when he beat Woburn's Keith McLaughlin Saturday to win the state title at the 170-pound class he reacted with his usual aplomb. No big deal.

But it was a big deal and although Errico didn't show it through exuberant leaps into the air or other such emotional outbursts, he admitted as much after suffering through a barrage of photo requests to pose with his mother, his coach, his girlfriend.

"It was worth it," he said, breaking into a grin. "This was my last chance."

The last chance. The senior had to face the top seed in his first match in the magnificent Lowell High School Athletic facility Friday and he walked away an 11-4 winner.

He then had to dispose of Middlesex League nemesis, Doug Green of Melrose, in the semi-finals Saturday afternoon and he held on for an 8-3 win in the most grueling, physical match of the afternoon.

Then it was McLaughlin, a Woburn sophomore who Errico had beaten twice this season, for the championship. And, fittingly, it took until the 1:57 mark of the final period to determine a winner when Errico stung McLaughlin with a takedown to claim a 5-3 victory and a state championship.

First-year Coach Larry Tremblay, who turned a 5-9 team into an 11-5 surprise, credited Errico's desire for the win as being the deciding factor. But memories of last year's state finals,

Laurie Glynn

To an outsider, to someone who didn't know Laurie Glynn, the fact that she won a state Division II title in the mile as a freshman would seem remarkable.

The fact that her win was greeted with little fanfare would seem downright phenomenal.

But that's exactly what happened after Glynn knocked three seconds off the state record in the mile (Division II) on her way to winning her first interscholastic state title last Friday at the Commonwealth Armory. She finished 12 seconds ahead of Danvers' Maureen Connors with a time of 5:00.2.

"She broke a state record which is unheard of as a freshman," her Coach Tom Kline said, but added that she should not be confused with just "any" freshman. "She's run in a lot of outside meets, a lot of outside races. There was no question that I thought she would do it. Just meeting her there I knew I didn't have to say anything but, 'Hi, Laurie, how are you?' Just from her spilling that type of confidence I knew. That's something you don't beat," Kline said of Glynn's mental toughness Friday.

Glynn shrugged off her performance as just another day at the races. "I should have broken five minutes," she said later. "I had a really bad start. I had heard the boys would be booed if they had one false start and I thought it would be the same for us so I was really nervous and I was staying on the line at the start," the 15-year-old Churchill rd. resident said.

But if Glynn was nervous about getting beat by a false start, the same could not be said for her competition. At least by Glynn's standards. "The competition really wasn't there," Glynn said. "I actually had more competition in the league meet with Gail Saunders," she added, referring to her league rival from Reading.

But Saunders was running and breaking a record in the 1000 and last year's champ in the mile, Chrissy Kelley

(Glynn - Page 18)

Kathy Durante

When Kathy Durante arrived at Boston University's Commonwealth Armory Friday night for the state track meet she was sure she would have to throw at least 40 feet for the first time to even stay close to the leaders.

So you can imagine her surprise when about halfway through the competition the best throw had been 38 feet. Add to that the absence of Hyde Park's Sadie Washington and Durante knew a state title was hers for the taking.

"This really was a surprise," the senior said after her throw of 38-9 and three-quarters gave her the Division II state title. "The girl that had planned on beating me came late so Sadie Washington couldn't compete. Then I saw the best throw had been 38 feet. If I had lost a state title with that I would have been pretty upset," Durante laughed.

When the preliminary competition had been completed Friday, things weren't exactly looking rosy for the Winchester High honor student. She was seeded fifth out of seven shot putters after her best throw had stretched out to just 36 feet, six inches. It was far short of her season's best of 39-1.

"I was a little bit upset after that," she explained. "I thought I was going to choke the whole meet."

And after last year, that would have been especially grating on the tall, dark haired senior. "Last year I came in fifth. There was a girl that could throw 48 feet. So I knew I didn't have much of a chance of winning then," she laughed after her victory.

Her coach, Tom Kline knew his shot putter had the ability but thought she would have to produce a personal high in the event to walk away a winner.

"I felt that she had the potential to win," Kline said. "But I thought she would have to go over 40 feet. She definitely has the ability to do it. Physically she has a lot of talent, she's very mobile," Kline added.

(Durante - Page 18)

The Waiting Game

It is not one of those activities normally associated with words like grace, coordination and intelligence.

Mental toughness? Come on, we're talking about wrestling. Bruno, Killer and the guys. Fat, grunt and sweat are words that more rapidly come to mind when discussing wrestling.

But Bruno, Killer and the other guys aside, competitive wrestling, not carnival wrestling, is probably as tough a combination of physical and mental endurance as any sporting endeavor.

Just spend the day watching the best high school wrestlers in the state and thoughts of Bruno and friends bouncing each other off the ropes quickly leave.

If you walked into the Lowell High School gym Saturday shortly after noontime you would have been struck by the fact that while eight boys were wrestling, about another 50 or so were lounging around.

Some were stretching, some were sitting talking to their coach or people of similar ilk. Some just laid there, looking blankly at the ceiling. Many would not wrestle for about two or even three hours.

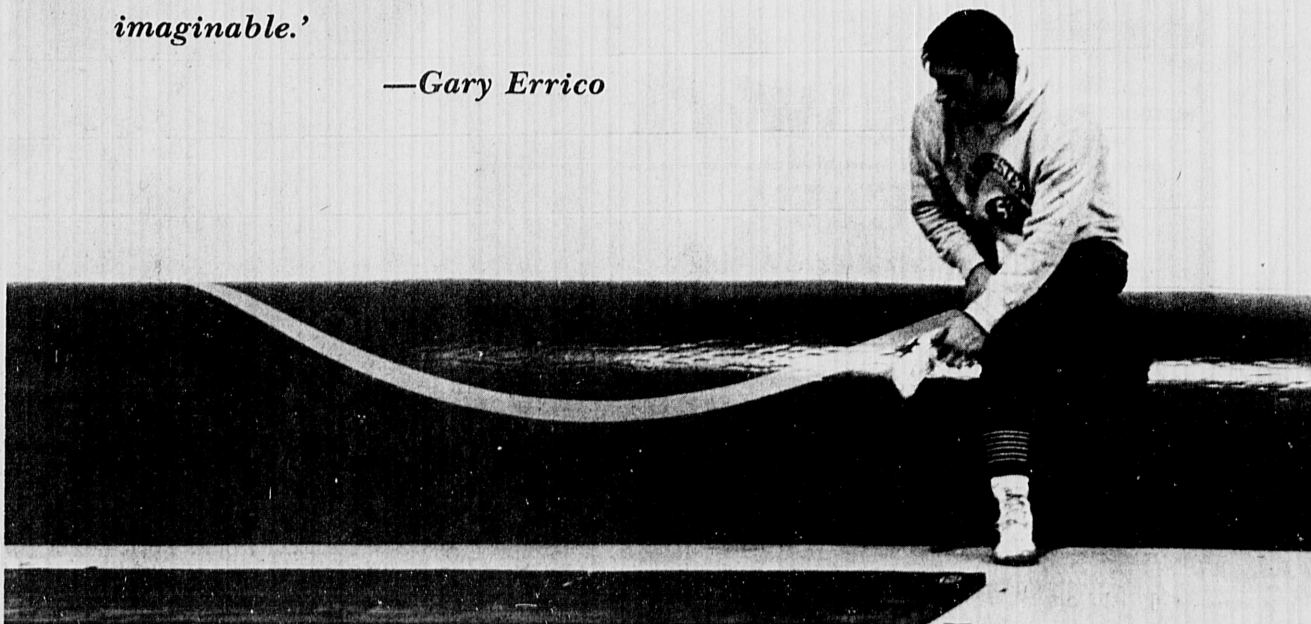

Gary Errico had arrived shortly after 11 a.m. to weigh in for the 170-pound competition. Because he won both his matches on Friday he was rewarded with a more than four hour wait until he wrestled again on Saturday.

At about 2:15 he is leaning against a wall, legs crossed Indian style, all by himself. He will not wrestle for over another hour where which he lost in overtime, didn't exactly detract from his motivation.

"He had lost in overtime in the finals last year to (Randy) DeRosa on a referee's criteria. I think with McLaughlin just a sophomore Gary wanted a little more than than he did," Tremblay said.

But McLaughlin wasn't in much of a giving mood. The two battled through a scoreless first period. McLaughlin narrowly escaped getting pinned early in the second period before the two traded two-pointers. They each added another point through escapes and headed into the last minute tied at three.

It stayed that way, of course, until the final three seconds when Errico executed the take-down to walk off with Winchester's first state championship since John McKenna did it in 1964-65.

"It was one of the most exciting matches in the tournament and I'm not saying that just because it was Gary. I think there was just a little mental lapse at the end by McLaughlin," Tremblay said.

Tremblay, who admitted it was a big moment for him as well, to coach his first state champion, added that the 170 class was definitely the toughest in the tournament.

"There are a lot of good coaches here and a lot of good wrestlers," Tremblay said before Errico took on McLaughlin. "This is the toughest weight class, easy. This year is no fluke, it's not like last year. Last year Gary had three dual meet losses during the season and last year's champ, DeRosa of Reading had eight losses this season."

Tremblay also thought that Errico's loss in last week's sectional tournament to Wellesley's Jim Rodgers drove out whatever overconfidence Errico might have possessed.

"I thought that was the best thing that could have happened to him," Tremblay said. "Otherwise he would have come in here as the Number One seed and would have been cocky. It's better it happened then than now."

Errico, who was the seventh seed, opened the tournament with a quick pin of Norwood's Jeff McNamara to set up a showdown with the top seed, Putnam (Springfield) Vocational School's Phil Servantez.

Servantez opened a quick 2-0 lead before Errico resorted to "his" move, the Peterson Roll for a four-pointer and a lead he would never relinquish. Errico knew nothing about Servantez but heeded Tremblay's advice to unveil the Peterson Roll, a move designed to spring the man on the bottom back on top.

"I couldn't take too many chances because we didn't really know anything about him," Errico said. "But the coach told me to use it because in the western part of the state they don't really work on that move," he added.

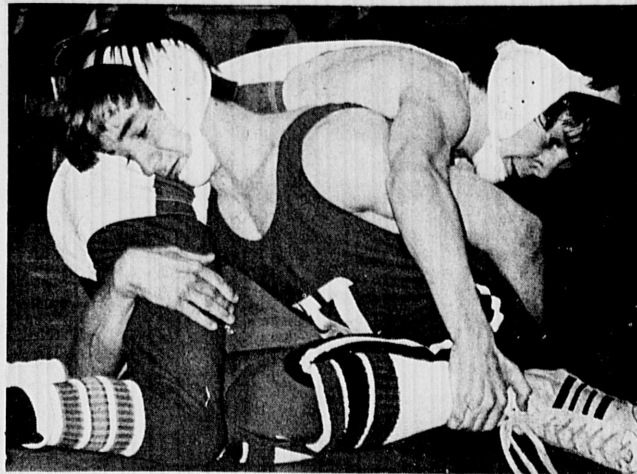

And, sure enough, it was successful. That sent Errico into the semi-finals where he was joined by a number of familiar faces. Three of the four semi-finalists were Middlesex Leaguers and Errico had to beat both before he could be lay claim to a state title.

Melrose's Doug Green was the opposition in the semis and although Errico had beaten him in the consolation round of the Lowell Tourney, 5-4, it didn't mean all that much. The consolation matches had consisted of three one minute matches, not the two minute periods that was scheduled for Saturday.

Errico jumped out to a 7-1 lead and held on in a physical match for an 8-3 win. Green was the aggressor for most of the last two periods and Errico was penalized for stalling in the final period that gave Green his third point but by then it was too late.

"I knew it was going to be tough and Gary knew when to take the injury timeout," Tremblay smiled. "He wrestled smart."

But that didn't take anything away from Errico's achievement. Tremblay said. "If you jump out to a 4-0 lead like that then the other kid has to play catch-up. I told Gary you've got to get the first take-down and he did. I talked to Green afterwards and he told me he couldn't do anything with him, he was too strong," Tremblay said.

ALL TIED UP - Winchester's Ed Welch (bottom) and Framingham South's David Whalen tie each other up during the state meet last week in Lowell. Whalen recorded a decision victory, eliminating Welch from the competition after he had notched two wins. (Staff Photo By Noreen Murphy)

That, of course, led to the tense title match and assured Errico a high seed in Saturday's New England Championships in Nashua, N.H. Tremblay, for one, wouldn't be the least bit surprised if Act

IV of the Errico-McLaughlin duel was reenacted.

"Massachusetts is usually the toughest state in the region so he could hit McLaughlin in the finals again," Tremblay said.

That possibility was greeted wearily by Errico. "This was the third time," he said after Saturday's win. "And he's got closer each time."

Gibbons, Welch Win Pair

Gary Errico wasn't the only Winchester representative in last weekend's state championships at Lowell and although Ed Welch and Tom Gibbons didn't come away with titles, they performed well.

Each split their four matches and Coach Larry Tremblay came away with high hopes for the two junior wrestlers.

"I was really impressed with Gibbons. He wrestled one hell of a second half of the year. And Ed Welch has got all the tools to be a great wrestler," Tremblay added.

Welch opened the Winchester scoring with a second period pin of Needham's Dan Pogorele. Lowell's Paul Noel handed him a 2-0 setback before Welch rebounded in the consolation bracket by blanking Steve Blacker of Randolph, 5-0.

But Welch then had to go up against Framingham South's David Whalen, a wrestler who had beat him in the sectionals the week before. And this time wasn't any different.

Gibbons met a similar fate after bouncing back from an opening match defeat. Gino Pillard of North Quincy sent Gibbons into the consolation bracket.

But Gibbons fought off early elimination in the second round when he topped Woburn's Fabio Piergenti.

at Harvard. So she decided she'd take a crack at the 1000, an event she had never run before.

"I had run in the State Coaches meet Friday and this was Sunday, just two days later and I didn't feel like running a mile so soon. So I just went into it like a joke. Everyone said I was the slow one," Glynn laughed.

Needless to say, she won. A freshman? Sure.

height and strength. Durante's coordination and quickness are better suited to the discus and javelin, events that require those traits.

But for now, Durante is just looking forward to the Easterns Saturday night at Harvard (starting at 5:45) where she hopes to accomplish two goals.

"This is the first time I've ever been to this meet," Durante said. "First, I'd just like to beat some of the other kids in Massachusetts. Plus I'd like to throw 40 feet. The coach had been kind of hoping for a 40-foot throw Saturday (in the states)," she said.

The coach has a little different recollection of the situation.

"She promised me that 40-foot throw before the spring," he laughed earlier this week. "But I know it's just a matter of time for her to put it all together."

When reminded of her "promise," Durante laughed nervously.

"Well, I guess I better throw it 40 then."

for six minutes he'll pound and be pounded by another individual of equal size who also has had all afternoon to think about this one six-minute stretch.

"I remember once when I had to wait seven hours before I wrestled again," Errico says with a shake of his head. "When you have this much time you think about everything. You go through just about every emotion imaginable," Errico said.

After Errico defeats Doug Green of Melrose he then is the recipient of what turns out to be almost a six-hour supper break before wrestling Woburn's Keith McLaughlin for the third time this season. Only this time it will be for the state championship.

Plenty of time for every emotion imaginable.

"The best thing to do is to get out of the gym," says Winchester Coach Larry Tremblay, who has wrestled competitively for 12 years, including a few at Springfield College in which he was named to the All America team. "The best strategy is to try and get away. That's what I always tried to do. You drain yourself just watching wrestling all day. I used to try and catch a nap or go down to the lockerroom, take a shower and get into street clothes and just take a walk."

It is a popular misconception that wrestling is a sport of pure strength, not speed, not intelligence, not endurance.

"A lot of people think that wrestling is just a brute sport," Tremblay said. "And sure, strength is important. But it's a lot more than that. Technique is the big thing," he added.

Another big thing is the ability to listen to instruction while someone has a forearm in the back of your neck, squashing your face into a rubber mat that can tend to harden by the second.

"The longer you are in the sport the more you hear. Some of my freshmen don't hear anything even if I yell until I'm blue in the face. But others, and Gary is one of them, hears everything I say," Tremblay said.

Asst. Coach Ted Neill marvels at Errico's ability to listen to every word Tremblay will say during a match. "I talked with him after he won (the states) Saturday and he relayed, almost word for word, what the coach had been telling him," Neill said, adding that Tremblay's instruction as time wound down and Errico and McLaughlin were tied at 3, left a bit to be desired.

"When we were talking afterwards Gary remembers when there was about 1:15 left and coach was talking to him," Neill said. "Coach told me, 'Come on, you are a senior, you want it more than he does. Now you need a takedown to win, you need a takedown,'" he remembers Errico telling him.

By then there were less than 10 seconds left and the two were still tied. Neill laughs and remembers what Errico told him next. "Coach was telling me, 'you need a takedown,' but Coach never told me how to get the takedown. I got confused. How was I supposed to do it?" Errico told Neill afterwards.

Well, of course, he did do it with three seconds left on the clock.

That win assures Errico a high seed in Saturday's New England championships in Nashua, N.H. Tremblay said he plans on picking him up at 7 a.m. so they'll get there in time for the weigh-ins that start at 7:30.

Then he'll have to wait until 9:30 before the wrestling actually starts. But that will be the lighter weights. What it will finally end up being is, for the winner, 18 minutes of wrestling to claim a New England championship.

Simple enough, except it will probably be at least 10 hours before it will all be over.

Emotional.

★ Glynn

of Westwood was on the sidelines with tendinitis problems in her knee. And the state's premier miler, Lisa Welch of Peabody, was running to a Division I state title in the mile.

When Glynn says the competition in the state meet was weak, don't mistake her for being the boastful sort. She is simply a phenomenal runner.

Track and Field News ranked her as the sixth best miler in high school in the nation. The same magazine has ranked her third in the 1000. Laurie Glynn a freshman? In name only, for sure.

"She's been at it a few years now," her mother, Jane, said, explaining that she has been running out of the prestigious Liberty Athletic Club of Lexington for the past three years. "You could probably go down the list of all the kids that did well (in the states) and they all go there," she said.

But that doesn't totally explain why this just turned 15-year-old is so far ahead of her peers. And the main reason is, as corny as it sounds, hard work and just plain old competitiveness.

"She's an achiever," her mother says. "She's not happy unless she gets high honors in school and she's very mature about her running. She is just very self-motivating."

Kline seconds that assessment. "I don't claim any responsibility for her success," he insisted. "What makes her the runner she is is that she's a competitor. She knows what she has to do and she is willing to pay the price for it. She's always in the top three runners. When you are always running with the best then you build up confidence that you are the best. It's a distinct advantage that she has over a lot of other runners," Kline said.

Glynn credits her racing experience at the Liberty AA and the increasing competition with her 12-year-old brother Robbie for making her the superb runner she is.

"I have as much experience as anyone in races and that helps a lot coming into high school," the shy, slender, dark-haired runner said. "Some kids have done a lot of running on their own but not in races."

But she doesn't suffer from a lack of motivation when she's not running at Liberty. "I always have my brother run with me and that's what motivates me, my brother," she laughed. "I've got to keep him down while I can." And that's something, according to Mom, that won't be for much longer. But that doesn't mean Laurie isn't improving either.

This weekend Glynn should have little trouble finding suitable competition. She'll be competing in the Easterns at Harvard Saturday and the race will feature the best high school runners from the entire East Coast. That includes Lisa Welch, who ran a 4:49.7 mile in the states last week. "This will be good com-

★ Durante

Kline has been a fan of Durante's since she came onto the Winchester High track scene two years ago as just a sophomore. She was originally competing as a high jumper until the call went out for somebody who could throw the shot. Anyone.

Durante volunteered and has competed in the event ever since. Kline is not surprised she has done well.

"She goes across the circle very smoothly. She's very well coordinated for her size," Kline said. "This season she spent a lot of time on her own working out. She got to the point where she could analyze herself and determine what she should do and what she shouldn't do. And that's something that's not easy to do. It's not like running," Kline added.

Another factor that has brought out the best in Durante this year, Kline maintained, was her partner in the shot put, Joanne Burke.

"She and Joanne Burke worked well together," Kline said. I thought she helped Joanne and Joanne helped Kathy. I think Joanne really pushed Kathy. They're both competitors and it's been enjoyable working with both of them," Kline said.

Although Durante has now attained her highest honors in the shot, Kline said her best performances may be yet to come this spring, when she takes up where she left off last year in the discus and javelin.

And Durante is eagerly anticipating picking up where she left off last year when she began toying with the discus. She believes that could be her best event.

"I'd like to concentrate mostly on the discus because I was working on it a lot last year," Durante said. I think I'm built more like a discus thrower than the shot. I've got the long arms," she said.

Kline agrees her best performances may be in both the discus and javelin because of her quickness and agility. The shot, Kline says, requires basically

CAR CARE CORNER

Mario Scenna, Serv. Mgr.

It's a cold, damp, nasty day and the car keeps stalling — but then after a few seconds, it'll start again. Water in the fuel, most probably — either from condensation or from a bad lot of fuel the oil company laid on poor of George. What happens is that on cold, rainy days, the water in the fuel freezes, when it vaporizes in the carb, clogging everything with ice crystals — until the warmth of the inert engine melts it out, letting the engine start again. Your best bet here is just to get a can of gas-line antifreeze at any gas station and pour it in the tank. It'll take a few miles to start working, but finally it'll have its effect and you'll have no more trouble. Next time you gas up, buy another can and pour it in the tank to take care of any remaining moisture.

The Winchester Pee Wee AA's came back from a four-goal first period hole to tie Lexington-Bedford, 6-6 with four unanswered goals. It was the Chris Giso Show, Part II as Chris had a big four goal, one assist night.

In the first period hard skating Mike White picked up a rebound, deked one skater and caught the goalie out of his net for an easy one. Table setters were Brian Griffin and Scotty Paine.

Giso cranked up on the next four with the first coming as he roared in off the right wing and put it over the goalie's pad on the short side after being sent in by Brian Griffin and Pete Regan. The next came on the power play when Chris popped it over a downed goalie with Regan and Nick Geannaris assisting. Griffin caught Giso in front next and he popped it in the upper corner with the other assist going to Derek Binding. Number four was a big one as Chris blocked a clearing pass and sped down the slot and blasted one to the upper corner. Sukjung Chung and Pete Cote assisted.

Pete Regan got the tie when he triggered a short side blast from the right wing off a Giso Griffin combine.

Merchant's Corner

Any available prescription drug or hard-to-find pharmaceuticals can be easily found at Cradock Apothecary, with locations in Winchester and Medford. Three Winchester brothers own the stores and a wide selection of products are their claim to fame.

"If it's made, we have it!" said Robert Surabian, one of the three Surabian brothers who own Cradock Apothecary at 22 Church St. and at 44 High St. in Medford.

Since 1934 when George Surabian Sr. opened the store in Medford, Cradock Apothecary has maintained a traditional small-town pharmacy atmosphere with discount prescription prices. "We have all the friendliness of a small town store but still carry the discounts that Oso Drug and CVS have," said Robert Surabian.

The atmosphere at Cradock's is nothing short of friendly. Customers are greeted by first name as they shop through the spacious aisles that are stocked with a large, colorful selection of cosmetics, fragrances, Hallmark cards, gift candy, health aids, medical supplies, brand-name and low-priced generic drugs, Timex watches, and colostomy supplies.

Cradock Apothecary also does a large volume of prescription business with individuals, hospitals, and nursing homes. It is a retail pharmacy as well as a hospital and surgical supply company.

Cradock Apothecary is not your ordinary run-of-the-mill drug store. "We carry one of the largest prescription inventories in the East!" exclaimed George Surabian Jr. The Medford store keeps seven registered pharmacists on duty at all times and the Winchester store employs two. Both stores boast immediate availability of all the newest drugs.

Cradock's carries anything and everything needed to make the home-confined invalid more comfortable. Customers may choose from a wide selection of wheel chairs, supports and sick room supplies.

The needs of the sick and disabled are a serious matter at Cradock's and both stores offer free pick-up and delivery service of prescriptions to all customers. Both stores also employ full-time registered male and female orthopedic fitters.

George Surabian Sr. opened Cradock Apothecary in Medford in 1934. His large portrait hangs proudly on the wall of the Medford store which is the only independent drug store in Medford Square.

By 1962, many of the Medford customers had moved to Winchester so the Surabians opened up the store on Church St. This April, the Winchester store will celebrate its twentieth birthday.

The Surabian brothers relate stories of frustrated people who have unsuccessfully searched everywhere for products only to finally locate them at Cradock's. "They should come here first," said Surabian. "We're the complete one-stop pharmacy!"

SHOULD YOU PAY OFF MORTGAGE?

If your mortgage is 15 or more years old, it's tempting to clear up the debt if you have the money available. But before you run to the bank for the money, take a second look. Chances are you might be better off to keep the mortgage and put the prepayment cash in savings or securities. With the mortgage that is old, the interest you'd get from the savings would probably be not too far apart. With the right investment, you might even get a higher rate of return. The advantage is that you have a cash reserve while still earning almost as much, if not more than you would save by paying off the debt.

And don't forget the tax breaks on the mortgage loan. You can deduct mortgage interest which, in effect, reduces the amount of interest you pay. How much? If your original loan rate was 8 percent and you fall into the 25 percent bracket, your mortgage really costs you six percent.

Questions Answered

"What do you do when your newt's tail falls off?"

Just phone the Reference desk in the Winchester Junior Library and they'll have the answer; at least that's what one child thought.

One generally thinks of calling the Adult Department for information; they get questions like what do you have on an association to help burros lost in Arizona valley or the amount of calcium in milk or the address for channel 12 in Providence.

Who would think that the Junior Library would be asked, "There is a red spot on Jupiter. In which direction does it face?"

According to Jean Twitchell, Head of Children's Services, school reports are big, especially those dealing with Central America, the Caribbean, and South American countries. Questions are for very detailed information such as population, shelter, food, clothing, painting and sculpture.

Anyone have a disease? Ask a third-grader, they know all about them, judging from the demand for information, such as "Do you have a whole book on measles?"

When the Winton Club scene painter needed a picture of an ice cave, he came to the Junior Library. A church, planning a Shrove Tuesday pancake breakfast, had someone wanting to know the tradition of this affair.

Some young tot is looking forward to spring. His question: "What animals lives under apple trees?"

Red Cross Celebrates

March is designated Red Cross month each year by Presidential proclamation but 1981 is a special year, announced Mary Fowle, Chairperson of the Winchester Red Cross Board of Directors.

This year marks the Centennial of the American National Red Cross. It is also the 60th anniversary of the chartering of the Winchester Chapter. To mark these years of humanitarian service, the Chapter will hold a series of events over the next several months.

These events will include the March Membership Campaign, the regularly scheduled blood-drives, additional CPR and First Aid training programs, an Open House late in March, a short history of the Chapter, participation in Red Cross Night at the Pops in May and exhibits of Red Cross memorabilia. Dates and sites will be announced following the Winter meeting of the Board of Directors.

That meeting will also re-affirm the dedication of the Chapter to providing quality service to the people of Winchester. That service is based on the mission of the American Red Cross. That mission is to help carry out the obligations assumed by the United States under several international treaties known as the Geneva or Red Cross Conventions.

Specifically, its Congressional Charter imposes on the American Red Cross the duties to act as the medium of voluntary relief and communication between the American people and their armed forces, and to carry on a system of national and international relief to prevent and mitigate suffering caused by disasters. All the activities of the Red Cross and its chapters support these duties. Nationally and locally the American Red Cross is governed by volunteers, most of its services are performed by volunteers and it is financed solely by voluntary contributions and not by the Federal Government.

Founded in May 1881, the American Red Cross was the result of the vision and determination of Clara Barton, a Civil War Nurse. Originally a Massachusetts school teacher, she moved to Washington D.C. and became the first woman clerk at the U.S. Patent Office. When war broke out, she again defied precedent to nurse injured soldiers at the front.

Miss Barton went to Europe in 1869 to serve in the Franco-Prussian War. There she encountered the humanitarian movement founded in Switzerland five years earlier — the International Committee of the Red Cross.

Jean Henri Dunant, a Swiss tourist in Italy in 1859, had been trapped at Solferino when Napoleon III attacked the Austrian armies. He was the horrified eyewitness of the bloody battle that left 40,000 dead and wounded on the battlefield, and intervened to bring help. His account of the experience precipitated an International Conference at Geneva in 1863, which laid the groundwork for the Red Cross Society and chose as its symbol the red cross on a field of white — the reverse of the flag of Switzerland.

A conference the following year enacted the International Red Cross Treaty — the first "Geneva Convention."

Miss Barton returned home to secure the adoption of the Geneva Convention by the U.S. Not until 1881, after years of effort, was she able to found the American Association of the Red Cross and its first chapter of volunteers. The U.S. Senate and President Chester A. Arthur made it official the next year, and Miss Barton became the first president of the American Red Cross, a post she held until 1904.

The Winchester Chapter was initially organized in December 1917 as a branch of the Boston Metropolitan Chapter at a meeting held in the old Winchester High School building. Many of the over 3,000 American Red Cross chapters were founded that year as a result of the great outburst of patriotism occasioned by the First World War. Work committees to prepare surgical dressings and do knitting and sewing were formed then. The branch became a separate chapter in November 1921.

Working initially out of a spare room at the Board of Health, the Chapter was for many years located in the Cutting House on Washington Street behind the Town Hall and is now located at 39 Church St. The chapter continues to serve the Winchester community through its programs of blood donor recruitment, disaster relief, service to military families and veterans, motor service and a wide range of community health screenings and safety education.

WHS Schedules Career Day

Once again the Foreign Language Department of Winchester High School is having "Career Days," March 4 and 5, to acquaint the students with the many fields in which they will find knowledge of a foreign language an asset.

Speakers include representatives of business and industry as well as the professional fields of social work, law, medicine, the foreign service, and journalism, and a program is planned for almost every period in the day.

Among the speakers are several residents of Winchester including three Tufts professors, Peter Arnett, Sol Gittleman and Jack Zarker, as well as Town Selectman Edward O'Connell, Dr. Richard Ryan, and Andrew Hall. Adrien Stopper represents Nixdorf, a computer firm, while Dianne Cogias tells of her experiences in the import-export field.

Two speakers stress the opportunities in foreign service: Walter Wells, a retired diplomat, and Karen Henderson, presently of the Fletcher School. Stanley Bloom comes from The Gillette Co. to talk about personnel needs for Latin American operations. Representing the field of social work is Phyllis Loewenstein of International Adoptions while Mark Freeman talks about the need of lawyers to know a foreign language. Globe photographer Janet Knott completes the list of speakers for the two-day event.

Coordinator of the program is Barbara R. Holden of the Foreign Language Department assisted by the entire language staff. Moderators for the three-panel discussions are Carolyn Tiffany of the Guidance Department and Alfred Duhamel of the Language Department.

Lynch School Has Pancake Breakfast

The Lynch Elementary School's first annual Pancake Breakfast was held Saturday, Feb. 28 with approximately 250 hungry participants.

The doors opened at 9 a.m. The griddles were hot and the "chef's" (Lynch dad's) were ready to serve. Pancakes, sausages, orange juice and hot beverages were served.

A surprise was a visit from the costumed "Lynch Leopard". A contest was held at the beginning of the school year to choose an appropriate logo for their new school. The contest winner was fifth grader, Nancy Gast who came up with the idea.

Board To Fight Lynch Closing

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

If additional cuts because of Prop. 2.5 force the closing of schools, chances are slim the School Committee will agree to Superintendent William MacDonald's recommendation that the Lynch School be the one to go.

Those sentiments came in the wake of MacDonald's presentation of the Committee To Study School Closing's report to the School Committee and a packed Sanborn House Monday night. MacDonald and the School Committee emphasized that the top priority would be to prevent any school closings. But if it does become necessary, it is doubtful the committee will act favorably on MacDonald's recommendation to close the most expensive elementary school in town, Lynch.

The Options

The school committee heard 11 school closing options this week, seven that involved elementary schools, three that would eliminate junior high and the final recommendation that asked for the closing of the Lynch School.

"I would hope that we would not have to implement the Superintendent's recommendation," School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander said Tuesday. If the budget falls into the "worst case" situation that would require the school department to cut significantly more than its present $963,000, Alexander said the committee "would look at another school."

The rest of the committee was also opposed to the plan, primarily because it would represent the second straight year that the Lynch population would be significantly disrupted. Lynch was converted from a junior high to an elementary school last September.

"If you check my voting record on the school closing issue you will find that I have consistently said I would vote to keep the biggest and best schools. I think the physical plant is important," School Committee member Constance Pappas said.

She added that even if Lynch is far below capacity it would be economically as well as educationally feasible to use any extra space at Lynch for use by the community. "It is a lot wiser to keep the bigger and better building in case there is a reversal in the declining enrollment," Pappas said.

School Committee member Sandra Rodgers said she was concerned with the "educational disadvantages" of the proposal. Along with concern over disrupting students for the second year in a row, Rodgers added that the proposal was especially detrimental to the special needs students who were housed in Lynch for the first time this year. Moving them from Lynch would mark the third change in the past four years.

"Moving these children again is even more critical," Rodgers said. "It is not an educationally sound way to work with them."

While most of the opposition to the plan focused on its educational deficiencies, MacDonald said the only reason the committee (made up of Business Manager Jack Fallon, Data Processing Director Art Sarno and

Town, Schools Divide Cuts

If one thing came out of the joint meeting Tuesday between representatives of the School Committee and the Board of Selectmen, it was a balanced budget.

Sort of.

Representatives of both groups began the meeting facing a total of $362,688 in additional cuts to comply with the mandates of Proposition 2.5.

School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander said she could come up with cuts totalling $150,000.

But those cuts won't come easy. Alexander said they would be in the form of personnel reductions.

"We have made every effort to look at our budget and make reductions in areas that will be the least harmful," Alexander said. "We've already cut $750,000, a figure that is equal to 33.5 positions. The $150,000 involves a significant reduction in personnel."

Questioned following the meeting on those personnel reductions, Alexander declined to be specific on the number or types of reductions. She said she wanted to wait until a School Committee meeting tonight to discuss specifics. She did say those cuts would be a mixture of teaching and custodial positions.

On the town-side of Proposition 2.5 cuts, Selectman Edward F. O'Connell said the town could trim $85,000 by deferring a planned audit of town books.

Those joint cuts total $272,000. The remaining $126,000 will be split on a 50-50 basis between the school department and the town. The areas in which cuts will be made is still a matter of discussion.

Robert Frank's Finance Committee will receive a proposed $23.3 million budget by the March 15 deadline, with schools and the town absorbing $63,000 each and continuing efforts to make needed cuts.

If Town Meeting fails to approve plans by Town Manager Tom Groux to increase water rates, institute a sewer use charge and tap both the Stabilization and Sale of Land Account Funds, the town will have to make cuts totalling $1.8 million while schools will have to trim approximately $710,000.

School Committee member Constance Pappas questioned O'Connell concerning whether proposed cuts were based on the bleakest budget picture possible.

"No," said O'Connell. "It's like being told to take one of your children to the orphanage or poor house. I just can't bring myself to do it."

As far as Alexander is concerned, that child is already waiting at the orphanage's gate.

"We are preparing to take that child to the orphanage," Alexander said. "We are preparing for the worst."

She said while recent discussions concerning the possible closing of schools had "not exactly been welcomed with open arms," there was no way to make needed reductions without those closings. "There's been some heavy cutting on both sides," Groux said. He said town-side cuts were currently $799,000.

Following a question from School Superintendent William MacDonald, Groux said the town could conceivably cut more than their $63,000 share but that those cuts "would affect a service."

Other suggestions for making necessary cuts included closing Sanborn House, the structure which houses the School Department.

Such a closing would result in a $19,000-$20,000 savings in operational costs.

However, Business Manager Jack Fallon said that an estimate of the cost of closing and moving from Sanborn made two years ago stood at $52,000.

Selectman John J. Williams also represented the Board in discussions Tuesday meetings.

Boston Woman Charged In Beach Murder

By STEVEN AUSTIN

Sandy Beach is normally a place for summer fun; a place to swim or get a tan.

According to local police, it is also a place where lovers meet; a place where drugs are bought and sold.

But late Sunday, Sandy Beach became something else. Sandy Beach became a killing ground.

George Karakiozis, a 34-year-old fisherman, Somerville resident and father of two, died there sometime Sunday, the victim of some 30 stab wounds to the chest and back.

His alleged assailant, Rita Owens, is a 20-year-old woman whose last known address was Morton st. in Mattapan and who has a record of arrests for prostitution in Boston. She turned herself in to Metropolitan District Police less than 24-hours after Karakiozis' body was found lying face down in the parking lot some 70-feet from the water. She was arraigned in Woburn District Court Tuesday.

Owens told police she was attacked by Karakiozis.

She is also being charged with robbery.

She was arrested at 9:55 p.m. Monday. Police have not recovered the weapon. They remain unsure of the motive in the stabbing.

They do know that Karakiozis picked Owens up in Boston's Combat Zone on Tremont st. at 7:40 p.m. Sunday.

They know the pair drove to Winchester in a blue and white Chevrolet owned by a relative of the dead man.

And, they know that by 8 p.m. Karakiozis was dead.

The body was discovered in the middle of the cul de sac on the back side of Sandy Beach by MDC Patrolman Patrolman Rocco Rizzuto. He was on a routine patrol of the area. When he checked the parking lot around 5 p.m., everything was in order.

When he checked it again shortly after 8 p.m., he found Karakiozis' body.

MDC Lt. William Kelley arrived on the scene shortly after the body was discovered. Frogmen were dispatched into the cold, gray-water, diving in search of the knife that killed Karakiozis.

MDC Detective Jerome Gately, one of the officers assigned to the case, said divers continued those efforts through Monday without result.

"We've stopped diving now," Gately said Tuesday. "We don't believe the knife is in there."

Karakiozis' body was moved first to Lane Funeral Home, where his wife would subsequently identify it and later to Cota Funeral Home in Somerville.

"We're not sure of the motive," said MDC Public Information Officer Frank Muolo. "She (Owens) was picked up in the Combat Zone by George Karakiozis and taken to Winchester where the murder took place in the Sandy Beach parking lot."

"Our information is that she has been arrested a couple of times in Boston for prostitution," Muolo said.

Police contend that Owens drove from the parking lot following the murder and abandoned the vehicle on High st. in West Medford a mile and a half away.

She then took a taxi into the Boston, Gately said.

Meanwhile, the MDC was sweeping the Combat Zone.

"Lt. Kelley's investigation was going through the Combat Zone," Gately said.

"Word got out we were looking for this

Appeal Filed In Fraud Case

By STEVEN AUSTIN

A Winchester man plans to appeal an 18-month sentence for oil fraud involving approximately 35,000 gallons of No. 4 heating oil sold to Ft. Devens in Ayer but delivered to commercial customers.

Edward A. Cincotta, 53, of 9 Trinity rd., was sentenced March 3 in U.S. District Court in Boston and fined $12,000. He was convicted on 15 counts of attempting to defraud the federal government.

John P. Zaro, 45, of Lynnfield, also received an 18-month sentence and a $12,000 fine in connection with the case.

In addition, Mystic Fuel Inc., the firm owned by Cincotta and Zaro that had contracted for the oil, was fined $24,000.

The two men were charged in connection with an incident in which they allegedly charged seven shipments of heating oil to Ft. Devens but delivered to commercial customers.

The indictment originally handed down against the two contained 31 counts, according to U.S. Attorney Bruce Singal, the lawyer prosecuting the case for the government.

Sixteen of those counts were dismissed, leaving Cincotta and Zaro to face seven counts of false claims, seven of false statements and one of conspiracy to defraud the federal government. The 18-month sentences and the fines given both men were stayed pending appeal to the First Circuit Court of Appeals, Singal said.

The appeal is expected to pivot around letters sent to all prosecution witnesses by the U.S. Attorney's office prior to the trial and as well as around the contention of the defense that oil truck drivers, rather than Cincotta and Zaro, were involved in the theft of the oil.

According to Singal, the government's 15 witnesses were mailed letters prior to the proceedings that "enclosed copies of instructions on general demeanor" in court.

Judge W. Arthur Garrity found these letters improper and, in Singal's words, "took steps to correct any possible prejudice."

Garrity instructed witnesses concerning the letter out of the jury's hearing, Singal said.

Singal said that while the judge ruled that the letters didn't represent an attempt on the part of the prosecution to encourage witnesses not to tell the truth, he (Garrity) did rule the letters "tended to paint the government in a more favorable light than the defense."

He said he'd received notice of appeal from Cincotta. Cincotta is represented by Boston attorney Harvey Peters.

Peters' law partner, Paul T. Smith declined comment on the case but said he hoped for a decision on the appeal by June.

Zaro is represented by Boston attorney Joseph Ballero. He was unavailable for comment.

Singal said a decision on the appeal was likely "a few months down the road."

Bus Service Reduced

Winchester commuters who use bus Route 134 to get to the Orange Line will face a service reduction beginning March 31.

According to Paul DiNatale, as a spokesman for the MBTA, Sunday service will have buses running every hour rather than every 45 minutes.

After 10 p.m. on weekdays, DiNatale said, buses will run every hour rather than every half hour.

Calling the reduction a "minor one," DiNatale said, "We don't feel reductions like this would affect a great many of those using the route."

Route 134 runs to Wellington Station via Woburn, Winchester and Medford Square.

'SCOTCH' Saves On Energy Costs

One of the few projects to be approved for a federal Dept. of Energy grant will be marketed in the Arlington-Belmont-Winchester area by its inventor who says his "SCOTCH" is deceptively simple, and not a miracle.

But it may seem like a miracle to the hundreds of owners of older homes and businesses with radiators who will be able to save more than 25 percent of their fuel with his invention.

SCOTCH is "simple, cost-effective, optimum temperature control for housing." It was invented by Dr. Ogden H. Hammond who has been developing the process for four years with the help of his wife, Ingrid.

Their company, Count Digital Ltd., is at 1365 Mass. ave., Arlington, but the work on the project began in the basement of their former home in Winchester. That house is one of two projects using SCOTCH. The couple now live in Belmont.

Put very simply, SCOTCH uses a computer-directed radiator cover with a fan to control the temperature of a room. That is why it sounds simple. It can be used in any steam or hot water heated building which has free-standing radiators. Only, it is so complex that it took the Hammonds four years to develop the technology, and any handy homeowner cannot duplicate it by putting a wooden box around a radiator.

"You have to think of it as a valve," says Dr. Hammond. "It is a way to turn a radiator on and off. Any time you are exchanging heat between a boiler and a room you can control either the steam or hot water lines or the air, and it doesn't matter which one you control. We figured out an easy way of controlling the air."

The savings in fuel will be realized through the new way the burner and boiler will operate. "Now the boiler has to heat all the radiators at the same time and heat everything. If it is not big enough, the furthest radiator stays cold," says Hammond.

"At the same time the boiler only runs about 25 percent of the time. It keeps going off and on. Every time it goes off a large percentage of heat goes up the stack."

With SCOTCH, the boiler does not have to heat every radiator at the same time. According to Dr. Hammond, the boiler will run longer at a lower firing rate.

"The way it works is that each room is heated 15 minutes out of an hour. It goes from room to room turning the radiator on and off instead of turning the boiler on and off."

"Every radiator will go full blast, but how long it goes is set by fan. If a boiler ran 15 minutes out of an hour before, now it will run 30."

At this point the homeowner is probably wondering how that can be done. This is where the computers come in. Every SCOTCH system has a central control unit, the brain of the system, which is a portable unit that can be plugged in wherever the owner wants it. The controller is about the same size as a calculator and just as simple to use. It does all the work of controlling the radiators.

Each radiator that is selected for the control will have its own cover. Hammond says the average house has eight radiators that should be controlled.

The covers are built of particle board, and can be made by a carpenter or by the homeowner. They are insulated, so that they never get hot. Owners can use them as a piece of furniture and can paint or cover them any way they wish.

Each radiator cover has an opening for air to come out and one for air to go in. The fan which each cover has is removable and runs from an electric outlet, using 7-10 watts. Each cover has its own computer.

Every cover has its own computer which tells the central control which room it is in, what the desired temperature for the room is and whether the fan is on or off. When the fan is on heat flows into the room. When the fan is off, no heat leaves the radiator unit.

Homeowners can set each room individually for different temperatures at different times of the day. The settings can be changed at any time. By turning different radiators on and off at different times, SCOTCH prevents the boiler from having to heat all of the radiators at once and lets the burner be on for longer periods of time at a lower firing rate.

The microprocessor is programmed to cycle approximately one-third of the radiators in a building at a given time, so that even if someone wanted all of the rooms to be heated to the same temperature, the controller would automatically turn on one-third of them at one time. This saves fuel, because less steam and hot water are being created.

The SCOTCH system is one of about 150 applications from 15,000 received which the Dept. of Energy has funded. Dr. Hammond credits Sen. Paul Tsongas with helping them get the grant.

He says that when Tsongas started to hear from local constituents that they supported development of the process (partly through a postcard campaign) and he knew that SCOTCH worked, his office cut through the red tape and got DOE to act faster.

The $92,000 grant will pay two-thirds of the cost of development of the system. The Hammonds plan to make 100 SCOTCH installations in Arlington-Belmont-Winchester for next winter's heating season.

They chose these three towns because residents have been supportive of their project. Dr. Hammond says they are limiting the first season so that the company can monitor the units and make sure people know how to use them and are satisfied.

Homeowners interested in being considered for SCOTCH can contact the company which will send out a questionnaire which will be computer checked. Those who will save the most money will be chosen. Initially the costs will be about $200 a radiator unit and $1000 for a controller.

However, Hammond says that costs will come down, as they did with calculators, as production gears up. In the meantime, the system is eligible for federal energy credits. The company will do the analysis which will show buyers the best way to finance SCOTCH. It will be most feasible for those who pay more than $1000 a year for fuel.

In addition, the first 100 buyers will be given free maintenance and updated service for the first four years. Hammond wants those people to have the best technology that will be available in four years in case there are some new developments in the system.

The implications of SCOTCH's fuel savings for the fuel companies is great. Dr. Hammond says the system would be applicable for over 14 million housing units, 10 million in the Northeast. Loss of revenue to the fuel companies in today's dollars could be $1 billion annually.

For that reason he offered his patent on SCOTCH to MIT which, in turn, has licensed Count Digital to produce and market it.

Hammond says he donated the patent rights to MIT out of gratitude to the institute where his thesis adviser, the late Edwin R. Gilliland, first focused his attention on developing a temperature control system for buildings heated by steam and hot water radiators.

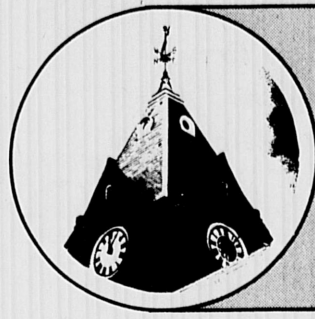

The other reason he went to MIT was that he felt the institute would be in a better position than he would be to defend the patent from infringement.

MIT has not agreed that it would do this, but Hammond says the institute's record for defending patents is excellent and it has the advantage of money and legal staff which his company does not have.

Hammond is a native of New York City. He went to Exeter and MIT, getting his doctorate in chemical engineering in 1973. His wife dropped out of Harvard to support them while he was working at the MIT Energy Lab and the MIT Innovation Center. She later got her degree in economics and now runs the company with him. For four years they have worked full time on SCOTCH.

MIT is the home of one of the SCOTCH prototypes, in an office.

While there Hammond was involved in energy-related inventions which are the property of MIT. One of his patents is for the technology for nondestructive assaying for precious metals — in other words, how to find out your bar of gold is gold without melting it down.

No April Vacation Next Year

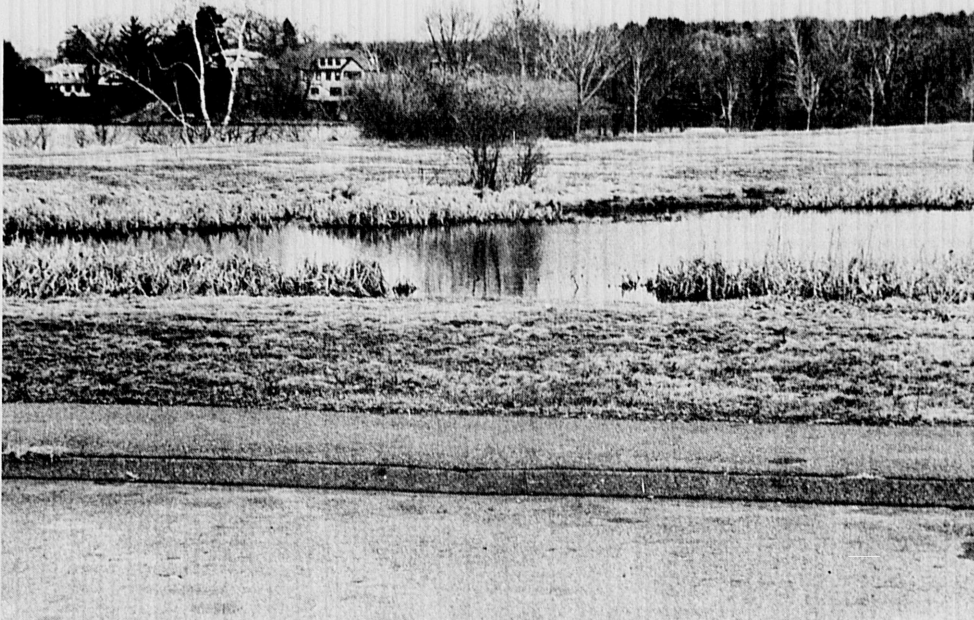

The joy of spring will be slightly tarnished for Winchester students next year.

That's because the School Committee voted, 5-1, this week to eliminate the customary April vacation from the 1981-82 school calendar. The reason for the change was to allow students to get out earlier in June when the students are less apt to be as attentive because of the hot weather.

Under the present policy, students would get out between June 24-28, depending on the number of snow days. Under the new plan schools would close between June 18-22.

The reason for choosing to eliminate the April vacation, according to School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander, was the presence of two long weekends in the month anyway (Good Friday on April 9 and Patriots Day on April 19).

School Committee member Mary Jean Weylman was the sole dissenting vote because she was concerned about conflicts with family vacation plans, work schedules and high school athletic schedules.

Pritchard Chairman

Robert T. Pritchard of 53 Salisbury st., has been appointed chairman of a newly formed organization, the National School Energy Task Force.

The Task Force, whose membership consists of ten energy experts located around the country, has developed a unique program for funding energy conservation measures in public schools.

Many school districts, for a variety of reasons, have not been able to provide the necessary financing to fund energy conservation projects in their districts, even though those energy saving projects would result in dollar savings that would more than exceed the cost of project implementation. The Task Force has established a financial pool, therefore, and makes available financial assistance for energy conservation projects in public school buildings. It has set up a revolving fund from which monies are advanced to school districts for energy projects, the monies later being returned to the fund out of the resultant dollar savings that are achieved by the project. The monies are then recirculated to other school districts for their energy projects.

Funding for Task Force operations is provided by a grant from the John A. Hartford Foundation of New York, with additional funding from the Bird Companies Charitable Foundation of East Walpole, Mass.

Pritchard is the present Executive Director of MASBO Cooperative Corporation, Newton, Mass., an educational management company.

Restaurant Plans Draw Cool Response

A plan to open a Chinese restaurant at 39 Thompson st. drew anything but a warm reception from Selectmen Monday.

Jeanne Chen and realtor Sue Williams Meade approached Selectmen Monday on their feeling concerning the restaurant generally and the possible issuance of a liquor license particularly.

Chen is considering purchasing the 27,000 sq. ft. structure for conversion to a restaurant. Williams said the establishment would seat approximately 100 people.

However, Selectmen asked for more detail on the project before committing themselves.

"We can't just walk in and say 'Yes, this is a good site for a restaurant,'" said Selectman Edward F. O'Connell. "We have to have the specifics. We have to have floor plans and drawings."

"Until we have this kind of information," he said, "we're talking about something that may or may not be feasible."

While Selectman Alan Macdonald said he found the proposed location "desirable," Selectman Michael Saraco said he was "not happy with this location."

He said he was concerned over the "odors" produced by Chinese restaurant and foresaw complaints from residents in the area.

Selectman John Williams went a step further, saying, "for me to consider another 100-seat (restaurant) the quality will have to be there."

League Slates Political Forum For Candidates

On Sunday, March 22, at 3 p.m., the Winchester League of Women Voters will hold its annual "Meet the Candidates Forum" at the Muraco School.

The Hon. Harrison Chadwick will moderate the voter's service program to which town-wide candidates for contested office have been invited to speak formally.

In a year of crucial decision making, town meeting candidates from all precincts are most particularly asked to attend.

Precinct signs will be posted at the auditorium to aid voters in identifying and discussing the issue with Town Meeting candidates.

Those candidates elected this March will have to design far-reaching financial and planning policy. From this meeting, voters will learn how the candidates feel about budget cuts, school consolidation and programs, town services, housing, and land use planning.

Attacks Said Unrelated

Winchester Police are looking for a 1979 Dodge Aspen stationwagon with roof racks and wood paneling they believe was involved in the attack on four Winchester High School girls Feb. 27.

According to Chief John McHugh, a description of the car was obtained following interviews with three of the four girls involved in the incident.

The four were attacked in the parking lot at the high school around 10:30 p.m. Feb. 27 as they left the area following a trip to Boston University for a track meet.

According to police reports, the car in which the four were sitting was approached by "four or five" youths, one of whom subsequently swung a crowbar, smashing the windshield.

The girls then left the lot, driving toward the police station. Their assaults followed them, twice ramming their vehicle from behind at the stop light at Skillings rd. and Washington st.

McHugh said Tuesday that a separate attack, in which a 15-year old Winchester youth was assaulted with a car jack an hour before the parking lot incident is unrelated to the attack on the girls.

"It's our opinion," McHugh said, "that the first incident is unrelated to the second."

He said investigations by the police department into the attack on the 15-year-old found the attack came after he and two friends shouted to a passing car.

The car then stopped, the 15-year-old's friends fled and the victim was struck on the shoulder.

No serious injuries resulted from either incident.

In other action, police are looking into a breaking and entering incident on Everett ave. in which Oriental rugs, china and jewelry were taken between 11:45 a.m.-5:45 p.m. March 7.

Police are also investigating a breaking and entering incident on Bigelow ave. March 8 in which jewelry was taken.

Selectmen's Notes

Betterment Costs

Selectmen Monday approved an increase suggested by Town Engineer Jake Ciarcia for the installation of sidewalks and curbing.

Present charges for sidewalk installation stand at $8.80 per sq. yard while curbing costs are $14 per sq. yard.

Ciarcia suggested increasing those rates to $22 per sq. yard for sidewalks and $17.50 for curbing.

Those new rates apply to new requests not currently in the hands of the Engineering Department.

Purchase Supported

Selectmen Monday voted to send a letter to the Massachusetts Industrial Finance Agency supporting plans by T. Tighe and Sons Inc. to purchase a warehouse at 45 Holton st.

Company executives are exercising their option to buy the warehouse and are seeking funding through the agency.

Presently, the firm, a grocery concern, runs from 25-30 trucks a day over Holton st. Plans to purchase the warehouse would not increase truck traffic in the area, T. Tighe said Monday.

The company said it plans no expansion of facilities at the existing site. The warehouse is owned by John Whitten.

The Tighe company has been at the site for approximately eight to ten years.

The plan to buy the warehouse also drew support from the Holton Street Study Committee. Committee member Michael Connolly said his group supported the plan, saying he "strongly endorsed owner-occupancy."

Appointments Made

Thomas Derro and incumbent Bradley Ross were appointed to three-year terms on the Conservation Commission Monday following a vote by Selectmen.

The vote to appoint Derro was a 4-1 split with Chairman Wade Welch supporting incumbent Tom Ward.

Articles Discussed

Harrison Chadwick has suggested the reinstitution of garbage collection through an article he submitted to Selectmen Monday.

In submitting the article, Chadwick said he wanted to give Selectmen "the broadest possible latitude" in working out garbage collection.

He said the Board could edit the article. He said he hoped Town Meeting would consider the article before considering those articles which were, in his words, "fiscal matters."

Applicant Interviewed

Selectmen interviewed Philip M. Locashio Monday for a position on Winchester's Council on Youth.

An architect, Locashio was involved in the design of the Jenks Senior Center and is a coach in the youth soccer program.

Cable Television

Continental Cable Television has opened a temporary office on Swanton st. and has established a telephone number, 721-1020, to answer residence's complaints and questions about the system.

Larry Worthen, a member of the Cable Television Advisory Committee, told Selectmen Monday the company had 60-miles of stranding attached to poles and approximately 20 miles of cable attached to that stranding.

Service is expected to begin Sept. 15.

elementary Principal Martha Grenzback) chose Lynch because of financial considerations. He conceded it was not the best educational plan and would impact the neighborhood schools concept. Calling Lynch one of the best facilities in the system, MacDonald said the Study Committee "attempted in every way to maintain Lynch as an elementary school. If it was just educational considerations there is no way in the world I would recommend the closing of a facility like Lynch," MacDonald said.

The proposal, which was a combination of two other options that were presented to the School Committee Monday, calls for the closing of Lynch at the end of the 1980-81 school year. After a review of enrollment trends, if there is a continual decline, the Mystic or Lincoln Schools would be closed following the 1982-83 school year.

The third part of the proposal called for the transfer of Central Office staff from Sanborn House to McCall once a suitable re-use for Sanborn was found.

The advantages, as listed in the Study Committee's report, were that it would remove an elementary school that was filled to approximately 50 percent capacity; would eliminate the school that serves the smallest geographic area; in comparison to other K-6 options it would have the lowest additional bus costs; would allow for more time to review enrollment trends and is the type of building that would be attractive to developers.

'The major consideration this evening is on the economic aspect and not the educational one.'

The other major advantage was that it would eliminate the school with the highest operating costs. The report showed Lynch with an operating cost of $118,340 (fuel, electricity and gas). The next most expensive school to operate was Muraco at $70,987, according to the report.

Lynch parents also reacted to the recommendation angrily. Citing that Lynch parents were promised there would be no more changes at Lynch after converting it to an elementary school last year, Sue Taylor, the school's Parents Association president observed that "Lynch always seems to be the rubber ball."

Maureen McWilliams, 77 Woodside rd., said the recommendation "disturbs me as an adult but disturbs me even more when I see how it affects my children."

She noted that her daughter had started school at Wyman and had to move to Noonan when that was closed.

NEIGHBORHOOD COOPERATIVE NURSERY School students Tommy Nath, Jenny Arnott, Lindsay Schlorff and Justin Nelson remind residents of a scheduled Open House at the school March 12 at 8 p.m.

She was redistricted to Lynch this year after Noonan closed last June. She seconded the School Committee's concerns over the educational disruption of the students faced with a change in schools two consecutive years.

"I encourage you to reconsider everything you have said tonight," she told MacDonald, adding that the closing of Lynch would be "devastating" to her and her daughter.

MacDonald repeated that his most desirable recommendation would be to close no schools, but added that the recommendation "had been prematurely forced upon us by the economic realities of Prop. 2.5."

He said the prior closings of four elementary schools in the past three years had been based more on educational factors than economic ones. "But, sadly stated, the major consideration this evening is on the economic aspect and not the educational one."

Whether the School Committee will be forced to close a school or schools remains primarily in the hands of Town Meeting. If Town Meeting fails to approve an increase in water rates, rejects implementation of sewer use charges and prevents any use of the Stabilization and Sale of Land accounts, the economic result would be disastrous, officials maintain.

If that "worst case" happens the town would have to cut an additional $1.8 million and the schools an additional $710,000. Under those budget constraints school closings would have to happen, according to school officials.

Although the Study Committee did not dismiss the future possibility of changing to a K-8 system and closing McCall, the disadvantages at this time evidently outweighed the advantages.

The major drawbacks to a K-8 system were that the remaining building would be at nearly 90 percent capacity which would leave little flexibility for enrollment changes; it would result in major redistricting of Ambrose and Vinson-Owen Schools which would have a "domino" effect through town; would cause transitional problems in that students would be "leaving a small structured environment with limited departmentalization and go immediately into Winchester High School," and would call for difficult decisions of what to do with Knowlton Stadium and the other playing fields surrounding McCall if that school is closed.

The School Committee is not expected to make a formal decision on the issue until it can determine what the actual budget reduction will have to be. That may not come until after Town Meeting or even later when the property revaluation is completed in early summer. The Assessors say there is a three percent margin of error in predicting what the town's new total property value will be, which would fluctuate the reductions by $161,000 for each percent off.

If personnel are included in the school closings, Fallon says elementary schools closed would save approximately $120,000 while McCall would save close to $230,000.

School Closings: The Options

Winchester School Superintendent William MacDonald presented the findings of the Committee To Study School Closings to the School Committee Monday. The committee was given seven options that would close two elementary schools, three options that would eliminate the junior high and the committee's recommendation, which was a combination of two elementary school closing options. The options are:

OPTION 1
Close the Lynch and Mystic Schools. All Mystic students would be moved to Lincoln. Thirty-nine Lynch students (north of Church and South of Water) would go to Lincoln and the rest would return to Muraco. Cost of operating the other four schools would be $203,000.

OPTION 2
Close Lincoln and Mystic Schools. One hundred and ninety-eight Lincoln students would go to Muraco and the remaining 58 to Lynch, based on demographic boundaries. All Mystic students would go to Lynch. Cost of operating the other four schools would be $267,116.

OPTION 3
Close Ambrose and Mystic Schools. All Mystic students would be moved to Lincoln and all the Ambrose students would be moved to Lynch. Costs of operating the other four schools would be $289,348.

OPTION 4
Close Lynch and Lincoln Schools. This plan was rejected because the remaining schools would not be able to accommodate the enrollment in 1981-82. The plan could be revived in the future if enrollment continues to decline.

OPTION 5
Close Ambrose and Lynch Schools. Fifty-six Ambrose students would be sent to Vinson-Owen and 212 to Lincoln. Thirty-eight Lynch students would be sent to Lincoln and 198 to Muraco. Cost of operating the remaining schools would be $217,980.

OPTION 6
Close Lincoln and Ambrose Schools. All Ambrose students would be sent to Lynch. Seventy Lincoln students (south of Winthrop st. and east of the railroad tracks along Mystic Valley Parkway) would go to Mystic and the remaining 186 to Muraco. Cost of operating other four schools would be $281,953.

OPTION 7
Close Lincoln facility and Ambrose. All Ambrose students would move to Lynch. One hundred and eighty-six Lincoln students would move into McCall and become a Lower School (K-6). It would operate on a House Plan with each house (K-6, 7-8) having its own identity. The remaining 70 Lincoln students would return to Mystic. Cost of operating five elementary schools (McCall would be considered both an elementary and junior high) would be $402,210.

The committee was presented three different options for a K-8 system that would require the closing of McCall Junior High. They were:

OPTION 8A
Close McCall and keep all six present elementary schools, changing them from K-6 to K-8 schools. Students at McCall would return to their elementary schools. Total cost of the K-8 enrollment would be $368,455.

OPTION 8B
Close the Mystic and Lincoln Schools and switch McCall to an elementary school along with the other four elementary schools. This plan was rejected because K-8 enrollment would exceed total capacity, the McCall elementary would have over 500 students and capacities at Ambrose and Vinson-Owen would be exceeded.

OPTION 8C
Close the Lincoln, change McCall to an elementary school and keep the other five elementary schools, changing them all to K-8 schools. To alleviate overcrowding, 58 V-O students would be sent to Ambrose. Then to alleviate overcrowding at Ambrose 159 students would be sent to McCall (72) and Lynch (87). Total cost of the K-8 enrollment would be $434,345.

The final recommendation of the Study Committee was a combination of Options 1 and 4. That plan is:

Superintendents' Recommendation
Close Lynch at the end of the 1980-81 school year. If enrollment continues to decline, at the end of the 1982-83 school year, close either Mystic or Lincoln School. As soon as acceptable re-use of Sanborn House can be agreed upon, the Central Office should be moved to McCall.

Budget Meeting Tonight

The School Committee will meet tonight in what Chairman Catherine Alexander hopes will be a final discussion of additional reductions the school department has to make because of Prop. 2.5.

The School Committee earlier submitted a budget to Town Manager Thomas Groux that showed a reduction of $750,000 from next year's budget.

Groux now says an additional $362,000 must be cut from the overall budget but that figure could climb to over $1 million if Town Meeting doesn't approve a water rate hike and the use of the Stabilization and Sale of Land accounts to offset the anticipated town revenue shortfall.

"I hope to bring to the School Committee a bottom line figure that we need to meet," Alexander said, adding that she hopes to have the final discussion on budget cuts that will allow the town and school department to present a balanced budget to the Finance Committee.

Tonight's meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at Sanborn House.

St. Mary's Sets Lectures On Catholicism In The 80's

A four-week series of lectures on the theme of Catholicism in the 80's will be part of the Lenten program of St. Mary's. The series will provide insight into the contemporary Church and a deepening knowledge of the directions of the church in this decade. The lectures will begin March 18 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Mary's Hall and continue through three succeeding Wednesdays.

C.S.A. Schedules Discussion On Children's Needs

The Community Schools Association of Winchester will be holding their March program Thursday, March 19 at 9:15 at the Mystic School Library.

"Meeting the Needs of Winchester Children," will be the topic addressed by four speakers.

Mrs. JoAnn Schoenegge will present an update on the pilot program at McCall Junior High School, Drug and Alcohol Abuse. This program was developed to supplement and coordinate with the existing program at the sixth and tenth grade levels. Mrs. Schoenegge has been a guidance counselor in the Winchester School system for six years.

Mrs. Pat Skehan, the Community Health Education Coordinator at Winchester Hospital, will provide information on health programs relating to the youth of Winchester. A recent program, held at Winchester High School with four area physicians, provided Mrs. Skehan with many questions submitted by the adolescents of Winchester. Mrs. Skehan has been working in the Winchester Hospital Education Department for six years.

David Ackerman, Director for Curriculum, will address the needs of the gifted and talented students. Ackerman will discuss his recent proposal for a specific Winchester school program for this population.

A representative from the Winchester League of Women Voters will present information relating to their recent research on the need for after-school programming for Winchester children in grades Kindergarten through sixth. Some of their findings are based on a Needs Assessment Questionnaire that was distributed to all parents of elementary school students in Winchester.

Coffee will be served at 9:15 and the program will begin at 9:30. A question and answer period will be open to the public after the panel discussion.

Sister Phyllis Riddle from the Diocese of Camden, N.J. will introduce the series with a lecture entitled "The Church and the Laity." Sister was the Assistant Director of Religious Education for the Diocese of Camden. Presently she is working for the Archdiocese of Boston developing a training program for lay ministers. Her work brings her to all sections of the Archdiocese to study the expansion of lay ministries throughout the diocese and the training needs that these ministries demand.

"The Church in Latin America" will be the topic of the second talk to be given by Sister Caritas Lawrence, R.S.M. The speaker is a native Honduran who, after her religious formation, returned to Belize where she has taught and been principal of a school. Her family have been involved in Belize's struggle for independence and the struggles of the Church in Central America.

Bishop Daniel A. Hart, D.D. will speak on the theme "Catholicism in the Eighties" as it applies to the Archdiocese of Boston. From the point of view of his position as Vicar for Pastoral Development for the Archdiocese of Boston, Bishop Hart has the opportunity to see how the changes initiated by Vatican II imprint at the parochial level.

The final evening will feature Fr. Peter Conley of the faculty of Pope John XXIII Seminary. Fr. Conley is the Executive Secretary of the Ecumenical Commission for the archdiocese. He will talk on "The Contemporary Church and Ecumenism." He will be joined by the Rev. Jack Bishop from the Parish of the Epiphany in Winchester who will respond to Fr. Conley's presentation from the Episcopalian experience.

Bartlett School Accepting Applications

The Bartlett School, located at 83 Church st., will move to the Parkhurst School site, 40 Samoset rd. in August of 1981.

Registrations are now being accepted for enrollment in September classes for four-year-olds, five-year-olds and grades one through eight.

Bartlett School was opened in 1933 by Norine D. Casey, mother of the present director, Mrs. Casey who had previously taught in Boston Public Schools opened a first grade in her own home on Bartlett ave., Arlington when Mr. Casey was hospitalized on a long term basis.

The following year an assistant was hired and the growth of Bartlett had begun. The family retained a residence on one side of the property and classes were held on the other side. By 1951 Bartlett School had a staff of eight teachers assisting Mrs. Casey in two pre-school classes and grades one through four.

Class size at Bartlett remains small in order to insure personal attention to children's needs.

Norine T. Casey, Bartlett School Director, said the curriculum at Bartlett will not change in September and that the move to a new location will merely provide a newer facility.

All Bartlett staff hold AB degrees and many have MA degrees. The Bartlett School prides itself in fact that while many educators now conclude it necessary to return to basics, Bartlett has never left basics. All students partake of gym class daily and an after school sports program is available. Music and art teachers encourage the children's creative involvement and students' work may be seen on display in corridors.

Parents are encouraged to take an active part in the life of Bartlett School, and many social and fundraising functions are planned. Tuition has been kept at a moderate level and is payable monthly. Transportation is available for families who reside in Winchester or nearby communities. Interested parents should call Miss Casey at Bartlett School to receive a brochure or to make a personal appointment.

Street Talk

On Enduring A Difficult Time

It has not been an easy time for Winchester these past few weeks.

A 22-year-old former resident died by his own hand on a bench at Mill Pond three weeks ago.

Four girls, members of the high school track team, were attacked by persons unknown as they sat in the parking lot at the school following a meet at Boston University.

That attack was preceded by an unconnected incident in which a 15-year-old was struck by a car jack.

Fortunately, neither incident resulted in serious injury.

This week, a 34-year-old Somerville man was murdered at Sandy Beach.

These are not incidents Winchester is accustomed to dealing with. Until recently, they could have passed under the category of things that happen "someplace else."

But now, that "someplace else" is here. That "someplace else" is Winchester.

Suicides or attacks or even murders have left the inner city and moved to the suburbs.

In discussions we've had with a number of people, one observation comes to the fore more than any other.

"This is Winchester," people tell us. "Things like that simply don't happen here."

But they have.

The important thing that remains is our response to them. The easy thing to do is to flee; to lock ourselves away from all the evil, both real and imagined, that surrounds us.

We could stay in our houses behind locked doors and avoid problems; in effect, ignoring those things we find distasteful.

But there has to be something beyond that self-imposed exile.

That something is the ability to look beyond fear; to count on something beyond locked doors or exile.

That something is a community spirit that goes beyond fear; a spirit that endures adversity; that takes pride in all that Winchester is.

We are nothing if not a community.

The choice remains with us whether that sense of community can overcome fear.

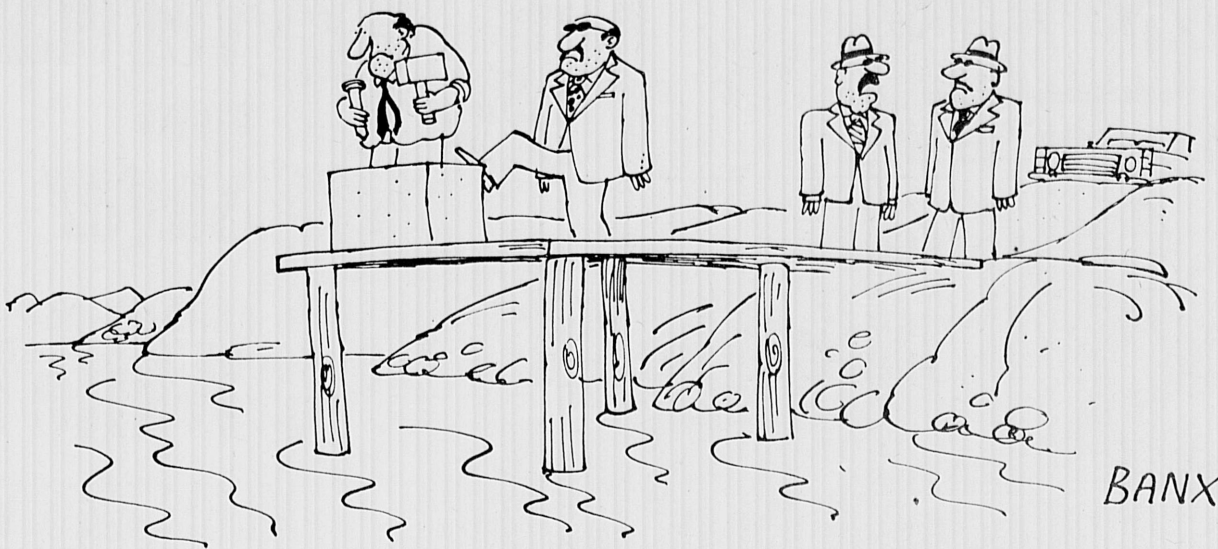

As the mother of one of the girls who was attacked said last week, we are living in troubled and difficult times but the worst thing that could happen would be for everyone to become paranoid, afraid to move in our own town.

Another mother said that we are all more aware that things are not all that nice out there, even in Winchester.

We have realized it can happen here.

Now, as yet a third parent said, it is essential that we become more guarded, but it would be a tragedy if we allowed the events of the last three weeks to frighten us into cutting ourselves off from one another.

Letters From Readers

Design Control?

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Negotiations are currently under way for the purchase of undeveloped land in Winchester approximating 75 acres, by a real estate developer who intends to build a 250 unit condominium complex.

This property lies between the area known as Carriage Hill (Wainwright and Surrey Rd.) and Plato Terrace.

Until the present, the property was zoned for approximately 125 single family dwellings.

If the town authorities, in their infinite wisdom, approve a spot zoning variance in favor of condominium dwellings, many serious complications will surface.

The ingress and egress route to the proposed development (a single access road) at best will be a continuous "BOTTLENECK."

Needless to say, that a 250 unit condominium complex anticipated to be concluded within a twenty-four month period, will no doubt cause a major drain on the community's utilities, especially water and sewer versus a more orderly development of single family homes spread over a greater period of time.

Another consideration is the loss of a greater tax base associated to the single family dwelling versus the condominium unit.

In viewing today's economy, coupled with the high cost of interest, sale of condominium units can be drastically impeded leaving the area with a cluster of vacant units which are an eyesore as well as a safety and vandalism risk.

What sort of design control will the town have?

The developer could build something totally out of character with the neighborhood thus detracting from adjacent residential values.

Anthony DeGregorio

here because of the neighborhood concept. After all, it is zoned for single family homes.

Now a newly formed corporation, without a condo development track record wants to build 250 units versus 125 homes here. They will apply for a zoning change.

Many additional problems develop when you change from 125 to 250. Inadequate water pressure. Inadequate sewerage requiring holding tanks to be dumped in the middle of the night. Public safety. Where do emergency vehicles enter and exit? What about traffic on Wainwright Road? This is the only road into Carriage Hill. Where is the Master Plan for all of this?

Our concern now could eventually be every neighborhood's concern later. If Carriage Hill is rezoned for condos now, other areas of Town will be subject to the same fate.

Housing Forum

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Housing Forum - The snow storm of two weeks ago was cause to cancel the scheduled public forum on "Housing in Winchester". This event has been rescheduled for Wednesday, March 18, 8 p.m. at the Jenks Center. The purpose of the forum is to give an opportunity to Townspeople to air their concerns. We encourage you to attend and give your opinions.

Some major decisions will be made regarding housing in Winchester in the next few years and it is important that all needs and concerns are understood. This is an important opportunity to express your thoughts regarding one of the most critical issues that will shape the Town's future.

We encourage you to come.

Charles N. Tseckares

Chairman
Winchester Planning Board

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

For the first time in many years there are no uncontested seats for town meeting on the March 31 ballot.

No doubt proposition 2½ has a lot to do with this development. Since I am standing for re-election in precinct 2, I would like to state my position on this issue. In my opinion the popular vote in favor of Prop. 2½ was so overwhelming that there exists a mandate from the electorate for every governmental body to immediately and directly implement the provisions in Prop. 2.5.

We have heard too many dire predictions of disaster if Prop. 2.5 is implemented, and now it is time to get busy and see if we can make it work.

Brian H. Gross
TMM, Precinct 2

Foreign Affairs

Editor's Note: The following is a continuation of a letter dealing with the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

By 1944, Edward Mandell House was deceased, but his plan for taking control of our nation's major political parties began to be realized. In 1944 and in 1948, the Republican candidate for President, Thomas Dewey, was a C.F.R. member. In later years, the C.F.R. could boast that Republicans Eisenhower and Nixon were members, as were Democrats Stevenson, Kennedy, Humphrey, and McGovern. The American people were told they had a choice when they voted for President, but with precious few exceptions, presidential candidates for decades have been C.F.R. candidates.

But the C.F.R.'s influence had also spread to other vital areas of American life. Its members have run, or are running, N.B.C. and C.B.S., the New York Times, The Washington Post, The Des Moines Register, and many other important newspapers. The leaders of the Times, Newsweek, Fortune, Business Week, and numerous other publications are C.F.R. members. The organization's members also dominate the academic world, top corporations, the huge tax-exempt foundations, labor unions, the military, and just about every segment of American life.

Let's look at the Council's Annual Report published in 1978. The organization's membership list names 1878 members, and the list reads like "Who's Who" in America. Eleven C.F.R. members are U.S. Senators. Even more Congressmen belong to the organization. Sitting on top of this immensely powerful pyramid, as chairman of the board, is David Rockefeller.

As can be seen in that C.F.R. Annual Report, 284 of its members are U.S. government officials. Any organization which can boast that 284 of its members are U.S. government officials should be well known. Yet most Americans have never even heard of the Council on Foreign Relations.

One reason why this is so is that 171 journalists, correspondents and communications executives are also C.F.R. members, and they don't write about the organization. In fact, C.F.R. members rarely talk about the organization in as much as it is an express condition of membership that any disclosure of what goes on at C.F.R. meetings shall be regarded as grounds for termination of membership. What are they hiding?

Housing Forum Will Provide Answers

The housing forum originally scheduled for Feb. 25, but cancelled due to snow, has been rescheduled for March 18 at 8 p.m. at the Jenks Senior Center.

Planning Board Chairman Charles Tseckares, one of those who'll be speaking at the meeting, has a letter on this page today, urging attendance. We concur.

The meeting will go far in assessing local housing needs, an area of growing concern in the face of rising home prices and interest rates.

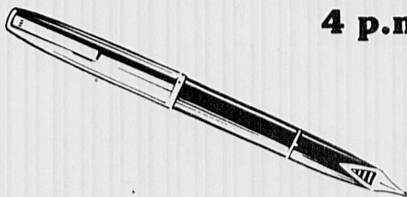

The folks running the forum are looking for input from residents.

We encourage residents to provide just that.

Letter Policy

Length: 250 Words
Deadline: Monday 4 p.m.

Correction

Last week The Star incorrectly reported that Wyman Development Associates of Clarendon St., Boston was one of six finalists being considered by the town to convert the Wyman School into a condominium complex.

The firm that is one of the finalists is Wyman Associates (The Niles Company, Thomas Niles, the Merchants Development Corp., and E.R. Racek), 28 State St. Boston. Their bid for the property is $330,000.

Rezoning

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

As residents of the "Carriage Hill" section of Winchester, we are appalled and outraged by the attempts of a few self-serving developers to arbitrarily change the existing zoning of our neighborhood in order to acquiesce to their insatiable demand for profit. Adding insult to injury is the absurd notion that the re-zoning of approximately seventy acres of precious woodlands into a helter-skelter conglomeration of single family homes and condominiums, would be in the best interests of Winchester. Horsefeathers!

The future of Winchester rests in its ability to grow and to develop according to the needs of all its people. Those needs can best be served by adopting a Master Plan for Winchester in order to protect our town's growth and development. Furthermore, a Master Plan would serve as a definitive statement on Winchester's housing needs and prevent families from being victimized by whimsical zoning changes. Posterity will judge us harshly if we adopt a Laissez-faire attitude toward development and do not act to preserve and to protect all our neighborhoods which together have made Winchester a unique and desirable town in which to live.

As a community, we can once and for all put an end to the spot zoning of our scarce open space land. As a community, we can encourage the development of Winchester and stop its dismemberment.

Ann M. Matarese

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Outstanding! Rezone here, rezone there. Why if they are successful in rezoning Carriage Hill, they can rezone for condos everywhere.

The residents of the Carriage Hill area invested their time, money, hard work and dreams in building our homes

Foundation Begins Drive For Funds For Scholarship

The Winchester Scholarship Foundation has launched its annual fund-raising drive this week with a town-wide mailing.

The Foundation is soliciting contributions from Winchester residents, organizations and businesses to provide aid to high school graduates who want to continue their education.

According to Elaine Delaney, President, the Scholarship Foundation has helped 79 students during the past year with grants-in-aid totaling $32,000.

"Each year we try to help more students," she said, "and with tuition costs soaring, our town's young people need help more than ever."

Students and parents with financial needs determine all the sources available and send the necessary information to the College Scholarship Service in Princeton, N.J. On the basis of need determined by the Scholarship Service, and the student's demonstrated ambition, the Foundation then tries to help fill gaps which remain after other sources of funds are exhausted. Since its establishment 36 years ago, the Foundation has helped 1,290 students.

Awards made are outright grants which are paid directly to the educational institution the student is attending.

The amount of money available each year depends on how much is raised through the fund-raising drive. The only other sources of income for the Scholarship Foundation are memorial gifts and income received from trusts left to the Foundation.

The Winchester Scholarship Foundation is a voluntary, non-profit organization started, supported, and controlled by Winchester residents. The organization traces its roots to the Winchester Mothers Association which started a scholarship program in 1933.

The first award, of $100 was enough to help a young man, Richard Barksdale, start his college career at Bowdoin. He graduated cum laude, continued on to graduate school and a successful career. In 1945 a trust was established along with the mechanism for awarding aid fairly and confidentially.

Science Program Applications At WHS

Francis X. Finigan, Director of Science in Winchester Public Schools, announced recently that the National Science Foundation has released funds for research and study programs in science and mathematics for high ability secondary school students during the summer of 1981.

The projects range from courses in Glacier Research on the Juneau Icefield to the study of Medical Physics and Computer Simulation. By giving science-oriented high school students an experience with college level instruction and investigative laboratory work, the Foundation seeks to stimulate their scholarly development and to encourage their interest in the sciences.

Finigan pointed out that although most programs are for senior high students that programs will be offered on a limited basis for junior high students.

Programs are for students of two different age levels and from varying educational backgrounds. Activities have been designed which are appropriate for senior high students from schools already offering opportunities in science education. Similar but less sophisticated activities are supported for students at the junior high level (grades 7-9).

Admissions to these summer projects will be determined by the sponsoring institutions. In general, selection will be based upon scholastic ability, science motivation and the completion of specified high school courses in science and mathematics. Because of the limited number of appointments available, preference in selecting participants will be given to students in the 11th grade at the time of application. The deadline for applications is April 1.

Finigan, who has assisted the National Science Foundation in selecting the colleges and programs to be funded, pointed out that Winchester has had a high level of acceptance to these programs. Winchester students may contact him at the Science Office (729-9303 Ext. 27) in the high school for further information.

From Cruising To Milk Runs, Gas Hikes Force Lifestyle Changes

By SUSAN SCHNECK
Star Reporter-Intern

Escalating gasoline prices are not only forcing Winchester residents to redefine their budget priorities but also to significantly alter their lifestyles.

The economic predicament for the Winchester citizenry from town officials and businessmen to housewives and high schoolers is exacerbated by the likelihood that gasoline prices will hit $2 a gallon for regular gas by the end of the year.

"From the way the price of gas has skyrocketed these past three or four weeks since they've lifted the controls, it should hit $1.65 a gallon this summer and $2 a gallon by the end of the year," predicted Owen Reardon at Reardon Citgo on Main st.

The effect of the increasing gasoline costs is widespread. Town officials continue to grapple with an energy budget that becomes outdated as soon as it is drafted. Local transportation — intensive businesses such as taxi and trucking firms — have to choose between raising service prices or losing profits. Housewives are carpooling to schools and grocery stores and eliminating unnecessary car trips. And high schoolers are acquiring a taste for more sedentary activities to replace the ever-popular sport of "cruising," or driving aimlessly around town in groups with and without alcohol or drugs.

Following a survey by The Star, it became clear that Winchester-ites are acutely aware that gasoline prices have jumped from $1.08 a gallon for regular gasoline in January a year ago to the present price of $1.40 a gallon — an increase of 28 percent in twelve months. In the last two months alone, the price has jumped 16 percent from $1.19 for regular to the $1.40 level.

"We've been on a yo-yo with the town budget as far as oil and gas prices go this year," said Town Manager Thomas Groux. "Every estimate we've made in the last two years has proved to be too high or too low."

Recent escalating prices have already made predictions that town officials used for this year's budget outdated and insufficient. "We're afraid we'll run somewhat short in the energy accounts for this fiscal year," Groux said.

"The federal government had predicted an increase of five cents (in gasoline prices) and it's gone up 20 cents," said Town Comptroller Al Faggiano. "We're underfunded for fiscal 1982."

"If the energy budget runs out," said Groux, "we'll have to take money out of other accounts or transfer from the financial reserve fund."

But not every Winchester-ite has that option.

Winchester High School juniors and seniors resignedly are searching for alternative forms of entertainment as rising gas prices place limitations on "cruising" — a favorite pastime for Winchester teenagers.

"I used to drive around and drink," said 17-year-old Chris Potts. "Now we stop and drink." Smiling, he added, "At least we're not drinking and driving anymore."

Students are also devising previously unheard of methods for stretching the gas dollar.

"I say to my friends now, 'If you want to cruise, I need the money,'" said John DeBerardinis. "But I still do lots of cruising. That's how you see everyone. It's the only life in this town."

Potts agreed. "I never used to collect money from people in the car," he said. "But now I have to."

Parental pressure to limit cruising is also increasing, especially when the students don't pay for the gas themselves.

Karen Cagnina, 18, said she is asked repeatedly by her parents to curb her driving. "They don't let me take the car out as often because of the gas and all that stuff," she said. "While I am not cruising less, I do try to go to closer places."

Other recreational habits are being revised as well. "Skiing costs too much now because of the gas," said 17-year-old Chris Rolison. "And I can't visit my girlfriend in Maine as often as I used to." Others, too, are changing their lifestyles and methods of doing business. High gas mileage ratings have replaced the status formerly accorded the long-hooded, chrome-embellished, 300-plus horse-power automotive juggernauts.

"More smaller cars are pulling in than ever before," said Reardon. "For the most part, people are trying to cut back or they are getting into smaller cars. Families are keeping one large car and getting a smaller second car."

"Ever since decontrol, people sure have been conserving," said Nick Tierno at Theater Mobil.

Residents questioned in a random telephone survey said they are driving smaller cars, carpooling more often — even to the grocery store, — and limiting recreational trips.

"We carpool every Thursday night to go food shopping," said Marilyn Fossetti of Lebanon st. "I think we'll have to change the family budget, too."

Maria Snyder, of Alden lane, said her family will either take fewer trips to their summer home in Maine this summer, rent it out or possibly even sell it. "We can't afford to pay $20 just to drive there and back," she said.

Snyder is involved in a carpool to the Mystic School and she carools to go shopping. Spur-of-the-moment trips are out. "It's ridiculous to take the car to buy a gallon of milk like we used to do," she said.

Winchester does, however, have its exceptions to the rule.

Some residents said they were not affected by the rising gasoline prices. Others said they weren't even aware of the price hikes.

Eugene O'Brien, of Swanton st., said, "I hadn't really noticed gasoline prices." He added that he doesn't "care one way or the other — if it ($2-gallon) happens, it happens."

"I'm not concerned about it (gas price hikes)," said James Dwinell, of Wood lane. "We have gas and it will become cheaper in the long run."

Mrs. Michael Smith, of Berkshire dr., said she usually doesn't look at the price when she buys gasoline. While she did remember being "shocked" at having to pay $1.38 a gallon the last time she bought gas, she insisted "it won't change my lifestyle one bit — I'll keep driving as much as ever."

This type of attitude draws ire from residents like Snyder, who said she was "raised in the old country and taught to conserve."

In Winchester, she claimed, energy conservation is not something that has reached the point where people take it seriously. "Unfortunately, people find it too inconvenient to conserve," she said.

"Hurting people in their pocketbook" is the only way to reverse this apathy, she said. For that reason, she said, she supported the decontrol of oil prices.

Businesses that rely heavily on transportation are also feeling the pinch. "It's awfully tough as far as fuel and utilities are concerned," said Bob Winn, of Winn Trucking, of Woburn. "We have to evaluate the costs and cut back wherever we can. We are more conscious of our routes now and try to keep backtracking down to a minimum."

Winn has also toyed with the not-entirely-facetious idea of solar-powered trucks. "Just think of it," he explained, laughing. "There's 45 feet of aluminum on top of the trucks and in the summer it's so hot you could fry eggs up there."

Winn isn't alone. The Winchester Taxi Owners Association has filed for a rate increase request with the Board of Selectmen. On Monday, the selectmen will vote on the increase, the first since 1974. The current rate is approximately $1.25 for the first mile. The taxi owners are requesting $2 a mile for the first mile.

"If you're spending all of your profits on gas, you might as well close up," said Bob Pacy of Bob's Taxi. "The rate increase would offset our terrible ordeal. I've been eating cost increases now for years. And we tried smaller cars, but they just don't work."

"We have to raise prices," said John W. Lane III of Lane Limo Service. "The people understand that."

Town officials, too, are struggling with the increases in gasoline and other forms of energy.

Building Commissioner Dominic Serratore chairs an energy task force comprised of representatives from the school, public works, library, fire and police departments.

Each representative reports their monthly energy consumption and the Red Cross On Job For 100 Years

Come fire, wind, or high water, the American Red Cross has been helping to relieve suffering now for 100 years. Its primary mission, disaster relief, dates back to 1881 when the fledgling organization sent supplies by rail and horse-drawn wagons to aid families left destitute by forest fires in Michigan.

But it was not until 1905, in its congressional charter, that the Red Cross received official recognition as this nation's primary volunteer disaster relief agency.

Today, the Red Cross expends approximately $30 million annually to help victims of disasters that occur on an average of once every 14 minutes. Its help is there whether the disaster is a neighborhood fire, a chemical spill, a thundering hurricane, or a blinding blizzard.

The most costly disaster in Red Cross history was the 1937 Ohio-Mississippi Flood at $25 million; the second most costly was the track Tropical Storm Agnes made up the east coast in 1972 — $23 million.

In Winchester, trained volunteers have responded to a series of house fires within the past year, such as the Webster st. fire, providing immediate assistance where necessary. In addition, Winchester volunteers have assisted other Red Cross chapters in running shelters for the victims of the Somerville chemical spill and the Beacon Chambers fire.

The core of Red Cross disaster assistance is provided by volunteers. Their training includes disaster preparedness planning, mass evacuation and sheltering, feeding, emergency medical aid before and after, financial assistance and casework service.

Since the passage of the Federal Disaster Relief Act of 1974, the Red Cross has worked closely with the Federal Emergency Management Agency. FEMA offers long-range assistance; the Red Cross offers immediate assistance. At major disasters in recent years, the Red Cross and FEMA have instituted "one-stop assistance centers" where victims seeking help can find it at one central location with each agency able to make immediate referral to another if it does not solve a problem. Whereas FEMA is funded by the federal government, the Red Cross operates solely on voluntary contributions from the American people. Monies spent on disaster victims are sums freely given by Americans to other Americans as gifts to aid them over their immediate plight.

The blessings of modern technology pose new problems for the Red Cross in disaster relief. The Three Mile Island

Ken Pauley Speaks To Students At St. Mary's School

Ken Pauley, from the Museum of Science, presented a program of scientific experiments to the children of St. Mary's School recently.

Pauley, an educator as well as a scientist, told the children that science, as it is usually taught in school is "history and recipes." He believes instead that "science is a question that doesn't have an answer."

The children participated in many experiments staged by Pauley in which he taught them to keep an open mind, and to report what they saw, rather than what they thought they saw.

In one experiment, demonstrating the effects of pollution on the air and water, he mixed together two colorless chemicals in a beaker. After a count of five, the liquids in the beaker turned murky brown. This demonstrated that apparently harmless and pure substances, when mixed, can produce pollution, and that this process can be a delayed one.

Pauley continued with several experiments on various subjects, such as heat, cold, solutions and chemical reactions.

Parents Sponsor 'Specialty Day'

The fourth, fifth and sixth graders at Ambrose recently participated in "Specialty Day," sponsored by the Ambrose Parents Association and coordinated by Liz Sayre, Enrichment Chairperson.

Persons who agreed to share their time and talents on March 3, represented the following careers and specialties: Architect - Philip Locashio; Computers - Lloyd Franke; Editor, the Boston Globe - Frank Mahoney;

Theater - Cathy Alexander; Sports Medicine - Lisa Harris; Plumber - Jim McGeehan; Banking - Jessie Lamiae; Educator, Coach - Van French; Graphic Design - Susie McLean; Newsreading - Liz Walker; Town Management - Tom Groux; Meteorology - Harvey Leonard; Archivist - Susan Keats.

The objective of the program is to provide an informal look at career possibilities for the students. They were allowed to select one specialty for each of the two hours.

Twenty to thirty minute presentations by a guest included an explanation of his occupation, what he does during a typical day, other opportunities within his field, the course of study or training which he followed and additional possibilities forecast for the field in the future.

Guests were also encouraged to bring brochures and hands-on equipment and materials and time was set aside for the children's questions.

This Ambrose tradition has become an eagerly awaited event by the upper grade children. The wide variety of fields represented provided the students with an encompassing and interesting look at the career world which they will inhabit.

Emily Schmale, Andrea Battinelli, Alison Stackpole, Colleen Green and Tracey Welch want to remind you to attend the Ambrose School Fun Fair on March 14 from 11 to 3 p.m.

CAR CARE CORNER

Mario Scenna, Serv. Mgr.

The most common cause of overheating is a low water level in the radiator, so check that first. If it's low, start the engine and slowly add water with the engine idling. Keep an eye on it, though, and if the coolant level appears to be dropping, check on a leak somewhere. Besides leaks, and low water, the things that can overheat your engine are a bad thermostat, loose fan belt, crud in the cooling system, improper ignition timing, and a stuck heat rise, in that order of probability. So if there's plenty of water in the radiator and overheating persists, check the fan belt, and if that's okay, check the ignition timing, if it's way off, that could be your problem.

'I couldn't ask for a better ending... I knew I didn't want to leave with my last match a loss.'

—Gary Errico

THE EASY ROAD?—Gary Errico was crowned New England's best 171-pound wrestler last weekend but it took three wins to do it and the last two were not your Garden Party variety. In the two top photos he is battling with Westford Academy's Todd Grantham, a match Errico pulled out in the last 15 seconds after trailing 4-2. In the bottom photo he's struggling to put away Cumberland's Wayne Hoyter, which he did impressively, 9-5, to take the New England title.

(Staff Photos by Marc McGeehan)

Errico: Perfect Ending

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

The emotions told the story. That Gary Errico was the best 171-pound wrestler in New England was naturally a significant achievement in itself. But the way the normally reserved Errico reacted, along with his family, indicated just how important. There could no longer be any question, any doubt: He was the best.

And the biggest tip-off that this was an accomplishment of major proportions was easily recognizable by anyone who has watched Errico perform as a football player and wrestler for the last two seasons. He was flashing wide grins. Real wide.

After he had defeated Wayne Hoyter of Cumberland, R.I., 9-5, for the New England title Saturday in Nashua, N.H., he hugged both head coach Larry Tremblay and Asst. Coach Ted Neill, quietly remarking, "I love both you guys."

The next hugger was Mom, who stood on the side crying as he wrapped up the victory.

And his father, Richard, stood quietly watching the spectacle with Tremblay, saying simply, "I've been waiting for this day."

Afterwards it was off to the house of Errico's cousin in Nashua where the celebration continued and Anheuser-Busch made up for any drop in sales for the month. It was fun time and the senior wrestler, who had narrowly escaped elimination in the semi-finals, relished the triumph more than his many previous achievements.

"I couldn't ask for a better ending. It's a good way to have your high school career end. Going into the finals I was thinking, 'second place would be good too.' But then the more I thought about it I knew I didn't want to leave with my last match a loss," Errico said.

"The states are big but this is really great," Errico continued. "In Massachusetts there are two divisions, two state champs. So you always have to wonder if the other kid was better. So this was a pretty good feeling," he added with an uncharacteristic laugh.

That was exactly what happened last season when Errico went to the New England championships as the Mass. Division I runnerup and was quickly eliminated by the Mass. Division II winner. This year, no more doubts.

Tremblay, who sometimes sounds like a Jerry Kapstein clone fighting to put Errico in the Dave Winfield salary class, was genuinely impressed with the guy who gave him his first state and New England champion in just his second year of coaching.

"He's one of a kind," Tremblay marveled afterwards. "No matter how long I coach I know there won't be another like him. He just has so much natural ability. He's aggressive and has as good balance as anyone I've ever seen," he added.

Errico opened against Rhode Island's Bob DiMuccio and neither he nor Tremblay, understandably, knew anything about him. Sort of.

"I knew his father (DiMuccio's) and he had been an All American at Springfield," Tremblay explained. "I didn't know what to expect from the kid. So Gary went out and beat him 13-1."

Then after a pleasant three hour break Errico dualed Westford Academy's Todd Grantham, the Mass. Division II runnerup. That match-up caused Tremblay mental anguish after he saw that Grantham had lost to Division II winner Tom Kowalski by a point, the same Tom Kowalski who had beaten Woburn's Keith McLaughlin by a point Saturday afternoon. And he quickly discovered he had cause for concern.

Grantham dominated the first two periods and with just 15 seconds left in the match, led Errico 4-2. Then, as he has all season, when in a jam hit 'em with a Peterson Roll. And sure enough, it worked. Again.

"I was going for broke because I was losing," Errico recalled calmly. "I was losing 4-2 when I hit him with a Peterson with 15 seconds to go. I had tried to do it earlier but I couldn't. And the way I hit it this time was different. It wasn't a roll. You can roll or lean back into him but you do it from the same position. This time I leaned back into him," Errico explained.

It worked enough to get two points for the reversal and tie the match but it didn't produce the usual additional two or three points for the back points because Grantham was out of bounds.

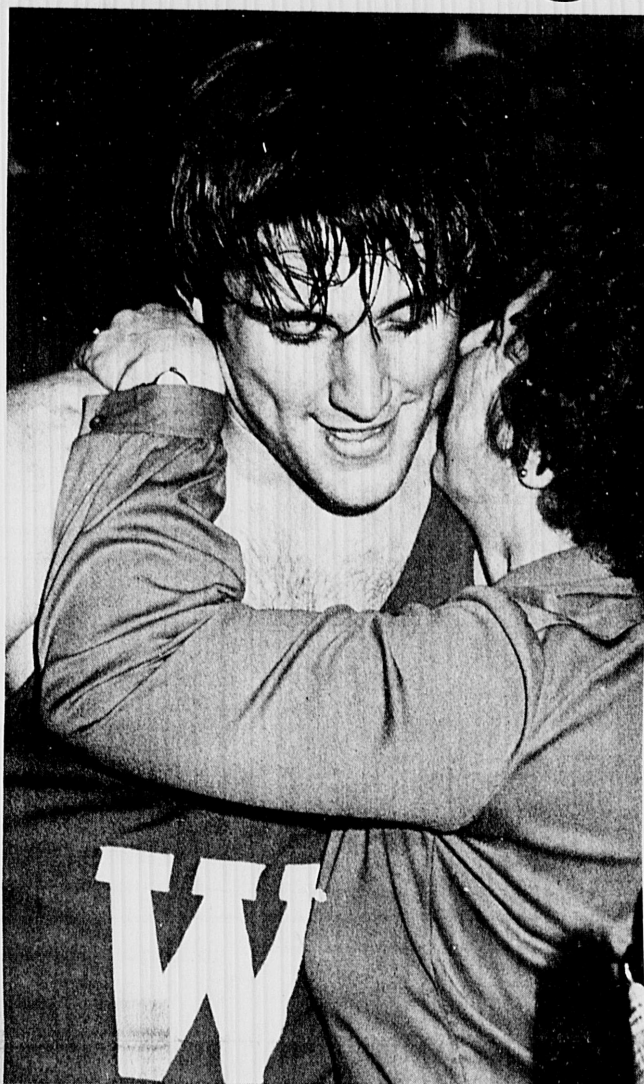

"It was just a matter of spinning my body and once I did he spun too and then I got the back points," Errico said.

Tremblay doesn't quite remember it being that simple.

"He couldn't get the back points because his (Grantham's) shoulders were out of bounds," Tremblay said. "I screamed at him, 'rotate him in, you are not getting any back points.' And he did so he got the three back points and won it 7-4."

The championship was almost anticlimactic at that point and Errico literally strolled to a 9-5 victory after opening up an early lead over Cum-

Glynn, Durante 3rd In Easterns

It was a case of their best simply not being good enough.

Winchester High freshman Laurie Glynn (mile) and senior Kathy Durante (shot put) both recorded personal highs in their events at Harvard last Saturday and both were only good enough for third place finishes.

But considering that the opposition came from states all along the eastern seaboard, it's not bad. Not bad, at all. Glynn chopped almost four full seconds off her state title time with a 4:56.9 mile Saturday, just the second time she had broken the five minute mark. She ran a 5:00.2 in winning the state title in the mile two weeks ago.

"Breaking five minutes is one thing but 4:56 is another," Glynn's Coach, Tom Kline, said admirably.

Glynn wasn't quite as impressed, though, either with her own performance or with the abilities of the two people that finished in front of her, Ceci Hopp of Greenwich, Conn. (4:45.1) and Lisa Welch of Peabody (4:53.4). All three times were course records in the event.

"I was at the back of the pack. I didn't start well," Glynn explained afterwards. "And I wasn't dead at the end so I thought I should have done better."

When asked if she was impressed with her first look at the heralded Hopp, Glynn just shrugged. "Not really."

Laurie Glynn

.... unimpressed

Kathy Durante

.... Finally, 40 feet

"Getting the 40 feet was the thing and I did it on my last throw. I came close to not getting my winter goal. It didn't feel any different when I threw it. But I saw a four where he was measuring it and when he said 40 feet I went through the roof," she laughed again.

Durante was also pleased that she finished higher than two personal nemesis, Michele Millane of North Quincy and Sadie Washum of Hyde Park. Millane and Washum finished fourth and fifth respectively with neither one topping 40 feet.

Washum was the one Durante really wanted, however. "I was glad I was able to find out I could beat her because she couldn't compete in the states," Durante said.

Kline was pleased with both girls' performances. "Both had set these goals and worked hard for them all season so I was happy to see it," he said.

After taking state championships and third places in the easterns, the pair might be expected to take a break from the usual routine. Sure. How about one day?

The two started spring track practice Monday where Glynn expects to run the 880, mile and two-mile for Coach Manny Marshall and Durante hopes to hone her skills in her favorite event, the discus.

You'll Be Stupified

Still being relatively new to the newspaper business I am constantly seeking ways to improve myself.

Now I know some of you might be saying to yourselves, "Sure, but without success." That's okay, though, because I'm trying.

Of course, there is a big difference between news and sportswriting. A news story is a rather straightforward account of what happened or what will happen. It's filled with words like agenda, proposal and quorum. Official words, straightforward words. The same old stuff every time out.

Sportswriting and newswriting are like night and day. Totally different. There's the sporting slang like "pigskin" for football or the "hot corner" for third base.

Then, of course, there are the time-tested cliches like "he went for all the marbles on that one" or "they're so tight, they squeak." At least, I think that's one.

What I'm trying to say is that it isn't easy to come up, week after long week, some cliches you can truly call your own. Or that are sanctioned by the real pros, the Big Guys, of sportswriting.

Until now.

My managing editor threw me a real change-up last week when he handed me Editor & Publisher magazine's official list of "heads-up sports verbs."

Absolutely everything you wanted to know about sportswriting or sports cliches all wrapped up in one tidy package and reportedly culled from the roster of Big Time daily newspapers.

Although I was floored at first by my boss' flagrant brushback toss, I climbed out of the dirt and faced him like a man. After all, like I said, I am anxious to learn.

And lucky for me I'm not too thick-skinned because this little sports thesaurus is a goldmine, I tell you. The basic sports story, E&P confirmed, is "about someone losing and someone winning, in the past or future. To make that worth reading, sportswriters and editors have developed synonyms without end for win and lose."

There's nothing earth shattering about that disclosure. But, hold on, it gets better.

E&P further suggested that the use of the passive voice can be powerful since there are few verbs meaning "to lose." So by substituting the passive voice, "win" verbs can amazingly be turned into "lose" verbs.

For instance, E&P points out, "Hometowners are hogtied, 3-0" is as forceful as "Visitors hoggie Hometowners." You're telling me. What a knockout punch that passive voice carries. Boy.

Then E&P goes on to list scores of verbs that can transform even the dullest sports scribe into a Major Leaguer.

Yes, It's Playoff Time

After a few months of fierce weekly duels, the Girls Basketball League is ready for its playoff championships Saturday. In the junior division the semi-finals will kick off at 1 p.m. and the championship will start at 1:30 p.m. Trophies will be awarded to the champions. In the Senior Division the Celtics and the 76ers will square off for that title at 3 p.m. If that battle is anything like the semi-finals last weekend, which saw the Celtics explode in the second half for a 10-point victory over the Schems and the 76ers hold off the Lakers for a 34-24 win, it should be a dandy. The consolation game between the Schems and the Lakers will start at 2 p.m.

St. Mary's Falls In CYO Hockey Finals

St. Mary's CYO hockey squad lost to St. Theresa's of West Roxbury in the championship finals of the CYO league last Sunday at Boston College by a score of 7-5.

In a valiant attempt, St. Mary's undermanned team with four players out due to injuries, came back from a 6-2 third period deficit to come within a goal of tying the game. St. Theresa's hung on for the championship with the last goal going into an open net. St. Mary's final record was 10-1-2.

Members of this years team, coached by Ken Donaghey and Tim Sullivan were: Paul Ferullo, Rick Parker, Tim Donaghey, Dan Sullivan, Bob DiVincenzo, Bill Eaton, Tom Parece, Coley Wilson, Larry Maida, Paul Tucci, Tony Celi, Ed Peduto, Ivan Burnejo, Eric Donaghey, Andy Gulerserian, Steve Dionne, Pat Falla and Ed Ferullo.

HAPPY DAYS—At least for the Errico family. New England wrestling champ Gary Errico puts his arm around his mother and father after Saturday's triumph.

berland's Hayter. But that's not to say Hayter was any slouch. He had whipped the above mentioned Kowalski, 14-2, in an earlier match-up before last Saturday's meeting.

"Gary really looked good in the finals. He wrestled real well. A lot of kids win the states and slack off. But Gary really wanted this one," Tremblay said, adding that his prize wrestler would be off to The Boston Globe on Tuesday for a photo session necessitated by his being named to the Globe All-Scholastic wrestling team.

Once Errico got past Grantham in the semis he suspected there would be a happy ending.

"The better the competition is, the better he wrestles," Tremblay said. "When he lost in the sectionals to the kid from Wellesley (Jim Rodgers) he had no respect for the kid. If I had told him before the match that he had just beat me up in the lockerroom or something Gary would have gone out and beat."

Errico wasn't quite so confident of success, especially in the early going against Grantham.

ready to quit," he said. "He was on top of me a long time and I just kept spinning out. I think he outwrestled me but I got him with the Peterson!" Errico said simply.

Tremblay only had three regrets after this tournament was over. "I just wish there were more tournaments," he laughed, paused a minute and added, "I thought Gary really should have gotten Outstanding Wrestler (Bocker Benford of Providence got it at 159)."

The third regret is something for the Girls Basketball Regular Season Ends, Playoffs Saturday Afternoon

Last weeks Girls Basketball action began with lots of excitement as the first Junior Division Shootout was held. The girls each competed in their grade level with 3 minute rounds held to determine the winner.

For Grade 3, Maureen Kenny took first place honors with 22 baskets, Kristen Constantino was second and Cheryl Casolinovo third. It was Sarah Wilson in first for Grade 4 as Beth Herlihy clinched second with Jodi McCoy third. For Grade 5 Emily Doherty was tops with a Shootout record 26 hoops taking first place, Amy Derry finished a close second with Patti Adelsberger in third.

This Saturday the girls in the Junior Division get psyched for the playoffs for the league championship, the Red Team squares off against the Blue at 1 p.m. with the championship game at 1:30 with trophies awarded to the team finishing on top.

In the Senior Division semi-final playoff action one could compare the results to the pros as the 76's and Celtics were victorious clinching a spot in the final championship game Saturday at 3 p.m.

The Sachem-Celtic game was packed with enthusiasm as both teams and the crowd felt the adrenalin flowing. It was a closely played contest with the score at the half leaving the Celtics on top 16-14 which proved to be the story as the game ended with a Celtic victory 34-24.

Susan Barbaro was the difference as she had the hot hand once again popping in 24 points for the Celts. Amy Peluso had six points and Lisa Galante added four points to contribute to the victory. For the Sachems who ended the regular season on top, Karen Serieka finished with 12 points and an outstanding effort. Laura Accardo chipped in eight with Sarah Stanton and MaryBeth Celli also hit for hoops.

In a consolation game deciding 5th and 6th place the Bruins played their best game ever led by coach Ann Scannell to defeat the Bullets, 29-28. MaryPat Furey was hot with 10 points and with some outstanding play by Barb Delaney 9 points and Ellen Clavin 4 points the Bruins had a come from behind victory. Patty Taylor did it all for the Bullets, hitting for 24 points.

Saturday's championship game begins at 3 p.m. and looks to be a very exciting contest with the winning team receiving trophies. A consolation game to decide 3rd and 4th place will begin at 2 p.m. between the Lakers vs. Sachems. The AllStar team will be named at 4 p.m. along with other awards. Spectators are invited to attend.

MANHATTANVILLE SWIM CAPTAIN—Senior Carol Minutoli is captain of the Manhattanville College women's swimming team this season. She is shown with Coach John Collins. She will compete in distance freestyle events at the New York State AIAW Championships at Cortland, N.Y., Feb. 27-March 1. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Minutoli, 17 James st.

Girls Softball Registration March 22

Enthusiasm is running high as Winchester begins the formation of the first Girls Softball League. The league promises to be as successful if not more, than the recently dissolved Winchester Girls Baseball League.

Registration for the league will be held at the Winchester Sports Shop from March 22 - April 4. Each player will be charged a fee of $10 which includes shirt and cap for the season.

The league will be divided into a Junior Division - Grades 3-5 and a Senior Division - Grades 6-8. The season will start the first week in May and will run through the month of June.

We hope to gain recognition by Winchester citizens as an official league. Donations from various service clubs or business would be greatly appreciated to cover equipment and trophy costs. Donations would also allow us to pay umpires, as of now it is a total volunteer basis.

If you are interested in coaching, your help would be greatly appreciated as we are looking for volunteer coaches for the upcoming 1981 season. Help this younger generation of athletes discover the fun, excitement and competition of a softball experience. If you are interested or have any questions contact Donna Tanner, League President, at 729-6253.

future. Like next year when Tremblay has to coach an Errico-less club.

"I know I don't have another kid like him next year," Tremblay said. "But I'm still glad I came to Winchester. I didn't know what I was getting into when I first got here. But the kids have been great as well as the parents. They've really wanted a good wrestling program."

But he admits he wasn't sure what Errico wanted when he started practice in November.

"When I came in he'd always been the big wheel in the school and here I came in throwing him around. But he handled it real well and we've become super pals," Tremblay said.

But Errico insists it was worth it, adding that he's a leader of the Larry Tremblay Fan Club. He credits Tremblay with turning a 5-9 team into an 11-5 club and he certainly values Tremblay's early season advice to forego the quick pins he could have had against weak opponents so he would build up endurance. It's all been worth it.

"This is a pretty good feeling. It's sort of like the frosting on the cake. I couldn't have asked for a better ending."

For Montuori and Leonards 76er team it was a quick 13-2 first quarter lead that they never let up as they downed a tough Laker squad, 34-24. For the 76's it was Kristen McNamara's sharp shooting and dominating board work (18 points) along with Mich Powers nine points and key hoops by Carey MacDonald, Danielle Dulong and Lisa Greco that proved too much for the Lakers. Carpenteri and Carrolls Laker squad without the services of Paula Ricciardielli and Laurie Scherwin due to quick fouls were fighting all the odds. Debbie Cahill finished tops in scoring with 10 points as Laurie Scherwin's eight and Ellen Donahoe's four were not enough to stop a powerful 76er team.

In the "win" category, one can choose from a host of pinch hitters like axe, upend, lick, outpoint, polish off and knock off, out or over. And, believe it or not, they had plenty more.

The second round featured the subs for "Big Wins". They included such classics as maul, skin, clobber, exterminate and cakewalk. If you thought they were heavy hitters, ponder this additional line-up of "Big Win" winners: emasculate, steam roll and, yes, the dreaded disembowel as in "Bears Disemboweled, End In Sight."

E&P touches all the bases at some point, with reserves for "easy win" (waltz in) "close win" (snip) and "surprise win" (my personal favorite - stupify).

For the "prevent score" line-up E&P sends out skunk, choke (off), the aforementioned hogtie, paralyze' goose-egg and short-circuit.

And how about that "lose by a little" contingent? What could possibly say it better than the seldom used, "go down fighting" or "lose by a whisker?"

But enough is enough. Armed to the hilt with my new list, I know I can show my editor that I belong with the Big Guys. I know he'll be stupified with my new handle on this stuff. If he isn't, someone is sure to be. I'll betcha.

HOW TO CUT HOME FUEL BILLS

Home heating bills can really hurt during winter months. Here are some cost-cutting tips.

Be sure your entire house is well insulated — especially under the roof where heat escape is the greatest. It is estimated that a proper insulation job, done from scratch, will pay for itself within five years.

Be sure, too, that you have tight-fitting storm windows and doors. Fit alone can make a tremendous difference in heat loss and often a few dollars worth of weather stripping can close off expensive heat escape routes.

And here are some measures you can take routinely: Turn your thermostat down ten degrees each night. Keep doors closed to rooms that you are not using and draw curtains and drapes closed at night. These last three simple steps alone can easily cut your overall fuel bill by 10 to 15 percent.

group explores areas where departments can economize. "I total the sheets and see who has been good and who has been bad," said Serratore. "But we'll probably be short of money by June of this year because of the rising prices."

The current town budget for energy was cut by $115,000 by the December Town Meeting because estimates made at this time last year appeared to be too high. "Within weeks or less of the Town Meeting action, the oil and gas prices were climbing dramatically," said Groux.

"It looks like we're in trouble," said Serratore. "We're in a real state of fluctuation."

The fluctuation, however, is not in price increases and decreases but simply in how fast the prices rise. And that spells trouble. "It is an understatement to say that the gas price rise has changed people's lifestyles," said Robert Boyd, of Dix st. "It has dramatically affected everyone down the line in one way or another."

Seventeen-year-old Rolison summed up everyone's basic problem: "I used to cruise a lot but I don't cruise anymore and you want to know why? Money. Money. Money!"

Winchester High School's musical THE BOYFRIEND played to enthusiastic, standing-room only audiences last Thursday, Friday and Saturday evening.

The light-hearted spoof of Twenties musicals was an ideal choice to showcase the talents of the WHS Curtain and Cue Club members. Their youthful vitality and limitless energy was ably channeled by director Joann Stevens. The foot-tapping music was supplied by an orchestra under the direction of Burt Cowgill. Add the dazzling array of colorful costumes, flashy Paris-in-the-Twenties sets and we had a "can't miss" musical.

Nan Keller in the lead role of Polly Browne ended her high school acting career in a blaze of glory. She combined a fine campy performance as "a poor little rich girl" with graceful dancing and knock-out singing. Her diction was crystal clear and precise, her singing voice wonderfully rich and warm. Her breath-takingly beautiful "Poor Little Pierrette" duet with Criss Currier was deservedly a show stopper.

Kevin Merritt made his WHS musical debut as Polly's boyfriend, the handsome Tony Brockhurst. It was love at first sight as they sang, "I Could Be Happy With You." Without doubt, Kevin will be appearing in future Curtain and Cue productions.

Criss Currier handled the difficult and busy role of Headmistress Madame Dubonnet with great aplomb. She was required to keep her perfect young ladies under control, maintain her French accent and warm up her "damp blanket" of an old lover, Percival Browne. Elegant and warm hearted, she proved irresistible to Percival, played well by Brian Milauskas. Their rendition of "Fancy Forgetting" was expressively sung and utterly charming.

Vivacious Jean Senna was outstanding as the bubbly young lady, Maisie. She lit up the stage with her zippy dancing and sparkling singing. She and Adam Leach, who played her boyfriend Bobby, brought down the house with their snappy Charleston number.

Dan Schutzberg, Melissa Eugley, Laura Cunningham and Valerie Kolligian made a dynamite comedic foursome. Dan, as Lord Brockhurst was hilarious, hijinxing his way around the stage as the husband with a wandering eye. Laura was perfect as his dreary prune-faced wife trying without success to keep him in line. Luthesome Valerie, as Madame Dubonnet's French maid, was both funny and endearing. As full-of-the-devil young lady Dulcie, Melissa delighted the audience with her expressive mannerisms and saucer eyes. Dan and Melissa's song, "It's Never Too Late to Fall in Love," was one of the comic highlights of the show.

Lisa Hirschhorn, Emily Stevens, Betsy Thomas, Whitney Redding, Cynthia White and Margie Johnson as the other perfect young ladies were adorable. Their voices were lovely and their high spirits contagious.

Their debonair boyfriends, Peter Gittleman, Paul Hodes, Gordon Shaw, Michael Trabucco, Mark Mongiello, Artie Oliver and Dominic Shea aided by waiter, Tom Hanlon and gendarme Andy Matrudola also contributed a great deal to the success of the musical.

The dance numbers in THE BOYFRIEND were exceptional. The Carnival Tango performed by Jennifer Poulos as Lolita and her Spanish Blossoms (Jill Mirak, Anne Pharo, Carol Rigby and Marinea Sartori) was well choreographed and professional. The enthusiastic reception given the ensemble dances was a tribute to the cast's talent and hard work and that of choreographer Darlene Wigton. Members of the chorus were Ann Morgan, David Donovan, Tom Hanlon, Ann Hitchcock, Anne Milburn, Doug Oram, Dan Parsignault, Sonia Stryker, Alesia Traingale and Yann Zombeck.

Everyone connected with this musical obviously contributed 100 per cent. So it is no wonder that THE BOYFRIEND was such a SWEETHEART of a production. (Peggy Hallisey is a Winchester resident and mother of a WHS student.)

Winchester: 'An Oasis For Burglars'

By ROBIN WIEST
Star Reporter-Intern

In the last 25 years, the incidence of breaking and entering in Winchester has gone up almost 1,000 percent, reaching an average of four incidents a week in the last six years.

What's more, stolen property is rarely recovered. Of a yearly average of 225 cases of breaking and entering (including commercial buildings, garages and automobiles), only 25 are solved.

Police Chief J. P. McHugh said that despite a decline in incidents in 1980, breaking and entering remains the biggest problem in Winchester in terms of frequency and monetary losses.

"Let's face it, Winchester is good pickins," he said. "There aren't a goodly number of poor people in Winchester. Americans are very affluent — look at our cars, the way we dress, our acquisition of worldly things. Every house and every apartment here would be lucrative to a person who breaks in."

"Winchester is like a green oasis for burglars," he said. "It's an all-residential area waiting for the kill."

McHugh's assessment is supported by area insurance, lock and watchdog companies.

Winchester insurance companies contacted by The Star said they have noticed an increase in their clients filing claims for burglary.

Jay Finn of the Jay M. Finn Insurance Agency on Thompson st., said he has seen a rise of about 30 percent in burglaries in the past three years. "As inflation increases, and money gets more expensive, they will continue to rise," he said.

Tommy Tufts, the manager of Fells Hardware Store on Main st., said he has noticed a definite increase in deadbolt lock sales. "We get people down here at least once a week for house breaks," he said.

And a saleswoman at the Pet Emporium in nearby Reading said that in the last few years she has sold at least 50 percent more German Shepherds and Doberman Pinschers for watchdogs than before.

What is the average Winchester burglar like? What specifically is he after? How does he break in? And what preventative measures can citizens take?

Detective Lieutenant Joseph N. Perritano said that Winchester is not being burglarized by the professional who stakes out a home and makes off with millions of dollars.

Perritano said the average burglar is a 17-to 25-year-old man from the Boston, Cambridge or Somerville area.

"They are predominantly drug-oriented and will steal for a quick turnover on anything they can sell," he said. "They are doing it out of desperation. They have a habit to support. They have to take care of themselves physically and they don't care who they burn."

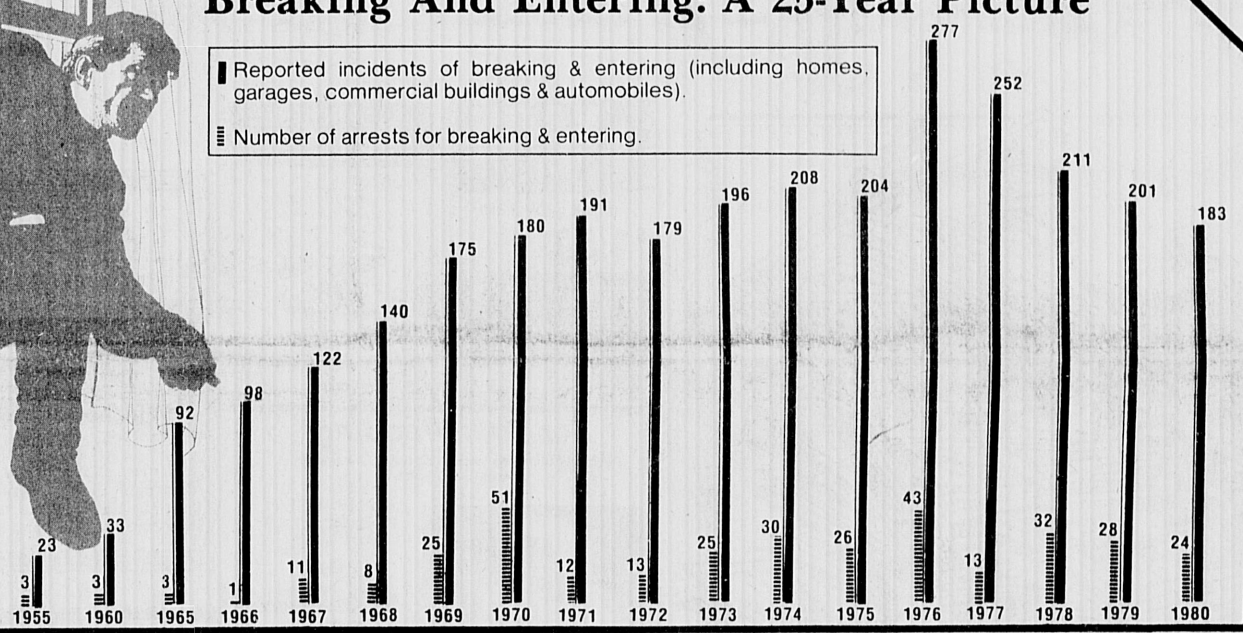

They will only steal what will meet demand, Perritano said. "And people are very, very willing to buy stolen property."

You Can't Stop Them, But...

By ROBIN WIEST
Star Reporter-Intern

You cannot stop a burglar if he is determined to break into your home. But you can slow him down with heavy-duty locks and alarms and he will usually move on to a house that is easier to enter.

Time, according to Crime Prevention Officer Kevin Mawn, is the determining factor in a burglary.

Aberjona Robbery Suspect Sought For Other Area Hold-Ups

By STEVEN AUSTIN

Local police believe the man who used an automatic pistol to take narcotics and an undetermined amount of cash from the Aberjona Pharmacy Friday before escaping into a waiting car was involved in similar robberies in Reading and Somerville.

"We're looking for two suspects," Police Chief John McHugh said Tuesday. "We put our information on the teletype and both Reading and Somerville contacted us, saying they'd had robberies with a similar MO (method of operation) and in one case, the same conversation."

According to police reports, a man wearing a ski mask entered the store around 6:27 p.m. Friday, cocked an automatic pistol and demanded drugs from pharmacist Patrick Palladino Jr.

There was a customer in the store at the time of the robbery, police reports said. The robber, according to police, told the customer, "I'm not going to hurt you. It's just a simple robbery."

Palladino pressed the silent alarm and turned over two bottles of percodan, a Class B opiate. (Class B narcotics include both percodan and percoset and rank second behind Class A narcotics, which include heroin and morphine.)

The gunman apparently not satisfied, demanded more drugs, which Palladino produced. The gunman stuffed a drawer of percodan and percoset into a brown bag he was carrying and cleaned out the cash register of an undetermined amount of cash.

The gunman then fled the store but prior to getting into the waiting car, removed the ski mask. Police arrived ten minutes later.

The robber is described as a white male, 6'2" tall, weighing 220 pounds, with dark, curly hair to his shoulders. He was wearing a gray, hooded sweatshirt and dark pants. His voice was described as high-toned but without a noticeable accent.

Police are operating on the theory that drugs, rather than money, were the reason behind the hold-up.

"He had a bag when he went in there," McHugh said, "so he went in there mostly for drugs."

McHugh said police believe the robber and the get-away car driver are currently "active in the greater Boston area."

The robbery Friday was the fifth in eleven years at the Aberjona Pharmacy. There have also been three burglaries at that location. Just last week, someone threw a brick through the window.

"They may have been testing the alarm system," Palladino told The Star, "but we can't be sure it was connected."

Facing An Automatic Pistol

Robbery Victim Stayed Cool

By STEVEN AUSTIN

Patrick Palladino Jr. was thirty minutes away from closing up at the Aberjona Pharmacy last Friday when a man wearing a ski mask and wielding an automatic pistol walked in the door.

Palladino, who was talking to the store's only customer at the time, pressed the silent alarm and waited behind the counter for the gunman.

Palladino had been in a similar situation before.

His Main st. pharmacy has been the target of five armed robberies in 11 years. It has also been the scene of three burglaries.

The robber was a big man — 6'2" and 220 pounds, according to police reports. When he cocked the pistol and pointed at the pharmacist, Palladino did the only thing he could do.

He cooperated.

"It's difficult," said Palladino Tuesday from behind that same counter. "Your adrenalin is pumping so hard that you can't think straight. But you cooperate. You don't resist in any manner, shape or form.

"Your life is priceless," he continued. "What you're giving away to the robber is replaceable. It's insured."

"It's extremely difficult to try to think with a gun pointed at you," Palladino said. "But you have to keep your cool and get a description."

That's the advice Palladino offers (Victim - Page 30)

Beach, Tennis Buffs Hit By 2½

Well sports fans, the Proposition 2.5 scores are in and it's at best a mixed bag.

The bad news is that Winchester will probably be a one-beach town this summer following a recommendation Monday by Recreation Department Director Ken Cereghino that Leonard Beach be closed as one effort to meet the requirements of 2.5.

The good news for swimmers is that the Board of Selectmen gave a Cereghino suggestion to charge bathers a fee anything but a warm reception.

While a suggestion to charge swimmers sank like a stone, one which would charge a fee for the use of the clay tennis courts at Packer Courts on Lake st. got a warmer response.

In a two-hour appearance before Selectmen Monday, Cereghino outlined plans to reduce the recreation budget for fiscal 1982. In making his presentation, Cereghino said he was attempting to reduce appropriations to the department 36 percent over spending a year ago.

"I'm suggesting cuts that are what I feel to be in the best interest of the town in terms of trying to maintain some recreation for all age groups," Cereghino told the Board.

Cereghino had made budget requests totalling $89,000. Town Manager Tom Groux made additional cuts, leaving Cereghino with a $76,000 suggested budget for the coming year.

Cereghino said that while Leonard Beach has "potential for the future," Wedge Beach is "the better of the two choices right now."

While mentioning no specific figure in terms of a charge of beach users, Cereghino did support the institution of a such a fee.

That suggestions, however, didn't hold water in the eyes of Selectmen.

"We're getting a lot of static from Proposition 2.5," Selectman Michael Saraco said. "The message of Proposition 2.5 wasn't to increase fees. I oppose charging a fee for a kid to go swimming at a local beach. I'm strongly against it."

Selectman Alan Macdonald agreed, saying he could not support did Selectman John J. Williams.

Selectman Edward F. O'Connell, who chaired the meeting in the absence of Chairman Wade M. Welch, summoned up the feelings of the Board concerning the fee suggestion.

"I look at a beach as a natural resource, a gift from God," O'Connell explained. "I have difficulty accepting a fee for beach use."

"It's apparent now there will be only one beach open in the summer of 1981," O'Connell said.

Town Council Douglas Randall suggested posting Leonard Beach in order to avoid possible liability on the part of the town.

Concerning the charge for the use of the Packer Clay courts clay tennis courts, Selectmen volleyed around a number of figures but made no decision as to what charge would be.

Cereghino estimated the courts were used by 12,000-14,000 player a year at a cost of $50,000 in maintenance.

Macdonald suggested a $25 fee but O'Connell thought that figure a bit high. He suggested individuals be charged $20 while families would be charged $25.

Selectman Williams suggested the Board defer a decision on the fee until the full Board was present.

Macdonald will meet with Cereghino on this fee and report the results of that meeting to Selectmen next Monday night.

Selectmen Vow To Fight For Needs Program

A six-week summer program for 10 Winchester special needs students was apparently spared the Proposition 2.5 axe Monday after Selectmen vowed to fight for funds on the floor of Town Meeting.

The program, a summer camp run jointly with the town of Lexington, was one of those targeted for elimination by Recreation Department Director Ken Cereghino in an effort to meet the mandates of Proposition 2.5.

In discussing the elimination of the program, Cereghino said, "This is the program I have the greatest difficulty with cutting. This is the only one which can't be combined with another area" in the recreation department budget.

The program, which is 50 percent reimbursable through the state, cost $6,451 to run last summer, Cereghino said. Of that amount, $3,737 went for personnel costs, $2,610 went for transportation costs and $104 went for miscellaneous materials.

Costs estimates for running the program this summer, Cereghino said, were at $4,000, without transportation costs. The net cost to the town would be $2,000 with the reimbursable status.

Transportation costs won't be a factor though, since parents attending Monday's meeting agreed to transport their children to Lexington if the program continues.

"I would hate to see this program stopped," said one parent. "As a matter of fact, I'll fight like hell to keep it."

The Board announced its intention to "fight like hell" to retain the program. "It's just a truism that someone is going to get hurt in this year's budget session," said Selectman Edward F. O'Connell. "One can't listen to this type of discussion and not feel compassion. I'd be willing to take a whack at it before Town Meeting."

O'Connell said the real question in retaining the program was whether to find needed funding by "displacing" an existing element in the Recreation Department's programs or by making the item a new budgetary request.

"It's my sense," O'Connell explained, "that the program will be retained, at least at its current level."

O'Connell found support for retaining the program from Board members.

"We're impacting the people who can afford it least," Selectman John J. Williams said.

Selectman Michael Saraco said he concurred "100 percent" with plans to keep the program.

While Selectman Alan Macdonald agreed, he did express caution in approaching the problem.

"We have our hands tied behind our backs," Macdonald said. "I can't say, without going through the list of Recreation Department programs, that we can find the money. Naturally, though, I'm sympathetic."

Cereghino thinks the money can be found.

"Right now," Cereghino explained, "the options are limitless."

A suggestion that parents pay for the program was not workable since costs would be prohibitive.

"When you talk fees," Cereghino said, "we really get into some big dollar figures." He said the program costs $293 per person after state reimbursement.

He did say the program was feasible if Winchester could give Lexington a commitment. Cereghino will meet with Macdonald this week to discuss other possible cuts. Macdonald will report the results of that meeting to the Board next week.

Other areas scheduled for examination include those programs run for senior citizens, the high school student union program, the July 4 celebration, tennis instruction, the junior high winter program and the school vacation program.

Parade Will Receive Funds

Things looked rough for the Memorial Day Parade early Monday evening.

Representatives of the V.F.W. and the American Legion told Selectmen the $1,250 budget for this year's parade simply wasn't enough.

There was dark talk about cutting down the traditional three-mile route. Veterans said they were approximately $1,000 short.

The veterans were faced with asking for donations from residents, businesses and organizations to make-up the difference.

However, the Board didn't think the donation route was the one to travel.

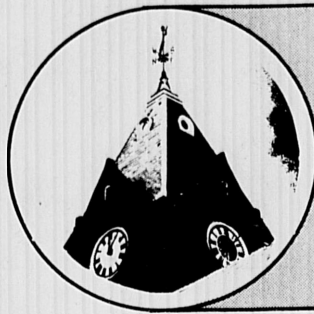

Following a talk later in the evening with Recreation Department Director Ken Cereghino, the Selectmen think they can find the parade money. Town

Comptroller Al Faggiano said there were some unexpended funds in the Recreation Department budget that could be used to provide the extra $1,000.

"I have some concern that it seems to be the trend of the day to water down everything," Selectman Edward F. O'Connell said. "It's beyond question that we all know our budget is tight. We're certainly going to seek a means to support your budget," he told the veterans. "We're certainly going to give it a whack."

Selectman Michael Saraco agreed. "If the town can't see fit to support the Memorial Day Parade, then I think we're in trouble."

But signs of trouble evaporated when Selectmen learned the town would be able to find the additional funds.

Music Program Offers Private Instructions

The Winchester Music Program, offering private instrumental lessons and ensembles, has begun a pilot program for thirty students during after school hours at McCall Junior High School.

Teachers chosen for their training and their interest in teaching come each week to work individually with flute, percussion, and trombone students and to coach flute and brass ensembles. Sponsored by the McCall Parents' Association and developed in cooperation with the Belmont Music School, the program will expand next year to include more instruments.

Music Department Chairman Burton Cowgill and the music staff of the Winchester Public Schools have endorsed the program. Robert Fitzgerald, principal of McCall, has made arrangements for the program coordinators, teachers and students at McCall.

Many junior and senior high school students have expressed an interest in the Music Program since they do not have access to lessons and small ensembles through the schools.

Plans are now being made for the 1981-82 year. For further information call the coordinators: Corie Nichols (729-7446) and Sandy Thompson (729-8063).

Committee To Vote On $213,000 Cut On Monday

The School Committee expects to determine where an additional $213,000 can be cut from its 1982 budget Monday night.

The new cuts will bring the total school reduction to $963,000. School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander said school closings would not be necessary to accommodate the additional cuts. However, she added that if Town Meeting rejects water rate hikes and the implementation of a sewer use charge there's "no doubt there would be school closings."

The schools would have to cut an approximate $700,000 more if those revenue increases aren't approved by Town Meeting.

The $213,000 that the committee will try to take a final vote on Monday was approved by the committee as a bottom line figure last week. That amount was agreed to after a sub-committee had met with Selectmen earlier to discuss how a $362,000 cut needed to present a balanced budget to the Finance Committee should be shared. The school department said they could cut an additional $150,000, the town $86,000 more and the two would split the remaining $126,000.

"Monday night we hope to take a final vote on the reductions that will comprise the $213,000," Alexander said. She added that the committee does not necessarily have to reach a final decision on that night.

"The Finance Committee would appreciate the School Committee acting as quickly as possible. However, we already met the bottom line figure. Line items should be in the german of the School Committee," Alexander said.

The committee is not expected to make any decisions on the school closings until Town Meeting votes on the user fee increases, Alexander added.

The meeting Monday night at Sanborn House will start at 7:30 p.m.

Ambrose Students Zapped

Several enrichment experiences were provided for the Children at Ambrose School recently.

The Ambrose Parents Association with the coordination of Enrichment Chairperson Liz Sayre presented visits to Grades three and five, by representatives of the Boston Edison Public Information Department.

"Electric Safety from A to Zap", a unit taught in two parts which teaches the basic rules for using electricity safely, was presented to the younger children. It made use of an animated film and a six-volt demonstration panel with which the children learned about circuits, switches and fuses.

"Stay Clear, Stay Alive" was a lesson in outdoor electrical safety for the older students. A Boston Edison lineworker, complete with hardhat and appropriate safety gear, presented a film and demonstrated his equipment. Dangers in electric wires and cables, transmission towers, transformers and substations were addressed.

Unions Discount Strike

Leaders of unions representing local policemen, firemen and public workers have discounted work actions or strikes as an option should the mandate of Proposition 2.5 force layoffs in those departments.

Winchester will have to cut an additional $1 million if Town Meeting fails to approve proposals to increase water rates by 21 cents, institute a sewer use fee and tap the Stabilization and Sale of Land Account Funds, according to Town Manager Tom Groux.

Groux, who is currently at work on a list of cuts should that approval not be obtained, said layoffs in police, fire and the public works departments were "about the only place where any large cuts can happen."

The unions are currently meeting with Groux in an attempt to make necessary cuts in meeting the requirements of 2.5.

While Groux said he hadn't given the groups a target figure as far as an amount to cut is concerned, he said he outlined "eight or nine" areas for study. He declined to be specific on those areas, saying he felt such specifics would affect "the confidentiality" of those discussions.

Groux said all three unions had formally notified him that they did not want to re-open contract negotiations.

John Regan, President of the 48-member fire fighters' union said, "We're not going to let our brothers get hurt or the town suffer from lack of services. We know what it takes to do the job and we are considering the areas the town has suggested."

Regan also declined to specify those areas.

"We're trying to go as far as we morally can" in making the cuts, Regan said.

Ralph DiMambro, President of the 75-member Town Employees Association said that while strikes or work actions wouldn't be considered, he didn't "think the boys were going to give up anything" in terms of the negotiated contract.

Sgt. Francis Manzie, Vice President of the 41-member union representing policemen, also discounted work actions or strikes as a response to possible layoffs.

"We have a good working relationship with the town fathers," Manzie said Monday. "There's a lot of understanding back and forth."

Town Meeting approved police, fire and public works contracts in November.

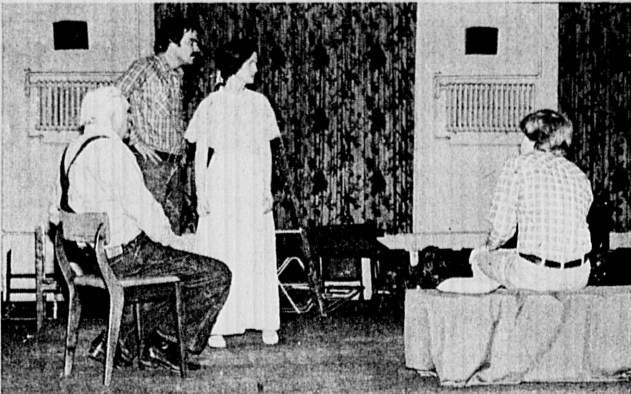

Under the terms of the three-year police pact, officers received a six and three-quarter percent salary hike for the 1982 fiscal year.

Under the two-year TEA contract, public workers received a 55 cent per hour increase.

Firemen received a four percent increase twice during fiscal 1982 under the terms of their three-year contract.

Even if the unions voted to give up all or a portion of these scheduled increases, Groux said the problem would remain.

"Town Meeting is the final arbiter," Groux said "so I can't guarantee that I could put the money back in the budget next year" if the unions voted to delay the increases.

"THE RAINMAKER" opens March 27 at Winchester's Unitarian Church. Pictured above are cast members Al Smith, Bob Ross, Lisa Foley and Eric Freeman.

Selectmen's Notes

Taxi Rates Increased

Taxi rates in Winchester were increased to $2 for the first mile and 15 cents per each one-tenth of a mile thereafter following a vote Monday by Selectmen.

Included in that rate increase was a requirement that cabs install meters by April 15.

The new rates replace the old structure which charged riders $1.25 for the first mile. The new rates include a provision for 50 cents per stop and 25 cents per each minute of waiting time during those stops.

The rate increase is the first taxi companies have received since 1974.

Warrant Closed

Selectmen Monday closed a 26-article warrant for this spring's Town Meeting. The Selectmen took no position on any of the articles and voted not to include one submitted by Fire Chief Robert McElhinney which would have required the installation of smoke detectors in all buildings.

The Board decided not to include the article, citing problems with enforcement.

Town Meeting is slated to begin April 27. This year's warrant also contains a provision for a special Town Meeting May 11 to consider articles dealing with the authorization of the sale of the Wyman School building and to consider zoning changes.

Applicants Interviewed

Selectmen interviewed three candidates for appointment on the Council on Youth Monday.

Howard Niblock, Berta Sawson and Veronica Fiorillo were interviewed for openings on the Council.

Selectman Alan Macdonald represent the Board on the Council.

Selectmen expect to finalize those appointments next Monday.

New Fine Structure Means Prompt Payment

While a decision to increase parking and traffic-related fines in Winchester doesn't seem to be cutting down on the number of tickets issued, those ticketed do seem to be paying those fines more promptly.

"The Court tells me the money's coming in very well," said Lt. Andrew Crawford.

Winchester's nine-year-old parking fine structure was updated recently, increasing fines that had been one and two dollars to three and five dollars respectively. Fines that were formerly three and five dollars were increased to ten dollars.

While those increases bring the local fine structure in line with penalties charged in surrounding towns, the change contains one important addendum.

If fines aren't paid within 21 days, the charge automatically becomes $20.

"We're still putting quite a few tickets out," said Crawford. "We got the first group back that were affected by the increase last week and so far, 50 or so haven't been paid."

Crawford estimated the department issues some 200 parking and traffic-related tickets per day.

He said the number of all-day parkers, expected to pick-up since the train no longer stops for commuters in Woburn, had fallen off. He said the department currently issued from five to ten tickets for all-day parkers per day.

He ranked meter violations and violations of restricted parking areas laws as areas where police issue the greatest number of tickets.

All-night parkers compose the second largest ticketed group, Crawford said. He said this group usually tapers off in the spring, with police issuing the majority of this type of penalty during the fall and winter, when the possibility of snow storms is at its height.

Weapon Missing In Murder Case

More than a week after a 34-year-old Somerville man was found stabbed to death at Winchester's Sandy Beach, police still haven't recovered a weapon or discovered a motive.

George Karakiozis was found by Metropolitan District Police at 8 p.m. March 8 lying face down in the cul de sac at Sandy Beach, the victim of some 30 stab wounds to the chest and back.

Police arrested Rita Owens, a 20-year-old woman with a record of arrests for prostitution March 9 following a sweep of Boston's Combat Zone.

Owens, who was arraigned on a murder and robbery charge March 10, remains in custody at MCI Framingham in lieu of $10,000 cash bail. She faces an April 6 trial date in Woburn District Court.

According to MDC Public Information Officer Frank Muolo, the motive behind the slaying remains a mystery.

"It's tough to establish a motive on this type of thing," Muolo said.

He said Owens has been charged with robbery in connection with the disappearance of Karakiozis' wallet. That wallet has not been recovered and the amount of money taken is not known.

Questioned concerning robbery as a possible motive, Muolo said, "I don't think that was her intent" in coming to Winchester with Karakiozis.

Owens was arrested in Boston after she turned herself into MDC Police less than 24 hours after the slaying. She told police she had been attacked by Karakiozis.

Karakiozis' body was discovered by MDC Patrolman Rocco Rizzuto during a routine patrol of Sandy Beach March 8. Police sent frogmen into the water in search of the knife used to kill Karakiozis, but cancelled those efforts after they failed to yield the weapon.

Police contend that Karakiozis picked up Owens in the Combat Zone around 7:40 p.m. on the day of the slaying and that the pair then drove to Winchester.

Police contend that Owens drove from the parking lot after the murder in a vehicle owned by a relative of the dead man. She subsequently abandoned that vehicle on High st. in West Medford, about a mile and a half from the scene of the murder. She then took a taxi into Boston, police said.

Owens turned herself into police around 9:55 p.m. March 9, after contacting a Boston Vice Squad member.

New DPW Head In Two Weeks?

Winchester could have a new Director of Public Works in two weeks, according to Town Manager Tom Groux.

The six-member committee reviewing applications for the post has interviewed 12 candidates so far, Groux said, and had interviews scheduled with at least two more applicants.

Groux said he had personally interviewed three candidates and had received approximately 50 applications and resumes for the post.

"The search continues," Groux told The Star Monday.

Winchester has been without a DPW Director since September of last year when then DPW chief Walter Tonaszuck left the post to take a similar position with the Town of Lexington.

The committee reviewing applications for the post includes chairman John G. McElwee of Longfellow rd., Donald E. Cullivan of Sheffield rd., and James J. Fitzgerald Jr. of Church st.

Other committee members include Thomas H. Kugn of Pilgrim rd., John P. Larkin of Ledyard rd., and State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh of Mt. Vernon st.

Chairman McElwee is a former chairman of the town's Personnel Board and President of the John Hancock Insurance Company.

Cullivan is President and Chief Executive Officer of the International Division of Cam, Dresser and McKee Inc. while Fitzgerald has owned and operated a construction firm in Winchester for a number of years.

Kuhn has most recently served as Director of Engineering for the Massachusetts Port Authority and was Region I Director of the Federal Aviation Administration for airport plan-ningplanning, design and construction. Larkin is a former Assistant Attorney General and is currently chairman of the Massachusetts Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission.

Groux will continue to work as Acting DPW Director until the position is filled.

Wyman Recommendation Scheduled For Monday

The Alternative School Use Committee will be recommending one of two firms to the Selectmen Monday night that will convert the Wyman School into a condominium complex.

The Re-Use Committee had their final interviews Tuesday night with The of Boston and the MB Group, also of Boston, the two finalists in the bidding for the Church st. property.

The Blakeley Corp., headed by Robert F. Blakeley and Robert F. Walsh, submitted a bid of $414,000 for the 2.7 acre site. The MB Group, represented by Robert S. Bowditch, turned in a $315,000 proposal.

Under the guidelines drawn up by the Re-Use Committee, the development must consist of no more than 18 units of privately financed condominium units.

No major additions will be allowed but exterior architectural changes will be encouraged. The current landscape design that has the school set back from Church st. will not be altered.

After making the recommendation to the Selectmen Monday, the Planning Board is expected to hold public hearings on the necessary zoning changes before April 30. Town Meeting would then be asked to vote on the zoning changes as well as the purchase and sale agreement at the Spring Town Meeting.

The developer that is approved would take over the property Aug. 1. On that date the school's current tenant, the Bartlett School, is scheduled to move into the Parkhurst School on the west side of town.

Candidates' Position Papers

John Williams

Selectman John J. Williams, candidate for reelection to the Winchester Board of Selectmen has released the following statement.

"As election time nears, there is one prevailing issue, to which all others will become subordinate. We have to face the realities of Proposition 2 1/2 not only as they affect our lives immediately, but with careful consideration to their impact on the future stability and growth of our community.

Issues are seldom the focus of campaigns for reelection to the Winchester Board of Selectmen. I have always believed that an established record of community and Town service are necessary to be considered eligible for a seat on the Board. Since my election last year these beliefs have been strengthened.

A Winchester Selectman needs knowledge and understanding of the Town resources: the taxpayers and voters; whether they are demanding additional services or more economies in operation; the Town employees; the dedicated services they perform, and their needs; the Town's elected and appointed boards and committees; their functions, their successes and their frustrations.

It is the Selectmen who must provide the leadership to meld all of these people into a cohesive operating body.

Indeed we have problems. We must consider every alternative as we strive to retain the level of services essential to the quality of life consistent with Winchester's excellent reputation.

On-going programs to refurbish our water system insuring adequate supply to our citizens must not be abandoned; consideration of the economic welfare and future land use of downtown Winchester must continue; local solutions to the national problem of an aging population must be determined; and our capital planning programs and maintenance efforts must not be allowed to deteriorate resulting in greater liabilities at a later date.

These are a few of the more obvious problems we must deal with in an era of double digit inflation, compounded by ever increasing restraints on available funds.

Serving the people of Winchester as a Town Meeting member, as a member and Chairman of the Finance Committee, and now as a member of the Board of Selectmen has given me the experience required to listen, to evaluate, and hopefully to provide a major part of the blending of thoughts, ideas, and decisions that the Town Manager and all the Town employees carry out on a daily basis throughout the year - and then present twice annually to Town Meeting the future plans and recommendations on the operating budgets for endorsement, rejection, or modification.

At Town Meeting these decisions and plans will undoubtedly become issues, and they will be settled. The need for experienced, knowledgeable, and dedicated people to devote long hours of preparation will be readily apparent to each Town Meeting member, and will have its effect on their vote and the future of our Town.

I sincerely believe that I meet the standards required by the voters of Winchester - of their Selectmen - and on that basis am asking for their endorsement as I seek reelection to the Winchester Board of Selectmen on March 31."

Mary Pronski

Winchester education has always been a major part of my life. I have been actively involved at various levels, a student, parent, volunteer and elected member of the School Committee. My experience and participation represents one half century of caring.

I can recall very vividly the post war days of overcrowding of classrooms, the adding on and building of new schools, and the wide searches all over the country for qualified staff.

During these years education itself changed. Programs were broadened. Federally subsidized Language and Science Laboratories were built. Mandatory State and Federal programs such as Chapter 766 appeared and they were all valued.

Now there is a reversal. The school population is shrinking. Five schools in the Town of Winchester have been closed in the last 10 years. There is a very serious budget problem. Double digit inflation and Proposition 2 1/2 are dismantling programs and smooth operations of every public school system in the Commonwealth.

We must face up to these problems and move ahead. Just as there is a cap on overall expenses, we must place a cap on the expenditures for all the individual specialized programs.

If we do not, there will be money only for the special programs and the average student will be squeezed out of an education.

Priorities must be set and choices must be made. As we are forced by shrinking enrollments to make reductions in staff, we must make sure that the most qualified staff is retained, so that Winchester continues to have a sound education program that most closely meets the needs of all the students.

We must communicate with each other, teachers, parents, students and taxpayers. We must work closely together for the benefit of the Town, its people, and in particular our students.

The Winchester public Schools have always prided themselves in the quality of their staff. Emphasis in the primary grades provided strong language and mathematics skills to our children. One area I'm particularly interested in is the consistency from school to school in programs and equal educational opportunity for all students. I am also a strong advocate of sports and student involvement and participation in extra curricular activities. It is most important we retain as many of these programs as money will permit.

Let us not panic because of Proposition 2 1/2. If we all work closely together we will get through these turbulent times, and hopefully education in Winchester will continue at a quality level of which we all will be proud. The investment we make today will payoff in the near future via our children.

Please get out and vote March 31 and support Mary G. Pronski. Every vote is vital. If you give me three minutes of your time, I in return will give three years of mine. The services you receive are dependant upon the leaders you will elect.

Sandra Rogers

During this campaign I have been emphasizing that education is this community's most important resource and that decisions we make now will be crucial to the future quality of the Winchester schools. As we face increasing financial pressures and declining enrollments, my primary goal is to preserve the strengths of the town's fine schools and to make improvements where they are necessary.

I support strong educational programs for students of all abilities and interests. We must offer a curriculum which stresses basic skills at all levels. I firmly supported the new continuous progress English program at the Junior High which places students at their ability level and moves them along when they have mastered certain skills.

We must also provide and maintain a range of program options which are responsive to student needs and diversity. I strongly opposed the five-course cap at the High School which would have limited the options students have to take certain courses. Students are in school to learn, not to sit around in study halls.

I further support continued efforts to strengthen the evaluation of both programs and personnel in order to make improvements and to attain high standards in what we do.

Athletics should remain a part of the total program we provide for our students. I am unwilling to eliminate a sport if I can find a way to keep it. Working with a finite number of dollars leads me to consider alternate sources of funding from community groups for transportation and costly use of facilities. I would pursue this course, if necessary, so that these sports can continue to be offered. Never would I support charging a fee to individual students so that their participation was determined by their ability to pay.

We have again had to discuss school closing as a possibility to meet the budget cuts which may be required by Proposition 2.5. My position has clearly been that I would only consider voting such a step if it became a choice between either closing a school or saving important programs for our students. I would hope that we would not have to make such a choice at this time. We just completed a major consolidation of the school system at the beginning of this year. Even with careful planning, I know it has not been easy, and we should avoid further dislocation of those students who were redistricted last fall. I strongly feel such an important decision should not be made in haste, nor on dollar savings alone.

I always keep open lines of communication with the community at all times, especially when the School Committee is making decisions. I welcome the ideas and views of others. I prepare thoroughly and carefully think through my position in order to make decisions objectively and in the best interests of the entire school system.

I would not be running for re-election to the School Committee, especially in times like these, unless I was totally committed to and willing to work for, excellence in the Winchester schools.

Mary Jean Weylman

Mary Jean Weylman in seeking reelection to the Winchester School Committee states "Public education is in a most crucial period. It is a time of challenge and of choice. The challenge is to continue to provide an educational program of high quality with fewer dollars available. The choice is to select the best programs - those most necessary to the education of our children. I welcome the challenge to take part and intend to make the choices, however, difficult they may be.

Improvement in the English skills of our students will continue to be one of my major goals. I have supported programs with emphasis on these basic abilities because I believe that reading thoughtfully, writing well, and speaking effectively are invaluable skills for all youth and Winchester can emphasize them without any impact on the tax dollar.

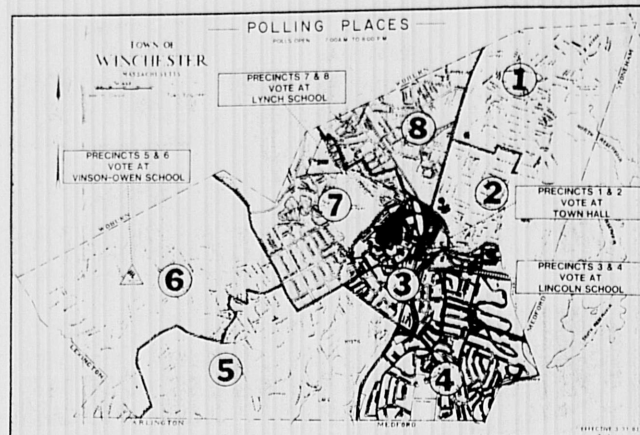

In a time of making hard choices, it is more important than ever to retain and encourage the best of our staff. From the Superintendent to department heads and principals, the people who evaluate staff must face up to the difficult tasks of identifying those who are superior and to separate them from those who are merely senior. The classroom teacher who is especially gifted in working with students is the key to fine education and Winchester should retain those people, whatever their seniority.

When budget cuts must be made, I support the "trimming" approach with thoughtful consideration of what will best serve the needs of all our students. For example, nearly one third of the athletic budget was cut this year, but as many students as possible were kept on the playing field. By eliminating bussing and rental fees, we were able to keep our sports program nearly intact.

In Winchester there are some who feel that all extra curricular activities and sports programs should be cancelled in favor of pure classroom time. Winchester High School without its band, newspaper clubs, musicals and teams would indeed provide a sterile educational environment. My approach will continue to be in support of the interests and activities that help our students to gain a well balanced education. Understanding the limitations provided by restricted resources, I will solicit the help of parents associations and encourage the students to become more self-supporting.

In the same vein I shall continue to vote against long term contracts and automatic central office raises because I believe that in a time of limited funding, our priority should be to those funds for the education of all Winchester's children."

Mrs. Weylman is a graduate of Mount Holyoke College and Harvard Graduate School of Education and is currently enrolled in graduate study at Lesley College. She has children in Winchester's elementary, junior high and high schools. She concludes, "I feel my background, experience and family give me a sound perspective. I am prepared during the next three years, if elected, to make the kind of choices which will benefit students and satisfy parents and taxpayers. Children have always come first with me and I would be honored to continue to work on the behalf of all Winchester students."

planner. He continues to seek harmony between industrial abutters and developers.

Please help eradicate a prevailing apathy by voting on March 31. In the process, a Planning Board vote for Joseph F. Geary Jr. would be appreciated.

Harry A.

Joseph Geary Jr. Lindmark III

Joseph F. Geary Jr., a candidate for Planning Board re-election, has often exhibited the courage of his convictions.

Contrary to public perception, planning boards have absolutely no authority to impose zoning changes. That seemingly awesome power was wisely reserved to town meetings by Chapter 40 A of the Massachusetts General Laws. Changes in zoning bylaws may only be accomplished by a two-thirds vote of Town Meeting, and even this requires a favorable review by the Attorney General.

This is not to say that planning boards are toothless tigers. Rhetorically speaking, their powers emanate from the prestige of office. Each and every zoning change must be subjected to a duly advertised Planning Board public hearing "at which interested persons shall be given an opportunity to be heard." Based on hearing data, a familiarity with established legal precepts of zoning, plus, hopefully, a commitment to fair and compassionate planning, the Board makes its recommendations to Town Meeting.

Zoning, by its very nature, is a most splendorous thing. Inanimate though it may be, it has the power to increase or decrease the value of property. It can create or break a neighborhood. It can create or eliminate a nuisance. And, used improperly, it can deny a landowner his rights of ownership.

Mr. Geary's eight year planning board record has been favorably neighborhood oriented. This is not to say his residential concerns are exclusionary. He is well aware of, and has defended, the rights of landowners to develop in keeping with their existing zoning, but has opposed attempts at intensification of use. He appreciates the concerns of our aging business community and contributed to the Chamber of Commerce sign-by-law revisions, and to their strategy to gain Town Meeting approval for the co-funding of an economic

As a life long resident of Winchester, I feel I am aware of the many problems facing the townspeople today. Being a member of a study committee in Winchester established to study and make recommendations to town officials concerning the impacts of industrial activity upon residential neighborhoods I have found that one of our most important issues is zoning.

We are living in a town that is supposed to be one of the most desirable communities around yet in recent months there has been problem after problem about what type of use is allowed in residential, industrial, conservancy and general business zones. I am aware of changes in zoning to permit development of proposals which are contrary to the existing zone. This confirms my belief that the town is and has been in a reactive position to its development.

Condominiums are the current talk of residents. Yes, we need more taxable development, but does a residential neighborhood need a condominium in it. I feel our zoning laws governing condominiums are inadequate and proper planning as to their placement requires a great deal of investigation by the Planning Board.

Another issue that has surfaced recently is the impact of industrial activity on bordering residential neighborhoods. There is no way of alleviating our need for industry in the town but I do believe that size and other adjustments can be made. As a member of the Planning Board I would work toward the planning of industrial development which would not be offensive to the neighborhoods that surround them.

It is my strong belief that the town is lacking and is in need of a comprehensive planning program which stimulates the most positive development of the town without deterring from its present

Here is a potpourri of hints for European travelers intended to make your vacation better. Money exchanges at train stations near European borders are open usually daily. It is customary to tip a theater usher about 15-25 cents. Many cities restrict the use of an automobile horn to emergencies. Europeans generally use a comma instead of a decimal point. Dates are written with the day first, then month and year. The letter "C" on a water faucet indicated "Hot." It may also be shown in red. "F" means cold and may be shown in blue. When choosing lodging, ask to see a choice of rooms before selecting one.

PRE-KINDERGARTEN SCREENING NOTICE

The Winchester Public Schools will hold pre-kindergarten screening for all children entering kindergarten in September, 1981, during the week of April 6 to and April 14.

As mandated by Massachusetts state law, the screening is a non-intensive scan conducted by school specialists to check a child's vision, hearing, speech and coordination. The state of Massachusetts also requires the following immunizations before a child may be admitted to school: MEASLES, MUMPS, & RUBELLA. Immunization must be given after 15 months of age; DPT SERIES (DIPHTHERIA, PERTUSSIS, TETANUS) - initial series of three usually given at ages 2 months, 4 months and 6 months. May be given at 18 months. MUST be received between ages of 4 and 6 years; POLIO - INITIAL KIN- DERGARTEN - every child must have a physical examination performed by the family physician with Health Form completed and returned to school. These rules apply to ALL children entering kindergarten and also to any children NEW to the Winchester School system. Any and all exceptions to these immunization requirements MUST have a note of explanation from your physician or the child will NOT be permitted to enter school.

The list for children eligible for kindergarten entrance has been compiled from the December, 1980 census. Parents of children on this list have already received registration materials from their local school district. If you have not received this information or you have moved to Winchester since January, 1981, please call your child's school for an appointment. Screening will be held at the following times:

Monday, April 6 - Lynch
Tuesday, April 7 - Mystic
Wednesday, April 8 - Andover
Thursday, April 9 - Marlow
Friday, April 10 - Lincoln

A Few Lines On Being Courageous

The robber who used an automatic pistol to take narcotics and an undetermined amount of cash from the Aberjona Pharmacy last Friday took more than that.

He took some peace of mind. He took from all of us the illusion that Winchester is somehow insulated, protected from the absolute horror of having a gun pointed at you.

He took our peace of mind and left fear and paranoia in its place.

The man who wielded the pistol and wore the ski mask was not the perpetrator of a bad joke.

He was for real. Pharmacist Patrick Palladino Jr. knew it was no joke. He's been the victim of five armed robberies in 11 years. His store has been burglarized three times in that same period.

us all shaken. He has made sleeping for some of us difficult.

We used this space last week to encourage endurance in the face of what have been trying times recently. We'd like to reiterate that position this week.

And, we'd like to talk about courage — the courage of Patrick Palladino Jr. and his father to persevere in the face of a very real, potentially deadly situation.

That courage goes far beyond the heroics of the moment. It is something more basic, something that can't be driven out at gun-point.

It is a courage that amounts to getting on with life; to continuing with things in the face of fear.

Since the robbery, business at the pharmacy has fallen off. As Palladino pointed out, who wants to send their wife or child or husband into a store that's been robbed?

We would. After all it's not as if the pharmacy were being robbed every day. And besides, since the Palladinos can come in every day, so can we.

We aren't advocating a disregard of recent events but a sense of community.

Without that sense of community, that desire to pull together through the best and worst of times, we become something else — a group of people who happen to live in the same general area.

We think Winchester is more than that.

See You Richie... And Good Luck

Richard McSweeney is leaving The Winchester Star this week.

In the time he's been at The Star, he's covered everything from the School Committee and recreation league basketball to Harry Sinden. And he's covered them well.

Through his stories, he has told you how Gary Errico felt when he became New England's top wrestler. He has told you what Laurie Glynn thought when she won the State Division II title in the mile. He has told you how Kathy Durante felt when she threw shot to a state title.

And he has told you other things — about football and tennis and swimming and golf and a myriad of other sports. Through his column, he has taken a broader view of sports and, at times, laughed at himself.

And Richie has covered news as well. He has told you about the School Committee, about bank robberies and about which school building was being sold to whom for how much and for what purpose.

Richie will be working as the sports editor at the North Shore Sunday newspaper in Danvers. We wish him luck in his new assignment.

But what's more, we'll miss him. We'll miss the all-nighters Tuesdays when the majority of the paper's stories, particularly the breaking sports stories, are written. We'll miss looking across the desk and seeing Richie at his typewriter, banging stories out with two fingers, an ink pen slanting from his mouth like a cigarette.

Adieu, Richie. Adieu and good luck.

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to the Committee on the Judiciary of the State Legislature.

EDITOR OF THE STAR: The members of The Quota Club of Winchester, an affiliate of Quota International, Inc., would like to convey to you our interest in the passage of S1901 and H5475, an Act Clarifying the Law Providing Protection Against Domestic Violence.

Quota International, Inc., composed of business and professional women, has resolved to support programs to protect victims of abuse. Last week was celebrated as "Statewide Community Education on Battering". The Quota Club of Winchester was one of thirteen organizations which participated in the signing of Governor King's proclamation. Last October we held a public meeting addressed by the staff of Transition House in Cambridge to bring this problem to local attention.

The above-mentioned bills are amendments to Chapter 209A and consist of technical clarifications which will make the original law more workable. These bills were drafted to bring about the original legislative intent and correct some typographical errors. There is no opposition to these proposed amendments and The Quota Club of Winchester urges you to pass these bills.

Closing Opposed

The following letter was sent to School

Superintendent William MacDonald and the School Committee.

EDITOR OF THE STAR: The Lynch School population expresses their strong opposition to the recent recommendation to close Lynch — the best new school in town!

We feel that the time element prevents us from responding to the Report of Study Committee for School Closings in the detailed and supported manner that we would like. We can assure you that a more inclusive response will be forthcoming. We do see inconsistencies in the report that are particularly applicable to Lynch's closing and feel that they warrant discussion. However, we feel that there are some blatant points of concern about Lynch moving to Muraco that should be cited in our immediate response.

We understand that not all of Lynch's students would move to Muraco but this response reflects the feelings of all the parents, pupils and staff of the Lynch district. It is written in a unified concern for the well-being of our children and with unconditional pride in our school. The attached page outlines these concerns.

The Lynch facility is recognized as a high capacity building that provides maximum flexibility. The parents, pupils, and staff fully recognize this in our school. We are seeking ways to realize the full potential of this facility for our town. We ask that you grant us the opportunity and time to do just that.

By TERRY MAROTTA

It was raining hard that night last August and we'd just built a fire in our woody cabin's hearth. Far from civilization, far from highways and cars, with no telephone and no TV, we were just settling down for a cozy evening. There would be a marshmallow roast and ghost stories for the children and later the peace of reading to the rain's steady drumming on our roof.

That's when the sheriff's car pulled up, its headlights sweeping across the darkened room. Our house, a world away in Winchester, had been broken into. It appeared that a good deal had been taken. We started home immediately and arrived home around 10.

It's pretty awful to see your possessions thrown around; handled and soiled somehow by the touch of strangers. Our bureau drawers hung open, and dining room cupboards gaped. All the mattresses were pulled askew on the beds in a search for hidden valuables. Even the baby's crib was ransacked.

We were lucky compared to some, though: the pantries weren't torn apart, or the canned goods tumbled. All the bookcases were left untouched, and no one had slashed the chairs.

But make no mistake: we lost big. Many a wedding gift is gone, the souvenirs of a sunny June day long ago. Our insurance company has replaced what they call the real valuables, but what about the rest?

What about the National Honor Society pin from high school days?

What about my grandfather's cufflinks that represented to me his whole sepia-tinted world of turn-of-the-century Boston?

What about the small green garnet which had served as an engagement ring to my great-aunt, homesick as she was for the emerald hills of her native Ireland? What about these things?

Where do I go to replace them?

The thieves took more than a few sacks full of treasured possessions, furthermore; they took along with them a good chunk of my peace of mind. The event is receding rapidly in time, but somehow I can't seem to put it truly behind me. I wish I could feel that robbery is like lightning, and never strikes the same place twice, but I know this isn't true. My mother's house has been broken into three times. On her street, they come first for the silver and return later for the rugs.

So how can I recover a sense of equanimity? In arming my home like a fortress? We have an alarm system as it is — the kind that dials the police. In fact, we were about as careful as you could be before going away; not even the Dydee man knew we were leaving town. And we had a young couple staying at the house. All to no avail. The robbers didn't depend, it seems, on the Dydee man for information. They came while the couple was out for the evening. And they dismantled the alarm system — dismantled it.

I guess we could take further steps still. We've talked about the whole range of options. We could add motion detectors. I know, or sonar devices that go off at the sneeze of a cat. We could drill holes in the canned goods and load them with valuables. We could sew jewelry into the cheeks of the children's teddybears. But would these steps safeguard us truly? Would they secure for me the peace of mind I lost that night?

I don't see how they could. For that peace of mind I speak of was constructed upon a wholly unrealistic view of the universe, a childlike and unreasoning belief in the permanence of my world. We are poised, my husband and I, at the apogee of what might be called the building curve of our lives.

For the last 13 years or so, things have been getting born for us; our marriage was conceived, and two careers launched; we grew two fine babies that bloom into sturdy little-girlhood, and we bought the big old house that we hope to inhabit 'til the year

Things get added, my experience has been telling me, and life grows noisier and more riotously complex. But up until now, there's been nothing to remind me that things also get taken away. My mother and aunt still live in my childhood home, after all, and the room I wrote ninth grade poetry in remains unchanged. It wasn't until the break-in that I realized or maybe re-realized that permanence is one thing we can never hope to have. For, as I'm at last coming to understand, the world offers nothing that is immutable.

On the contrary, life on this earth appears to be one long and gradual act of larceny: first it takes the silver, and then it comes back for the rugs. If I am to find tranquility for myself it will be in acknowledging this fact and adjusting to its implications.

Besides, if I can be destroyed by the theft of some silver flatware, maybe I've invested too much in the stuff to begin with — too much of myself, I mean. A spoon is to eat with after all; it's a humble instrument. A chair, by the same token, is to sit on, and a house to provide shelter from the elements. They are just "things." They exist for us and not vice versa. They represent Irresponsible ?

Editor's Note: The following deals with an article headlined "Gas Hikes Force Lifestyle Changes" that appeared on Page 13 of the March 5 Star.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Your article on changing lifestyles of Winchester High School students is a prime example of irresponsible reporting. Our consolation is that those who know Chris Potts will readily recognize that statements attributed to him could not have been voiced by this young man.

To those who do not know him, it may not matter.

Fair Success

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Again this year, the Ambrose School Fun Fair was a great success. The proceeds of this, our major fund raiser, will be used entirely for the benefit of our children.

The Ambrose Parents' Association would like to thank the many area merchants who so generously donated their merchandise or services: Winchester Indoor Tennis Club, Flo's Studio for Framing, Bonnell Ford, Boodakian and Sons, Ltd., Salon D'Art, Merit Gas, The "99" Restaurants, Colleen's Chinese Cuisine, Mystic Valley Wheel Works and Winchester Realty.

Our thanks go also to the parents who so willingly organized and staffed our fair and, finally, to those of you who came and enjoyed and so generously supported our efforts.

No Condos

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

When we moved to Carriage Hill, three years ago, we believed it would remain an area zoned for single-family dwellings.

The Carriage Hill area is now threatened by a variance for approval of a condominium development.

Our neighborhood is quiet and well-kept, primarily by its inhabitants who care enough to keep it so. The character of our homes is at stake.

Since the original zoning of Carriage Hill was for 125 single-family dwellings, how can accommodations for a 250-unit condominium complex exist without dangers to the community?

Without a master plan, how can growth in Winchester occur if it doesn't acquire the wholehearted approval of its townspeople.

If Carriage Hill is rezoned for Condos then our present concerns will be your future concerns.

Steve and Katherine Natsis.

Condos Opposed

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The kids in Winchester are very proud to live in a well-kept town. We do not want the beautiful scenery to be destroyed by some irresponsible development.

This condominium development planned for Carriage Hill will destroy our play area, the woods. We do not want to see the beautiful creatures of the forest destroyed by condominiums.

The traffic conditions on Wainright rd. will be horrible. They will be almost impossible to cope with.

We do not want to see our homes with condominiums in the background. We will not stand by and see our town being destroyed by irresponsible development.

Political Forum

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

1981 promises to be the first of several years of municipal decision making. The "ripple effect" of many of the decisions made by our town boards and town meeting may well be felt for years to come.

Knowing who you will be electing and why has perhaps never been more crucial to the welfare of our children, town management, senior citizens, town services and personnel. This is the year to care, and the Winchester League of Women Voters most urgently requests your presence at "Meet The Candidates", 3 p.m., Sunday, March 22 at the Muraco School Auditorium.

Thanks Offered

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I recently had the pleasure of directing a girls basketball program in town.

I would like to extend a special thanks to the girls on the high school basketball team who gave their time, energy and efforts to make this program successful beyond all my expectations. Without their help and the assistance of Kelly Gately, the program would never have happened.

I would also like to thank the boys basketball program and especially Kevin Thomas for the use of their equipment and all their cooperation. They too helped in our success.

To Rich McSweeney, who gave us the best of coverage and publicity, thank you. And last but not least, the participants and their parents, thanks and we hope to see you all again next year.

2½ Questions

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Now that Proposition 2½ has been adopted and the vast majority of the voters in Winchester voted in favor, Town Meeting Members must hear from the residents before the start of the Town Meeting. There are several key questions to be answered.

1. The proportion of the cuts that should be taken from the School Department budget vs. the Town Manager's budget.

2. Whether water rates should be raised to reflect true cost of running that Department, and should it include maintenance and any debt service for refurbishing mains.

3. Should the town accept a sewer rate based on the water usage which would include water used on lawns and gardens. Or, in fact, should water and sewer rates be included in the general tax rate, where they would be included under 2½.

4. Should the cost of the tennis courts, curbing installation, garbage pick up and other town services be borne only by the users.

5. Would you rather have town services such as police and fire, or less clerical and administrative people in the town offices?

6. Do you want present vacant land that is zoned for single residents, or rezoning for condominiums, and the potential need for more town services?

These are just a few of the problems and questions that confront the Town Meeting Members. I recommend that you sit down and write your Town Meeting Members, so that they will know how you feel. The Town Clerk can get you a list of your precinct members, and the League of Women Voters also has such a list.

Foreign Affairs

Editor's Note: The following is a continuation of a letter dealing with the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Very few Americans knew that something was wrong when Jimmy Carter packed his administration with the same crowd that had been running things for decades, when he won the Democratic Party's nomination. Carter chose C.F.R. member Walter Mondale to be his running mate. After the election, Carter chose C.F.R. members Cyrus Vance, Harold Brown, and W. Michael Blumenthal to be the Secretaries of State, Defense and Treasury — the top three cabinet posts.

Other top Carter appointees who were C.F.R. members included Joseph Califano, Secretary of HEW; Patricia Roberts Hamis, Secretary of HUD; Stanisfield Turner, CIA Director; Zbigniew Brzezinski, Presidential National Security Advisor; and Andrew Young, Ambassador to the UN.

The names of scores of assistant secretaries, under secretaries, ambassadors, and other appointees can be also found on the C.F.R. membership roster. As we have already noted, a total of 284 C.F.R. members held positions in the Carter Administration.

To put it mildly, the C.F.R. has a great deal of clout. In our opinion, however, not every member of the C.F.R. is fully committed to carrying out Edward Mandell House's conspiratorial plan. Many have been flattered by an invitation to join a "study" group, which is what the C.F.R. calls itself. Others go along because of personal benefits such as a nice job and a new importance. But all are used to promote the destruction of U.S. sovereignty. Over the years, only a few members have ever had the courage to speak out about the C.F.R. These few are now ex-members who have always been ignored by the press.

The C.F.R. publishes a very informative quarterly journal called Foreign Affairs. More often than not, important new shifts in U.S. policy, or highly indicative attitudes of political figures have been telegraphed in its pages. When he was preparing to run for the Presidency in 1967, for instance, Richard Nixon made himself acceptable to the insiders of the establishment with an article in the October 1967 issue of Foreign Affairs. In it he called for a new policy of openness toward Red China, a policy which he himself later initiated in 1972.

The April 1974 issue of Foreign Affairs, carried a very explicit recommendation for carrying out the world-government scheme of C.F.R. founder Edward Mandell House. Authorized by State Dept. veteran and Columbia University Professor Richard N. Gardner (a C.F.R. member) "the Hard Road to World Order" admits that a single leap into world government via an organization like the United Nations is unrealistic.

Instead, Gardner urged the continued piece meal delivery of our nation's sovereignty to a variety of international organizations. He called for "an end run around national sovereignty, eroding it piece by piece."

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Proposition 2.5 is a mandate of the voters for the reduction of local taxes. Moreover, during the campaign, Citizens for Limited Taxation's position was that the state has the ability to fund much of the local cut-backs, without a reduction in essential state services and without any increased state taxes.

Specifically, the proposed state FY82 budget is $6.4 billion, with 27 percent (or $1.7 billion) being allocated to the local aid fund. However, in 1974 the state allocated 36 percent of the total state budget to the local aid fund. Restoring that percentage allocation in 1982 would provide $2.3 billion for local aid, or an increase of $600 million over that now proposed.

The state should allocate at least half of this amount, or $300 million to the local aid fund. Thus, the cities and towns would receive additional support sufficient to eliminate about half of their projected revenue reductions on the average, assuming an equitable allocation of these funds.

Citizens for Limited Taxation, as part of our long range program, is planning another initiative petition this fall which will place a limit on state spending, and establish an enhanced and protected local aid fund which is related to the growth of total personal income in the Commonwealth. Meanwhile, a call or note to your legislator requesting additional state aid might prove to be fruitful.

Poland's Woes

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

If Poland is invaded and the unions crushed, it will be to America's advantage. We will make appropriate noises but, as in 1956 and 1968, we will do very little. NATO will be strengthened because West Europeans will be frightened into providing more soldiers, guns and tanks.

★ Burglars

Right now, silver is at a premium. Jewelry, silverware, and tea sets are small and easy to conceal and are usually melted down the same day they are taken, Perritano said.

"It's those people who advertise 'We'll buy your gold and silver!' who are really hurting us," Perritano claimed.

The market value for gold and silver fluctuates between 12 and 20 dollars an ounce. Perritano said a fence will pay about one-third the market value while legitimate buyers will pay up to 75 percent.

Tony Fresolo, part-owner of the Jewelry Boutique in Arlington said he buys mostly damaged jewelry, glass rings, odd spoons and cups. He said he has probably bought some stolen property, but not intentionally.

A Massachusetts law was passed recently which requires recipients of over $50 in gold, silver or platinum to ask for identification. Fresolo said he records the names and addresses of people he buys from in a ledger.

"I've had a couple of guys in here that I don't like the looks of," he said. "I tell them I can't use their stuff. I was robbed at gun point once. I know what it is like."

He said one elderly couple brought in their silver tea set for sale because they were "scared to death of house breaks."

"God knows they weren't selling it for the money," he said. "It had been in their home for 30 or 40 years, and they had grown close to it. But they felt it was better to have money in the bank than have their tea set in the home."

Jewelry, color television sets, oriental rugs and antiques are all popular items for theft. Burglars don't usually go for cash.

But there is always the exception. "One woman kept her tax money in a butter dish in the refrigerator and they got it," Perritano said. "Why, we've had them go in and make a gourmet meal, eat, drink and God knows what else."

He said burglars usually strike between 4:30 and 7:30 p.m., just after sundown. If the lights are off at that hour the chances are greater that the people are not home. At 10 or 11 p.m., the risk that people are home and asleep is greater.

the material world, hardly the only world worth inhabiting.

Sitting at the kitchen table that night we listed all that was taken from us; driving back into the dreaming hills of New Hampshire later on, we listed all that remained. The second list was a whole lot longer. It probably always would be, because as Tennyson's Ulysses says, though much is taken, much abides. If I can keep remembering this, I'll have my serenity . . . and nothing can ever rob me of it.

Terry Marotta is a Winchester resident whose column appears regularly in The Star.

Home intrusions while the residents are in the house are very dangerous. "But we don't have that problem in this town," Perritano said knocking on his wooden desk. "We've been lucky."

Nine out of ten times, a burglar will leave as soon as he hears someone, he added. "He is usually unarmed and doesn't want to take a chance on getting his head blown off," Perritano said. Firearms licenses have been issued to some 300 Winchester businesses and residents.

McHugh said that "during home invasions I maintain that a person has to protect his person and his property. But if there is an opportunity to avoid a confrontation, he should avail himself of those means."

The law states that if a resident shoots a burglar, he could face manslaughter charges. The homeowner must do everything in his power to give the intruder access to an exit, Perritano said.

A bill has been introduced by Governor Edward King to this session of the state legislature which would give a resident more authority to use deadly force.

Crime Prevention Officer Kevin Mawn said an increasing number of break-ins are committed in the daylight hours when houses are vacant.

"Everybody has to work to get by today," he said. "In the old days, the mothers were home with the kids."

Burglary is defined as breaking and entering at night with intent to commit a felony. Breaking and entering in the daytime is a misdemeanor.

Perritano claims that "any individual can walk in off the street and break into a house." The burglar usually hits the master bedroom first, then the dining room where expensive silverware and tea sets are kept. A burglar usually won't bother with children's rooms.

"It's a crime of stealth," McHugh said. "Burglars have the advantage of time and surprise. There is no definite method of intrusion. They sneak, they lurk like rats."

"A kid steals a piece of candy, next he wants the jar, and then the store," he said. "He steals a ring for his girlfriend and thinks — 'Hey, that wasn't so bad. I wonder if Harry Jones has some money.'"

Perritano said the steady rise in crime involving theft directly corresponds to the escalation of inflation, unemployment and drug abuse.

And for such economically pressed people, crime is a very lucrative business, McHugh said.

He tells the story of the "Gentleman Burglar" who "wore a business suit, a nice tie and a shirt, an expensive ring and watch and walking down the street, looked like a doctor, lawyer or priest."

He broke into homes exclusively in the daytime and stole only what he could fit in his briefcase.

When Winchester police officers finally caught up with him, he listed his occupation as "burglar."

"That's my profession," he said. "I'm a thief."

"He was wearing a $200 silk shirt and a $400 suit," McHugh said. In conversation with this fellow, we found out he ate the best of food, travelled and stayed in the most expensive hotels and ran around with a wealthy group of friends. There wasn't too much he wanted that he didn't acquire."

McHugh said the Gentleman Burglar has been convicted several times. "But he isn't a violent guy," McHugh said. "He is the model prisoner and is in and out of the courts in a very short time."

Prosecuting Officer Andrew Crawford, who spends a lot of time in court himself, keeps an eye on who is being brought in for what charges.

"It's always the same ones who are going through the courts," he said.

First offenders usually get a suspended sentence or probation, Crawford said. The majority of second offenders do not serve their full sentence.

Most convicted burglars are sent to the Middlesex House of Correction in Billerica, while more serious offenders, like professionals, end up at Walpole State Prison.

"In two or three years they usually get out on parole, work release or furloughs," Crawford said.

"The statutes read 20 years for burglary," Perritano added. "But you'll never see that day. The prison system is inadequate and the prisons are outdated and overcrowded."

He said the bail system is also a problem.

For example, when a criminal has been apprehended, he hires a lawyer. He needs money up front before the court appearance is made. Where is he going to get it?

"He has the right to bail," Perritano said, "and he will be out on the streets in an hour doing what he is good at."

McHugh said the rate for solving breaking and entering crimes in Winchester is low but above the national average of 15 percent for suburban communities.

Crawford said that when they do solve a burglary, it is usually with fingerprints, an eyewitness, a car registration number, something left behind by the burglar or an unusual method of operation.

The cooperative efforts of surrounding police departments from Lowell to South Shore have been helpful in solving all types of crime. About 60 officers attend periodic Regional Detective Meetings and exchange names and photographs of criminals and descriptions of crimes committed in their area.

Perritano said it has paid off on several occasions. One year, the Winchester police caught two female gypsy con artists. They would go to a home and one girl would ask for a drink of water. The other, saying she had to go to the bathroom, would search the residents' belongings while her cohort kept them busy in the kitchen.

"One officer at the meeting stood up and told this tale of woe," Perritano said. "We told him it had happened in our community and we knew who his culprits were."

Police departments around the country circulate teletype lists of property that has been lost and recovered in their area. Sometimes they make a connection. "But recovery of stolen property is very rare," Perritano said.

Occasionally, the department plea bargains with burglars and gets tips on other thieves.

Perritano said he and Inspector William Nash once staked out a jewelry building in Boston after Winchester police received information that someone planned to fence silver there on a Monday morning.

"And don't you know, this dude comes bopping down the street with a suitcase of silver," Perritano said. "We even got on the same elevator with him. I must have had police officer written all over me. He said, 'You're a cop, aren't you?' I said, 'You got it.' And he submitted to a search."

Police said the community can greatly help deter crime not only by making their homes more crime-proof, but also by looking out for one another and notifying the police in case of suspicious activity in their neighborhood.

"Sometimes we go to break-ins and, after questioning neighbors, find out that they did see a strange car," Mawn said. "But they didn't want to be a busy-body or a snop. So they didn't pay attention. They didn't want to get involved."

McHugh said that when police do stop people on the street, the innocent suspects get embarrassed as well as the neighbor who reported them.

"They get very ruffled," McHugh said. "They say, 'What is this? You think I'm a burglar? He thinks I'm a burglar!'"

The police chief said his officers do not mind responding to false alarms because it is an opportunity to generate rapport with residents.

"I would require 15 additional men to develop the old intimacy the department used to have with the neighborhoods," he said. "But responding to false alarms takes my people into areas they would normally just ride by."

Residents also fear retaliation if they are a witness and have to testify in a prosecution. But Mawn said "the percentage of criminal retaliation is so small it is ridiculous. On TV you will have retaliation, but I've seen very little of it in this town."

"We don't want people to become police officers and face anybody," he said. "We just want them to call us and we'll confront them."

"The blizzard of '78 was great. People got out into the street and started talking to each other," Mawn added. "Look, they don't have to go to each other's houses for coffee — just look out for their neighbors."

And sometimes citizen involvement pays off.

"We had a woman call the other day from Canterbury rd. about three males in a car cruising slowly up and down the street," he said. "We stopped the car and found out that they were from Cambridge and had a long record of breaking and entering. As far as we're concerned, that woman prevented someone from being broken into."

Chief McHugh said, "There is nothing like the passage in the Bible, 'I am my brother's keeper.'"

"If that message could get out into society, people would save each other a lot of grief, agony and money," he concluded.

breaking in," Mawn said, "the greater the chance he will be seen."

"If a burglar can't pry open a window, he usually won't even resort to breaking the glass for fear of attracting the attention of neighbors," Mawn added. "And you'd be surprised to see how you could slow these burglars down for a very low cost."

Through Neighborhood Crime Watch, a national program which Mawn coordinates for Winchester, residents can learn how to make their houses and neighborhoods more secure from the more than 225 breaking and enterings that occur here every year.

Mawn will visit a home, examine the residential security and note various safety deficiencies which he compiles in an advisory report for the homeowner.

The Crime Watch Program is also designed to spur community involvement and Mawn addresses groups of neighbors who are interested in collective action.

One resident usually contacts the people on his or her street and sets up the time for a meeting with Mawn. At the meeting, they not only learn about residential security for their own home measures, but also how to look out for each other's homes.

Residents exchange phone numbers with immediate neighbors and resolve to call each other and the police in the event of suspicious activity on the block.

Police Chief J.P. McHugh said people are reluctant to call the police either because they don't want to be nosy neighbors or are not sure what circumstances are really suspect.

Police encourage neighbors to report anything out of the ordinary: slow moving vehicles driving up and down the street, individuals or groups going door-to-door, open or broken doors or windows, or "repair" operations at homes where the owners are away.

Homeowners cannot rely solely on neighborhood surveillance to prevent break-ins. To fortify a residence, Mawn emphasizes strategic points of entry — doors and windows, especially those at the rear of the house and garage doors which are commonly overlooked.

According to Crime Watch statistics, 30 to 50 percent of home burglaries happen because a door or window was left unlocked.

Mawn recommends the one-inch deadbolt lock. Double-cylinder locks, which are keyed on both sides, are not good unless you have glass in or near the door as a burglar could easily reach his hand through a broken pane and open the door.

Single-cylinder locks are suggested in those cases. Deadbolt locks range from $12 for single-cylinder deadbolts to $16.50 for double-cylinder ones.

"You can break deadbolt locks," he maintained, "but it does take longer."

Windows can be pinned with two 8 to 10-penny nails in such a way that it is impossible to pry them open. (Children and other residents should be shown how to remove the nails in case of fire.) And Mawn said, "I've investigated millions of house breaks, and they don't usually break the glass to get in."

Sometimes, especially during the summer, burglars don't have to break any glass to gain entry. Everything is left open.

Jay Finn of the Jay M. Finn Insurance Agency said that one summer there was a rash of women's purses being snatched from homes.

"Women leave their purses on their dining room tables," he said. "And they are so easy to steal."

Finn suggested that women lock their screen doors and window screens even when they are at home. He has bells attached to his screen doors so that even when he is in another part of the house, he knows when they are being opened.

Mawn said he also adheres to one of the old safety sayings, "Light a light and prevent a crime."

Darkness is a burglar's greatest cover but residents can take away that advantage by lighting up the front of their house, the doorway and the backyard, Mawn said.

And Mawn suggested that when homeowners plan to be away, they should have a trusted neighbor turn their lights on in the evening and off in the morning, pick up their mail and newspapers, mow their lawn or shovel their sidewalks.

Insurance companies suggest that people conduct an inventory of their valuables, take pictures of them and keep receipts of purchases.

The Winchester Police Department encourages people to use the department's electronic engraving tool to inscribe their property with their driver's license or state identification number if they don't drive. These numbers are instantly recognized and traceable.

Although Mawn believes that basic security measures will significantly lower the chance of break-ins, he thinks alarm systems are an "excellent deterrent."

And Detective Lieutenant Joseph N. Perritano said, "Winchester is not going to draw the sophisticated burglar who could jump an alarm."

Chief McHugh said, "Alarms are excellent. They should be used by people to protect themselves — if they can afford it."

The alarms offered by the American Alarm and Communications on Main st. range between $1300 and $1700.

In their system, a dime-size switch is inserted between the door and the doorway near the lock. If the door is opened, a magnet trips the device and an audible alarm resounds in the home. Ten seconds later, an electronic impulse travels to a control panel, activates a digital computer and sends a message through telephone wires to a 24-hour monitoring station at American Alarm headquarters.

McHugh said that having a home visibly wired for an alarm is a deterrent in itself.

Last year, Winchester police responded to 1801 activated alarms. McHugh said they do not mind that the majority of them are false alarms because it is an opportunity for officers to gain a familiarity with the citizens of Winchester.

Richard Sampson, President of American Alarms and Communications said the psychology of the home alarm system has changed in recent years.

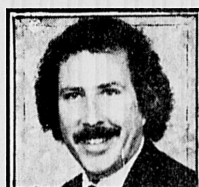

"Ten years ago the people who were putting in alarms were either feeble, infirm, paranoid, or had something valuable to protect," he said. "Now, a young couple will install an alarm in their home before they even bring in their wedding gifts."

Police ask that homeowners burglarized at night not wait until morning to notify them of a burglary. "It's hard to do an investigation if the break-in is cold," Prosecuting Officer Andrew Crawford said.

And if residents return from an outing and think a burglar is still in their home, he added, they shouldn't go in but call the police immediately and they will send in Bruno the police dog.

"We send him in before anyone else's scent gets in the house," Crawford said. "We've caught criminals hiding in closets. We even caught one guy hanging by his fingertips outside a window."

But Mawn said that through Neighborhood Crime Watch, he hopes people will be seeing their police officer before the burglar.

The valves line up on top of the cylinders, and there are two of them for each cylinder — an intake valve, which lets the gas-air mixture into the cylinder, and the exhaust valve, which lets the burned gases out. The valves want to open a precise amount, then shut tightly and completely when they're supposed to. Happily, most modern engines have valves that keep themselves adjusted, so you don't have to worry about them — but some older cars have a valve arrangement that needs periodic adjusting. When valves get out of adjustment, you can hear them — they'll make a ticking noise when the engine's running. If you begin to notice a ticky noise from the engine, look up your favorite mechanic and ask him about the matter. Lecture On Arthritis Held Recently

There is a two-pronged method of dealing with arthritis, according to Dr. Gerald S. Harris, Rheumatologist, who spoke March 10 at the Reading Community Center. The meeting was sponsored by Winchester Hospital.

"Aspirin blocks inflammation of the joints which is particularly important," said Dr. Harris, "and it is necessary for someone suffering from arthritis to take aspirin in some form regularly. The other important facet of treatment is exercise because exercise builds muscle which protects the affected joint. There is a lot of muscle lost when one has arthritis."

Dr. Harris began his lecture with a series of slides which showed the various forms of arthritis. He showed joints affected by inflammatory or rheumatoid arthritis, and those afflicted by osteoarthritis, non-inflammatory arthritis. He explained the treatment for gout, and touched upon some of the more unusual forms of arthritis including those caused by infections such as tuberculosis, meningitis and gonorrhea.

A type of arthritis new to the United States is Lyme arthritis caused by the bite of a tick. This kind can leave the person bitten afflicted with arthritis for as long as 15 years. This form entered the Country about two years ago, and was first diagnosed in Connecticut, but is now seen as far away as Seattle and northern California.

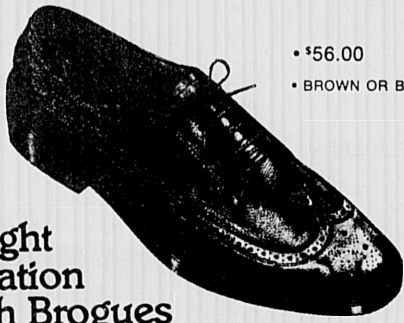

Shirley Moriarty, a member of Winchester Hospital's Physical Therapy department, demonstrated exercises which can build up muscles around joints, and using kitchen utensils and simple tools, she demonstrated how repositioning one's grip in using utensils can reduce wear on joints. "Knitting is particularly stressful to joints," she added, "because it keeps the hands in poor position which can eventually lead to deformity."

Teachers Turn Away From Teaching

By RICHARD MC SWEENEY

First it was declining enrollment. Then it was anger over the lay-off procedure used for tenured teachers.

And now, finally, its Prop. 2.5. And like teachers across the state, Winchester teachers want out. Not out of the Winchester system. Not out of the state. Out of teaching. Period.

Estimates of the numbers of teachers actively looking to get out of teaching range from a low of 20-30 percent to as high as 75 percent. And if their prospects of finding jobs in the private sector are bad now, they will continue to get worse because of the expected layoffs caused by Prop. 2.5. The high tech and sales industries have been glutted with resumes of teachers in recent months.

And the flight into the private sector has not been restricted to relatively new teachers who are apt to be laid off in June. Teachers who have put in 10, 15, 20 years into teaching are equally unimpressed with the future of education.

The teachers want out.

Tom Daviau taught at various Winchester elementary schools since the fall of 1974. He left the system last August for a similar job in Belmont after being a member of the RIF (Reduction In Force) list every year in the system including the last two as a tenured teacher. He expects his stay in Belmont to be a very short one. The RIF list is made up of teachers told they will be laid off because of declining enrollment.

"I entered school this September with the idea that I wouldn't have a job in June," Daviau said in an interview with The Star recently. "I really, firmly, believe I won't be in education next year. And if I am I will be disappointed," he said, adding he is looking closely at a communications job and a marketing representative position.

"Some teachers have failed to see the handwriting on the wall. If you were on the RIF list one year, how much can it change? Your number is bound to come up again. I have no sympathy for people who fail to realize this," Daviau said.

But if Prop. 2.5 and the threatened massive layoffs have sped up the process of teachers looking for careers elsewhere, the groundwork and dissatisfaction began festering in the mid-70s when declining enrollment became a fact of life.

The slow but now overwhelming impact of declining enrollment did not affect tenured teachers for several years. Now, however, virtually all are vulnerable. And the RIF procedure has resulted in a serious deterioration of communications between teachers and their bosses.

That issue came to a head in Winchester last June when the over 240-member Winchester Education Association (WEA) staged a protest march after the School Committee refused to divulge what the criteria was for laying off tenured teachers.

After that dispute was resolved, at least temporarily, onto the scene came Prop. 2.5.

And if tenured teachers were nervous before, the prospects of remaining in teaching have become decidedly bleaker.

Joanne Martignetti is a second grade teacher at the Lincoln School, has lived in town for 19 years and finally got a full-time teaching job five years ago after substituting for two years.

But her name has been on the RIF list her first four years (the first three are automatic-all non-tenured teachers are notified they will be laid off) and she is not optimistic that this year will be an exception.

"We've been going through it for five years now and we're losing good people," she said. "Winchester has been losing good people. After my third year I thought I was all set. But Prop. 2.5 is forcing me to be realistic. I have been here for five years and I have to face the fact that I'll probably be going this year," Martignetti said.

Kevin Chrusz was in his eighth year at the Washington Elementary School two years ago when the School Committee faced with the imminent closing of three elementary schools, scheduled the first tenured teachers to be RIFed.

He recalls being notified to see Dr. Clare Cochran. When she said he would be one of those that would have to go

'I really firmly believe I won't be in education next year. And if I am I will be disappointed.'

—Tom Daviau

because of declining enrollment, he couldn't believe it.

"It was one of the biggest shocks I've ever had in my life," Chrusz said. "The only time I was more shocked was when Joe Z. (Joseph Zabalski, Athletic Director at Northeastern University) called me out of my class to tell me my father had dropped dead. I asked her how it was done. She said, 'I can't tell you how it was done.' I said, 'what am I supposed to do now?' Just go back and teach my class? It was the most unprofessional way of doing it."

"It was probably the most miserable summer, physically, but more emotionally. Teachers oftentimes feel all they can do is teach. What was I going to do? Where was I going to go?"

Chrusz was notified via a note slipped under his door that he would have his job back, only at the Vinson-Owen School. He found that out when he returned home after the Labor Day weekend.

Although he is still teaching in Winchester, now at the Lincoln School, that experience has scared him and he maintains the effect on teacher morale has reached an all time low during his nine-year tenure.

"I don't know how our morale could be any lower than after that," Chrusz said. "You don't treat human beings that way. You don't pull Kevin Chrusz out of the classroom after he has been teaching here nine years and say goodbye. You don't treat human beings that way," Chrusz said.

The psychological effect of RIFing has taken its toll on all those tenured teachers who have been told they will be laid off over the past two years. Last year 16 were notified they would not be returning but in the end none were actually RIFed. Some resigned and took jobs elsewhere, either in other systems or in private industry, and the rest were recalled through attrition.

But the recall doesn't do much to patch up the initial reaction. "You keep hearing the phrase 'RIF' doesn't mean you are a bad teacher or that you aren't good enough," says Chris Scanlon, a third grade teacher at Vinson-Owen and in his ninth year in the Winchester system. "But that still doesn't make you feel too good." Scanlon, who has been a member of the RIF list for the past two years, said.

It is hardly surprising that tenured teachers who have suddenly lost their security are discouraged. But it is surprising when teachers who are so high up on the seniority ladder that their chances of being RIFed are practically nil, are equally disenchanted with their future in teaching.

Jim Perry, a fifth grade teacher at Muraco School, has been a teacher for 19 years, the last 14 of them in Winchester elementary schools. He has a BA in Education from Lowell University, a Master's in Education from Salem State College and numerous credits in his field from Boston University, Northeastern and Tufts. He freely admits his job is not threatened. He also freely admits that he is looking to get out of the field he has dedicated his life to.

He has talked to various high tech firms in the area and on their recommendation may be taking courses nights to better prepare himself for that job market if he wants to switch in two or three years. He is also considering opening a pub in Lowell, which is just a short drive from his Tewksbury home.

He wants out of teaching because "of a total societal thing" that has seen the esteem of the teaching profession slide in recent years.

"I'm not going to blame 2.5," Perry said of his decision to seek a career change. "Teaching is not in the eyes of the public what it had been when I came in 1967. The thought of getting out has been on my mind for a couple of years. The attitude of the School Committee, of apparently the people who run the town and the attitude of a lot of parents is that we're not doing the job. That sort of grates on you," Perry said.

Although he sympathizes with teachers faced with being laid off, he feels it might all be for the best. "Quite frankly I think the School Committee is doing these kids a favor by RIFing them at a younger age. It will leave them better off financially and morale-wise," Perry insisted.

He estimates that as many as 75 percent of the male teachers in Winchester "would opt to get out" if a job with equal salary and opportunity for advancement were offered them by industry. "And that's not to say women aren't looking either but, without trying to sound sexist, the majority of the males are the breadwinners," Perry said.

WEA President Steve Gorrie, who has been a Winchester teacher for 12 years, is yet another veteran who would not be totally averse to a career change even though his job, at least for now, is secure.

"I'm the first to admit if something really enticing came along I'd jump," Gorrie said. "I keep toying with the idea of looking around although I really like teaching."

Although teachers like Perry and Gorrie are also contemplating leaving teaching, they have the comfort of knowing they will have their job when school opens again in September. Others don't have that luxury.

Gorrie said the local unions have not dealt with the problem in depth, leaving career counseling advice and assistance to the Massachusetts Teachers Association.

"One thing that should be said is that this is a very personal decision. An association or union I don't think should try to build another person's philosophy. You just have to give them the facts and then they have to make a very personal decision," Gorrie said.

If many teachers are making the decision to leave teaching they perhaps could not have picked a worse time. Most teachers have turned to the high tech industries and have found themselves in a huge line. Calls by many teachers to such firms as Wang Laboratory and Digital Computer have confirmed fears they might have had that they should have made the transition earlier.

"People said with declining enrollment maybe this was the time to get out," Scanlon remembered when he was first notified that he might be RIFed two years ago. "When I had the opportunity to get out of teaching maybe I should have. I am a little chagrined that two years ago when I first got RIFed the job market was not so glutted," Scanlon added.

Scanlon, who also coaches the girls soccer team and boys tennis team at the high school, said he has had a couple of interviews for sales jobs that have sparked his interest.

"My commitment is to education," Scanlon says, adding, "even though I know that may sound trite. But before I didn't have the motivation to get out there and start job hunting. I love teaching," he concluded. Not so anymore.

Daviau said "pure frustration over what was happening to my career," compelled him to search intensively for non-teaching jobs last summer.

"There was absolutely no way I was going to stay in this field. If you are the kind of individual who has any kind of aspirations then you've got to say I don't need this baloney. So last September I had to decide whether I wanted to suffer through this year after year or whether I intended to do something to get into the right career," Daviau said.

Joanne Martignetti isn't quite as optimistic about her chances in the job market. "The job market is terrible," she says simply. "You call a lot of places and say you are a teacher and they don't want to talk to you. There's too many teachers applying. They'll tell you I can get a kid right out of college who has been trained for the job," she said.

"I have no regrets about teaching in Winchester," she continued. "The only regret that I do have is that I've been told I'm going to lose my job."

Chrusz will have a lot of regrets if he is forced to get out of teaching.

"Ever since I can remember I never wanted to do anything else but teach," Chrusz said. "I think I'm perfectly capable of working in any other profession but I wouldn't enjoy myself nearly as much in any other profession. If I couldn't teach in Winchester I would probably look for a job out of state where I wouldn't be faced with Prop. 2.5."

Chrusz, who lives in Watertown with his wife of almost three years, is still optimistic he will retain his job in Winchester. Sort of.

"I don't expect to be RIFed this year," he grinned wryly. "Just like I didn't expect to be RIFed last year..."

Winchester Teachers Are Not Alone

The president of a Boston organization that specializes in finding new careers for professionals estimates that "25 percent of the teachers in Massachusetts will not remain in the profession."

Karl Bielby, President and owner of Mainstream Associates, which has a contract with the Massachusetts Teachers Association (MTA) to help redirect teachers into new fields, said, "dissatisfaction and unhappiness with the profession is pervasive. They're leaving because of the cutbacks in the budget but also because of huge changes in job conditions," Bielby said in an interview recently.

Bielby, who started his service 10 years ago, insists it is not just the teachers who are threatened by layoffs due to Prop. 2.5 who are seeking his help.

"Sixty-five to 70 percent of the teachers that I work with are not in danger of being RIFed," Bielby said. He cited a recent workshop held in Danvers where he spoke to 22 teachers and not one was in danger of losing his job.

Although the high-tech fields are being swamped by applications from teachers, Bielby and MTA Director of Public Relations, Al Benjamin, agree that teachers have many skills that can be valuable to private industry.

Bielby says teachers are ideal for people-oriented jobs that require organizing and coordinating of activities as well as in the communications field where their English skills can be utilized.

"Many teachers have tremendous talent. They just don't recognize their own abilities to perform in many different areas. It is a question of doing a self-assessment. If you haven't written a resume in years then it can be a little traumatic," Benjamin said.

Benjamin says the MTA offers ongoing workshops on career counseling and has available lists of career seminars to be presented by private industry. He pointed to a training program sponsored by the MTA, the Department of Education, the high tech industries and the Keefe Vocational High School in Framingham last fall that was attended by 34 teachers. Thirty of those people now have jobs in the computer field, Benjamin said.

Nevertheless, Benjamin is distressed by the aura surrounding public education in Massachusetts since the passage of Prop. 2.5.

"Massachusetts was once a leader in developing public education. Now it is a leader in dismantling public education. And it's a shame," Benjamin said.

Crawford Church Slates Auction For March 21

Members of Crawford Memorial United Methodist Church will hold a public auction in the church's Gifford Hall Saturday, March 21.

Bidding will begin at 7 p.m. Articles up for bid will be available for inspection one hour earlier.

Auction chairman Gordon Grant said church members and others have donated a wide range of "auctionable" goods. They include antiques, collectibles, furniture and objects of art, he said. Among them he listed collectors' plates, a snowblower, trainsets, a walnut spinet desk and a crocheted bedspread 100 years old.

Many pledges to perform services utilizing donors' special skills also are being auctioned, Grant said. Such services include preparation of tax forms, sewing, babysitting, bridge instruction and preparation of dinner for six.

Grant also noted that the auction will be presided over by a professional auctioneer. He is Roy Burdick of Williamstown. Burdick is donating his services.

Donations, which are tax-deductable, are welcome anytime prior to the auction. Grant, who lives at 1 Yale st., will arrange to have difficult-to-deliver articles picked up by members of his committee.

Auction proceeds are earmarked for repair of the church's organ.

Drinking Mates Subject Of Series

Mystic Valley Mental Health Center Association, Inc. is offering a series of six workshops for women concerned about their husband's drinking.

The workshops will meet on six consecutive Mondays beginning April 6, from 7:30-8:45 p.m. in the Barn (located behind the mental health center) at 186 Bedford st., Lexington.

According to Lydia Leacock, Community Education Specialist who will conduct the workshops, families with abusive drinkers have some very difficult, yet predictable problems.

"Some of these problems can be managed when the proper support and information is available. The aim of our program is to offer participants specific coping strategies and to provide group members an opportunity to gain support," she said.

The workshop fee is $20. Scholarships are available.

character. This program should evaluate current zoning laws to correct any inadequacies and ambiguities which I believe now exist. It would be imperative that this program sought and incorporated input from town residents.

The position I am seeking on the Planning Board will demand my time, my effort and my ability to assist in the best possible planning for the people of the Town of Winchester. I am ready to do this and I ask your support on March 31.

Alexander J. Fay

Alexander J. Fay Sr.

I, Alexander J. Fay, Sr. announce my candidacy for election to the Winchester Planning Board.

I have resided in Winchester for the past 30 years. During this time I have been a Town Meeting Member, on the Personnel Board, Chamber of Commerce and both a Sponsor and manager of Winchester Little League.

I am married to the former Grace FitzSimmons. Our seven children have attended the Winchester School System from kindergarten through Grade 12. I have a had a plumbing and heating business with offices in both Winchester and Medford for 32 years.

I feel that my experience in service to this community qualifies me to continue to serve the town of Winchester on the Planning Board.

John R. Pasillo

John Pasillo

John R. Pasillo of 1 Parker rd. announces his candidacy for the office of the Winchester Housing Authority. In declaring his candidacy, Pasillo stated that he has over thirty years in the real estate business, from construction to property management.

It is his belief that his thirty years of knowledge and experience in private business will be useful in serving on the Winchester Housing Authority. Pasillo points out the lack of interest in elderly housing for senior citizens. Towns like Arlington and Woburn have work proceeding on two elderly housing complexes. He feels that the Housing Authority will benefit from his knowledge, experience and abilities to cope with the housing shortage in town.

A highly decorated veteran of World War II, Pasillo served in Europe with the Eighth Air Force. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, Bronze Star and five Air Medals.

Pasillo and his wife, Ruth and son, Mark, who is a college student, have been residents of the town for twenty years. Pasillo has always been involved in the problems of people. He is a member of the Tufts Jumbo Club, Dante Alighieri Society of Massachusetts, Gridiron Club of Greater Boston, Sons of Italy - Woburn Lodge no. 1406, Knights of Columbus - 4th degree, Burlington Assembly, Veterans of Foreign Wars - Medford Post no. 1012, Knights of Columbus 3rd degree, Winchester Council no. 10, Air Force Association, Holy Name Society - c/o Immaculate Conception Church, Winchester.

Pasillo urges the voters of Winchester to get out and vote on Tuesday, March 31. A vote for Pasillo will give the Housing Authority a step in the right direction towards solving the housing problems in Winchester.

David J. West

I wish to announce my candidacy for Town Meeting member from District 1 and to thank those residents who signed my nominating petition.

In the course of gathering signatures I had some interesting as well as enlightening discussions. Of particular note is the fact that all residents I met were well informed and interested in Winchester's future as well as their own. It is also significant that none of those I spoke with have any desire to see "meat ax" cuts in the school system nor in any other town department. Rather, they request that frills and marginally effective programs or services be eliminated, especially those which are directed to limited interests or of nebulous value.

I believe these to be valid, reasonable requests and will support them if I am elected.

During the next four weeks I will present position papers to the Star for publication. Among the first of my topics will be the proposed expansion of Winchester Hospital. I invite all residents to inform me of any particular concerns which you would like me to address. A letter or phone call to my home will be appreciated.

Kenneth John Astill

Candidate for Town Meeting (1 year term) Precinct 7

Winchester is entering a period of cutbacks in local government sponsored services, due to Proposition 2.5. The enthusiasm of private organizations and volunteer groups must be relied upon, more than ever, to maintain the activities that help contribute to the quality of life in Winchester. It is in response to these problems that I submit my name for election to the Town Meeting for a one-year term representing Precinct 7.

Community groups have always supported the needs of our town. I have benefited from the activities of these community groups during my nineteen years as a resident. I have tried to contribute to Winchester as a coach in the Winchester Little League for eight years and through St. Eulalia's C.Y.O. basketball as a coach for the past five seasons.

I attended Winchester schools and graduated from W.H.S. I am a graduate of Tufts University with a B.A. in Economics. Currently, I am employed by the First National Bank of Boston.

Town Meeting

I believe that my education and experience will help me understand Winchester's financial difficulties. I have tried to contribute to Winchester's quality of life with my energy in the past and your vote will give me a chance to do so in the future.

Ruth M. Reinhardt

Ruth M. Reinhardt, 5 Grove Street, Precinct 4.

Believing in the importance of choice, and my own readiness to serve, I have taken out papers to run for Town Meeting, representing Precinct 4.

I moved to Winchester with my family two years ago from Plymouth, Massachusetts. I am a graduate of Wheelock College in Boston and taught as an early childhood education specialist in Seattle, Washington. With my husband I have raised four children to college age and am presently guiding our youngest two through Mystic School.

Our choice of Winchester was the result of a long search. When time came to decide we knew as well as any what was right for the family. We liked the town's setting, our future home, our local neighborhood, and Winchester's education and recreation services. I would like to see that quality continue, both for ourselves in the family and for all others in the community. All the town's services are important to our welfare, police and fire departments as well as administrative, educational, and cultural services that we need for ourselves and our future adult citizens still growing up.

As a Town Meeting member I will willingly gather the thoughts and listen to the interests of the people I represent.

Phyllis B. Williams

Phyllis B. Williams of 18 Mystic ave. has announced her intent to run for re-election as a Town Meeting Member representing Precinct 3.

In commenting on her candidacy, Williams observed, "I began my career in volunteer service to our town over 30 years ago...as a soap carving instructor for the Saturday morning youth center located in the old Bacon Street Elementary School! We need caring, experienced people more than ever to serve Winchester during this critical period of fiscal austerity. After all these years of being involved, I'm certainly not going to lose interest now!"

Williams has served as a Town Meeting Member since 1972. She was also Chairman of the Personnel Board in 1978 during her four year term of office.

In addition, she is a charter member and Past President of the Winchester Jaycees (Jaycee Women); Past President of the Lincoln School Parents' Association; former Education Chairman for the McCall Jr. High School Parents' Association; former Executive Board member of the WHS Parent-Faculty Association; and four year representative to the Winchester Community School Association.

Candidate Williams and her husband, John, have lived in Winchester for forty-three years. They have five children and one grandchild.

Mary E. Vitka

Candidate for one-year term town meeting member, Precinct Seven

During the almost twenty-five years that I have lived in Winchester, I have volunteered my energies in many facets of community affairs - schools, scouting, hospital, and charitable fund-raising. I now wish to represent the interests of the voters of Precinct 7 as they relate to the overall concerns of the Town.

Many difficult decisions will have to be made during this Town Meeting to establish the priorities that will enable us to maintain the highest quality of services consistent with the austerity of our fiscal mandate.

The decisions will affect parents with school-age children, and they will affect senior citizens on fixed incomes. They will affect the levels of safety and security provided by our police and fire departments, as well as the Library and the water, sewer, and highway departments, among others.

My activities over the years have given me a sense of the needs and concerns of the various groups who will be affected by potential cuts in Town services. My goal will be to weigh the budgetary proposals and their impact so that the effects will be equitably distributed.

I urge you to vote in the Town Election on March 31st, and I solicit your vote for me.

... Bedlam Triumphed Celtics Top 76ers For Hoop Title

All the ingredients were there for a match-up of epic proportions. An overflow crowd, banners, balloons, bedlam and the two best teams in the league—the Celtics and the 76ers.

But the star for the Celts was not Larry Bird, it was Susan Barbaro. The star for the 76ers was not The Doctah, it was Kristen McNamara. The game was not at the Boston Garden or The Spectrum, it was at the Lincoln School. It was, of course, the first annual Girls Recreation Basketball Championship.

And fittingly enough the Celtics walked away with the championship on St. Patrick's weekend with a grueling overtime win over the Sixers, 48-41.

In the junior division championship held earlier in the afternoon, Kathy Furey, Amy Derry and Jodi McCoy paced the Green team to a 12-6 victory over the Red team.

But the crowd had come to see the big girls play and when it was all over

The Celts had roared out to a surprising 22-11 halftime lead thanks to the efforts of the aforementioned Barbaro (26 points) and steady contributions from Liz Doherty, Amy Peluso, Kara Buckley and Lisa Galante.

Latanson, and Jori Cutler. The club was coached by Kim Carpenter and Laurie Carroll.

The Red team, who first had to dispose of the Blue team, 14-10, in the semi-final duel, was paced in the championship by Christine Philliou, Courtenay MacMillan and Jennifer Campbell.

In the senior division consolation match-up, the Sachems, who the pollsters had predicted to be the strongest team in the league, captured third place honors with a 17-10 triumph over the Lakers.

Sachem All Stars Karen Serieka and Laura Accardo did the bulk of the scoring as they have all year in Saturday's defensive battle. Debbie Cahill led the upstart Lakers Saturday with help from All Stars Laurie Schwerin, Paula Ricciardelli and Ellen Donahoe.

After all the action was completed an elated league President Donna Tanner presented the trophy to the champion Celtics and announced the league All Stars, as recommended by the coaches and approved by the league directors.

Named to the All Star squad were Barbaro and Peluso from the champs; McNamara and Powers from the 76ers; Ricciardelli and Schwerin from the Lakers; Accardo and Serieka from the Sachems; Patty Taylor from the Bullets and Ellen Clavin, Mary Pat Furey and Barbara Delaney from the Bruins. Honorable Mention Stars were Carey MacDonald from the 76ers, Doherty and Buckley from the Celtics, Lauren Hartnett from the Bruins and Donahoe from the Lakers.

Members of the junior champions, the Green team, were Sara Ciotti, Jen Ciotti, Pam Taylor, Jenna-Marie Maconochie, Mary Sampson, Maureen Kenny, Sara

Three That Would Have Made A Difference

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

They are The Gang That Could Shoot Straight, or, perhaps, The Three That Got Away. Whatever you decide to call them, since Kevin Conley, Fran Murray and Brendan Nolan took their collective hockey skills away from Winchester, the results have been telling.

Matignon won their second consecutive state title Monday night at the Boston Garden, only the fifth team ever to accomplish the feat. It also marked the fourth consecutive year that Conley and Matignon had made it — at least — to the Eastern Mass. finals.

Austin Prep went to the EMass semi-finals this year before being bulldozed by Acton-Boxboro. Last season Fran Murray's team was eliminated from the state tournament by a St. John's Prep team that featured "the best American hockey prospect — ever," Bob Carpenter.

Arlington Catholic Athletic Director and hockey coach Dan Shine said "nobody even knew we had a hockey team," when Arlington High was dominating the sport in the 60s and 70s. In the four years Brendan Nolan has played for the Cougars, all have been marked by Boston Garden appearances. The team, during the regular season the past two years, has run up a 34-2 record.

Definitely, Three That Got Away.

The Beginning

Sitting in the living room of their Laurel st. home, Louise Conley tries to remember when her son Kevin first started playing hockey. Five years old? Six? She's not sure.

"It must have been four," Kevin corrects her. "It was before I started school."

All three grew up playing in the Winchester Youth Hockey system. They started in Sprites, the 7 and 8 a.m. games on the weekend, continued on through the customary maze of the Midgets, Pee Wees and Bantams right up to junior high and high school. All received the tutelage of Jack Falla, who was Youth Hockey in Winchester when The Three were growing up. "In bantams and squirts we always had pretty good teams," Nolan said, remembering his days playing alongside Murray. "If we all had stayed together at Winchester it might have been different, here because Winchester had a good year. They really improved a lot this year."

The Decision

The Three left Winchester to play hockey for the same reasons, for different reasons. The decision to play elsewhere was made at different times, perhaps, but there was no hesitation, no second thoughts.

By the time The Three had reached the ninth grade, in Nolan's case, the seventh grade, the determination that their hockey futures would be best served at such institutions as Matignon, Austin Prep and Arlington Catholic, had been made.

When Conley made the final decision and headed off to Matignon as a ninth grader, he was joining a select group. George White, a freshman star at the University of New Hampshire, was one forward. Tom O'Regan, who had attained similar status at Boston University, was another forward. And Jerry August, who has backboned the BU defense for two seasons, was there. A select group, indeed.

"I had decided it would either be there or Austin Prep," Conley said. "But at that time Austin Prep was Division II and I wanted to play Division I," he added.

For Conley, the Division I versus Division II dilemma was an important issue. The difference in the two, most observers agree, is the depth. The first line of good Division II teams are often as good as those in Division I. After that, the quality drops off quicker, than Jimmy Carter's popularity did last November.

"We scrimmaged Barnstable, a Division II team before the season," Conley said recently. "They were supposed to win it all there and we had heard a lot of noise that they were supposed to be really good, that they could be a contender in Division I. Well, it was over before the first period ended. We had something like seven goals before the period was over." End of discussion.

But the main reason Conley went to Matignon, as well as Murray to Austin Prep, was the uncertainty of Winchester hockey. In the mid-70s Winchester was divided over the need for hockey because of its expense. The battle stretched over a period of two or three years. That was, in essence, the last straw.

"I've missed a lot of friends I have in Winchester," Conley said. "But I didn't want to get to my junior year and have no hockey team. I knew I wanted to play hockey."

Murray concurred. He played at Rivers School in Weston as a freshman but decided to transfer after one year because it was too far away. When it came time to decide between where he would go next, it was virtually no contest. "I knew a few kids that were at Austin. It was a good school academically and it had a good hockey program," Murray said. "Winchester was good but we didn't even know if we would have hockey in a year."

Nolan says the debate over the need for hockey in Winchester didn't concern him that much. He wanted

Hockey Wars

And now, folks, we present to you Round Two of hockey versus the hockey haters.

When last seen, of course, the hockey haters had sent Winchester hockey reeling with a right to the wallet about five years ago. The furor over hockey costs in town pushed the icemen to the brink before the game was salvaged.

As much as it could be, that is. In the interim the team has had to play three consecutive years of road games until this season - when they unveiled their new home rink. In Watertown.

But even more importantly, during that same interim Winchester lost more. They lost players. Kevin Conley left to attend Matignon, as in two-time defending state champion Matignon. Fran Murray was seen heading north to Reading and Austin Prep, another team that has become accustomed to playing in the Boston Garden around the educational atmosphere that a small private school offered. He had attended Belmont Hill as seventh and eighth grader but decided he wanted out from there. After looking at Malden Catholic and Arlington Catholic, he opted for the latter. Joining him from the Belmont Hill team was Jack Irwin, who finished this season with 37 goals and 86 points for the Cougars.

"I thought I'd get a better education there. Winchester High has a good education too but for me it was just a better atmosphere at Arlington Catholic," Nolan said. "Plus," he added with a smile, "I definitely wanted to have someplace to play hockey."

Shine doesn't think the Catholic schools are the answer for everyone, but concedes the smaller private schools do have an edge today, an advantage that may grow if Prop. 2.5 is a bad as some fear.

"The tide has turned toward a small school atmosphere. It might not be a better overall situation for all students but it is for certain students," Shine said. "Hockey is the big sport in this area. Kids want to play with winning teams. That's why Matignon has been winning. That's why St. John's has been winning. That's why we've been successful," Shine, in his third year as head coach, added.

The Careers

Things haven't always gone as smoothly as this season has for Conley, who was the second leading scorer on the team and whose entire line will be present for Hockey Night in Boston All Star games that begin Saturday.

He had seen some playing time as a freshman at the Cambridge school that has become synonymous with hockey excellence. His second season saw him skating on the first line on a team that was expected to be a superb one. When they got off to a lackluster start — for them — Coach Marty Pierce began coming down hard in practice. Too hard, as it turned out, for Conley.

"It was right after we had lost to St. John's," Conley remembers. "The coach was real upset and we were having real hard practices with hitting drills, everything, and I, unfortunately got hurt."

What happened was, during one of the "hard" practices, one of Conley's teammates slammed him into the boards from behind, breaking a few ribs. "I skated for three days before I realized they were broken," Conley recalled. "But then I had to miss two and a half weeks."

When he returned he never regained his spot on the first line although he did finish out the season playing, a season which saw Matignon lose for the second straight year in the EMass finals.

That was, of course, the last time Conley and Matignon has done nothing but cruise. His junior year the team got off to a slow start but it was respect," he added. "Another reason I'm glad we played Woburn is that I knew all the kids," he added, laughing.

After a junior year that saw him playing his off wing and still notch 33 points while setting up the league's top scorer, Tony Visone (now at Harvard), this year made it all worth it with the trip to the Garden, the victories over Woburn and Randolph, and, finally, a league championship.

"We finally beat Billerica," he laughed. "They are our arch-rivals. They always come in first and we were always second. It got so we were called the 'second place team.'" he added.

This season Murray started out the year as a center but after the third game was shifted to his more comfortable spot on the wing. It made a difference.

"In the four or five games after that he had something like 20 points," Hayes said. "He has an exceptional shot, a good wrist shot and the accuracy of his snap shot is unbelievable. Plus he shoots well out of the dribble and there's not too many high school players that can do that," Hayes added admirably.

Nolan has been the non-scorer of the group, the old style defenseman whose strongest asset has been his defensive skills. Not exciting, perhaps, but satisfying. He did his job and did it very well, thank you.

"I like defense best," Nolan admits. "Everybody can't be the hero. Somebody's got to be steady. He (Shine) doesn't mind if we rush the puck but he'd rather if we set it up. And I don't mind as long as I get the assists," the short, stocky Nolan explained.

Shine liked Nolan just as he was. "Brendan has never been much of a goal scorer but he's got a lot of assists for us (this year he finished with three goals, 15 assists) and that can be a little more prestigious for a defenseman. We don't like to have our defensemen rush the puck even though Brendan is a guy that could have done it very well. If we had let him loose he could have got a lot more points even though he did get his share of points," Shine said.

Proof that Nolan is indeed an offensive threat when he has to be can be seen by his countless shifts as a forward when injury or illness required it.

As a sophomore the Cougars were decimated at the end of the season when they lost one forward because of academic ineligibility and another to injury. Defenseman Nolan became forward Nolan. Quickly. And successfully.

Nolan doesn't remember too much about his contributions that year, primarily because he had to keep pinching himself to make sure he was actually playing in the Boston Garden.

"That really sticks out, the first time getting into the Garden," Nolan said with a smile. "There I was with kids that had been there before and I didn't know where I was. I didn't know where to go," he laughed.

He nevertheless recovered from that initial dose of stage fright to come back his junior year and be named the team's best defensive player by his peers when it was all over. Shine says his leadership ability was one reason for that.

"He's a quiet kid but the leadership qualities were there. He's a very serious player and I think the kids looked up to him for that, because he did take it seriously. You need a player like that to become a leader. You need the guys that like to fool around too but you also need someone who's serious and someone who is going to take the game serious," Shine explained.

Nolan freely admits that the 9-3 drubbing by Falmouth in the EMass semi-finals this season took away from what was otherwise a banner year. The team had finished 17-1 and won their first 15 before being stung by Dom Savio.

"It was getting monotonous," Nolan laughed. "When we didn't lose a game until the second or third from the end the little kids began to say we couldn't lose. But two games before we lost to Dom Savio they had started creeping up on us. We were only winning like 5-3. The coach was getting worried."

Nolan admits there is "more glory in Division I" but insists his league, his team, is underrated. He concedes depth is the difference between the two levels but said Arlington Catholic is making great strides towards becoming a legitimate Division I team.

We're a good Division II hockey team and not far away (from Division I)," Nolan said. "The four years I've been here, that's where we've been headed."

The Future

And, now what? Well, needless to say The Three That Got Away will be making their move onto college hockey. And, no surprise here, they will do well.

Conley, as one of the best players on the best team in the state, stands to be the most successful at the Division I level. That college competition will not provide insurmountable barriers should come as little surprise. After all, Matignon warms up for each season with scrimmages against junior varsity teams from area colleges. With a lot of success, it should be noted.

He has already been accepted to Colgate University in New York but is waiting to hear from his top four choices, Harvard, Yale, Brown and Princeton. Colgate a back-up? Enough said there.

Murray and Nolan expect to try their talented hands in Division II hockey which in the past few years has been nothing to smirk at. Just ask Northeastern University. When they beat Merrimack earlier this season it was their first victory over a Division II team in three years.

Murray is looking at Babson but his first choice is Colby College in Waterville, Maine. Under the leadership of former Boston University and New England Whaler Coach Jack Kelly, Colby has become a Division II contender.

And the same with Babson where Nolan is hoping to play at next season. Last year's Arlington Catholic scoring wizard Paul Donato enrolled there this season and walked off with the ECAC Division II Rookie of the Year award.

Definitely, The Three That Got Away.

You are invited to attend-free An important Merrill Lynch seminar to help you save money on your 1980 and 1981 taxes.

Some of the tax-saving ideas you'll learn at our free seminar are simple (but you'd be shocked at how many investors overlook them). Some are complicated and require careful planning. Some apply to virtually all investors, while others apply only to those in special situations. Some are earmarked for investors of more modest means. Others, frankly, are for the rich. (But they're fascinating!) And, best of all, there are many ideas you can put to work right now in time to save money on your 1980 and 1981 income taxes, and for many years to come.

One of the main topics at the seminar will be capital gains and losses and how to manage them for best tax results. You'll learn when to take gains or losses; differences between long-term vs. short-term; rates at which gains or losses are taxed; how to figure short and long-term gains and losses. And much more.

Trusts and custodial accounts. Custodial accounts and short-term Clifford Trusts can help provide for anything from a college education to support for elderly relatives. And you'll learn how these strategies can save taxes by using your relatives tax brackets instead of yours.

Tax investments. This is especially for investors in tax brackets above 49%. You'll learn how to use tax investments, or "shelters," to earn profits and establish tax losses and write-offs.

In addition to the topics covered at this seminar, you'll get a free booklet detailing ways to save on taxes in additional areas.

Just one of the many ideas you'll get at this seminar could save you thousands of tax dollars. The seminar is free, but space is limited. So reserve your seat today.

★ Hockey

this time in recent years. Ditto for Ed Ducharme who joined Murray at Austin Prep. Others, like Brendan Nolan at Arlington Catholic and Ned Fortin at St. Sebastian's, also passed up a chance to play hockey for Winchester.

Not all those kids left Winchester because of those problems in the mid-70s. Some surely would have gone the private school route regardless of what was brewing in Winchester.

But it is nevertheless important to note that two of them — Conley and Murray — both cemented their decision to play elsewhere when they looked at local hockey and saw there was a possibility there could be no hockey before their four years were up.

"For two, three years in a row it was we may, we may not have a hockey program," said Mary Pronski, who was a member of the School Committee and fought as hard as anybody to save it.

It was spared the axe back then but the result was hardly a renewed enthusiasm for Winchester hockey. This year's team won five games, a number that fell just one short of the total for the five previous years combined. It has taken awhile.

Now Prop. 2.5 has arrived and is aiming for the wallet again. Among the proposed cuts in the athletic budget is one that would require parents to pay for practice ice time. That amount is estimated to be between $200-$300.

"I heard the kids in Winchester will have to pay for their own ice time for practice ice," Conley said recently. "That's very expensive. Every year it's going to go downhill."

"Nothing against Winchester," Murray added. "But I've got so much more exposure by going to Austin Prep. I never would have made it to the Garden otherwise. That's something every kid should experience," Murray concluded.

Winchester Hockey Coach Mike Houghton is hopeful the impact of Prop. 2.5 will not negate the gains the team made this season. And he insists there are two sides to the private school route. But all people ever hear about is one.

"I have ambivalent feelings for a kid that goes away to play hockey," Houghton said. "If they're going for the education, fine. But to go someplace to play hockey? I don't know. If Kevin Conley had played for Winchester he would have had the same exposure. The scouts come to see the Middlesex League teams."

"I think I see both sides of the story. We had two real stars this year," he said referring to Conley and Murray. "Of course I hated to see them go but I think this year was an exception in that we had two real stars and they made out real well. I'd respectfully point out some other kids went away and didn't do so well," Houghton said.

The only thing Winchester has to do to make sure the best players stay in town is a basic tenet of any sport. Win.

"Winning, that's the only thing that's going to do anything. If a kid is playing good hockey it doesn't make any difference if the team's in the Catholic Conference or in the Middlesex League, Houghton insisted.

Rockies Top Rangers, 4-3 In Youth Hockey

In three more squeakers it was Rockies 4, Hawks 3 and Flyers 6, Islanders 6, for the Juniors while the Seniors saw the Rangers 8, Wings 7 and Bruins 7, Whalers 4.

The Rockies led by Steve Mahoney's hat trick scored four goals in three minutes to tie for first place. Scott Slater had three assists while Chris Ciulla had a goal and assist with Kurt Rosenberger and Mike Sayre double assists. For the Hawks Paul Marshall had two goals and an assist and John Cucinatti a goal and two assists. Joe DiGiovanni assisted twice and Brian Gianni once. Jim Saunders was Front Flyer with two goals and three assists with Ricky Walsh adding a goal and two assists.

The other scorers were Robbie Bourque, Eric Saunders and Doug Jordan. Assisting were Bill Lavelle (2) Mike Ruseo, Matt Olson, Mike Jordan, Bourque and E. Saunders.

Dave Ducharme's hat trick, Sean Donlon's two goals and assist and Howard Mahoney's three assists led the Islanders. Rich Mawn had a goal and an assist with other assists from T. J. Raymond (2), Brian Flynn (2) Anthony Bonfilio, Anthony LaCascia and Brian Walsh. Kevin Marshall and Mark Fantasia looked good in goal.

One Catholic school Athletic Director and hockey coach thinks if Prop. 2.5 does have the impact some say it will, it can only hurt public school sports.

"If the public schools drop a lot of sports I won't say it's going to help the Catholic schools but it's not going to hurt them," said Arlington Catholic's Dan Shine.

He adds that there has been more interest in the last several months from parents of high school athletes.

"I don't know if there have been more applications or not," Shine says. "But there have been more phone calls to the school. I've had more phone calls. There have been a lot of inquiries on how to get their kid in," Shine added.

Still, Houghton remains cautiously optimistic.

"I'd really have to reserve judgment until I see what happens next year. But we spent a lot of time with the freshmen this year and I don't think any were planning on leaving. But if they go, they go. I can only put out on the ice what I've got," he rationalized.

He also says he doesn't think a bill for ice time is going to scare away too many hockey parents. "The most it's going to cost him is $250 per kid. You can't send away a kid for $250. Some fathers have told me that they've been paying that right along."

Houghton also thinks the kids are missing things by leaving Winchester. "The one question I'd like to ask is did they miss the other sports. They went away and became one-dimensional players. I don't think anything should be decided on the basis of one sport. It is such a fleeting thing."

Guarnotta Named To All Star Team

Brian Guarnotta, 1 Myopia rd., was selected to the Catholic Conference soccer All Star team for his 1980 performance in 1980 at Boston College High School.

Double assists came from Robbie and Sean McDonough, Charlie Mahoney and Shawn Sizemore with singles from Matt Quill and Billy Johanson. Chris LoCascio has a goal and two assists for the Whalers with other scorers Dan Kinsbourne, Ted Dever and Jon Furey. Assistants were John Colantino (2), Arthur Horiatis, Alex and Mike Furey, and Tim Buckley.

The Rangers power came from Tom Struthers two goals and two assists, Doug Norberg one goal and two assists and Robert Murphy three assists. One goal and one assist came from John Flynn, Bill Newburn, Mitch Sorenson, Allen Doumit and Sean Murphy. Double assists were Steve Adrian and Lenny Wotton. Jack Struthers hat tricked with two assists. Three assists each came from Matt Devine and Scott Wadman for the Wings. Pete Pywell and Andy Lowenstein each had a goal and assist with Rob Baruffaldi and Matt DiGiovanni a goal. Assistants were Phil Aswad (2), Greg and Mark Wheeler. Showing well in nets were Pete O'Brien, Steve Horiatis, Brian Gannon and Mike White.

Basketball Festival

It has often been referred to by some local reporters as the "biggest and best tournament in amateur basketball in New England". They are, of course, referring to the Spring Basketball Festival sponsored by the Arlington Boys Club.

The tournament is scheduled to begin on April 16, with games held nightly Tuesday through Sunday, with the finals scheduled for May 15-16.

Historical Society Slates Visit To North Andover Homes

Two houses owned by the North Andover Historical Society will be visited Sunday, March 22, by members and friends of the Winchester Historical Society.

The Johnson Cottage, adjacent to the Society museum, contains a collection of early pewter, tools, lighting devices and other artifacts. The upper rooms are furnished in a style typical of a country dwelling in the 19th century.

The Parson Barnard house reflects English building traditions brought here in the late 17th century as well as elements of an emerging neo-classical style of the early 18th century. It was built as a saltbox and was originally a parsonage for a nearby church.

Weather permitting, there will be a short walk in the area to view old burying grounds and three outstanding Federal homes.

The trip is open to all and reservations may be made through Sarah Gold (729-2547). There will be a $2 donation requested. Meet at the Archival Center at 15 High St. at 1 p.m.

Friends Schedule 'The Rainmaker'

"Admirable skill . . . insight into the human heart . . . the touch of a poet . . . a hit you must see" is how the play "The Rainmaker" was described by New York critics when it had a lengthy run in that city.

Winchester audiences will have the opportunity to see a production of this play by the Unitarian Players on March 20, 21, 27, and 28.

The evening of March 27 has been taken over by the Friends of the Winchester Hospital as a benefit performance. Tickets for the other evenings may be secured by calling Pam Boerner at 729-5672.

Ed Burdekin, who is directing the play, has had a long career on the professional stage. For the past several years he has directed and performed for many little theater groups in the Greater Boston area.

In the cast of five men and one woman is Lisa Foley who was last seen in Winchester as the daughter in "The Glass Menagerie." She has a graduate degree in Theater Arts from Boston University.

Three of the men are Winchester residents: Al Smith was seen on the local "Kind Lady." Eric Freeman started out his acting career as a Winchester High School student. He continued to utilize his acting talent in many areas. Bob Ross commenced his acting career in the Players 1960 production of "Life with Father" in which he played one of the sons.

Phil Alibrandi is making his third appearance with the local group having played the role of the gentleman caller in "The Glass Menagerie." Jim Grana who is making his initial appearance in "The Rainmakers" is a three-time recipient of the "best actor" award at the New England Theater Drama Festival. Jim has directed for the Arlington Friends Of The Drama and has played on many neighboring stages.

You do what you're told.
"Your life is at stake," said Palladino's father, Patrick Sr. "You don't resist."

Five robberies in 11 years is not something you forget, Palladino said. It stays with you. The way you felt when the gun was leveled at your chest stays with you long after the robber has fled.

"There's a bell on the door," the younger Palladino explained. "Now, every time the bell on the door rings, I always look up and wonder."

The elder Palladino agreed. "You become paranoid," he said. "Every time the bell rings, you ask yourself, 'Should I push the (alarm) button.'"

After the robbery, the Palladinos were faced with going on, continuing to operate a business that robbers have forced them to close at 7 in the evening.

"We've been closing at 7 for three years now," Pat Jr. explained. "We felt like a target staying open any later. It really doesn't behoove us to stay open any later, it's a matter of re-educating our customers."

But that re-education involves more than simply posting a sign with the stores' hours.

"Business has been slow since Friday (the date of the latest robbery)," the younger Palladino said. "What person would send his wife or child or husband into a store that's been robbed at gunpoint. I know I wouldn't send my wife to a store like that."

He shook his head. "It's not a random occurrence," he said. "It was definitely planned. I'm sure they planned it."

His father agrees.

"They could have been in the store ten times, casing the place," he said. "Even if someone's acting suspiciously, what are you going to do. It's a store, it's a public place."

"They always ask for Class 2 narcotics (opiates like percodan and percoset)," the younger Palladino said. "The drugs they took Friday were worth $500, our cost. I'd say they're worth 10 to 15 times that on the street."

The Palladinos spent Tuesday doing the three to four hours worth of paperwork that follows all robberies.

There are forms to fill out — forms for the Drug Enforcement Administration, forms for the State Police, forms for the insurance company, forms for the local police.

"It results in a loss of time as well as of money and drugs," Patrick Jr. said. He shook his head again.

"I don't know. The guy came in and cocked the pistol and pointed at me. Maybe the customer being there made the difference. Maybe the customer would have been a witness. Maybe if the customer hadn't been there, he'd have popped me. I'll never know."

Last week, someone threw a brick through the front window of the pharmacy. No one can be sure if that vandalism was connected with the robbery. Maybe the robbers were checking the alarm system out, Palladino said.

"I would feel very good if other people learned something from this," the younger Palladino said.

"I would feel good if people read this and knew how to respond."

You cooperate.
You don't resist.
You do what you're told.
It's a shame, but it's true.
There can be no other response.

Churches Offer Support To People Of Atlanta

Members of Winchester churches join this Sunday in offering expressions of concern for the people of Atlanta and particularly for the families of the murdered youth of that city.

A committee of concerned resident citizens, supported by the Winchester Ecumenical Association, is urging local churches to include prayers and/or statements of concern in services of worship.

Church members and friends will be invited to sign a Petition that is addressed to the President of the United States and that urges increased support of the national government for the City of Atlanta as it continues to work for a speedy end to these crimes and restitution of some balance in the lives of the victims' surviving family members.

Each person who signs the petition will be given a green ribbon, to be worn as an inverted "V" until the killer(s) are found; after that, the ribbon, a symbol of life, is to be worn as "V."

Opportunities also will be provided for people to make contributions to special funds that will be delivered directly to community agencies and programs that are helping the afflicted communities in Atlanta and the families of the murdered children. Ms. Lois Anderson, a member of the local planning group, reports that already concerned citizens of Atlanta have formed programs of support that are providing for follow-up care for the families of the murdered children, creating peace patrols for neighborhoods, and developing summer camping programs for children and young people.

This local program is based on one developed by a Greater Boston group, COPAY, Committee for the Protection of Atlanta Youth, that sponsored special events and church services this past weekend. Mark A. Gray, Jr., and the Rev. Leroy Attles of the St. Paul AME Church in Cambridge serve as coordinators.

The Candidates Speak Out

Forum Covers 2½, Housing, Fees And Closings

Sunday was a day to discuss Proposition 2.5, the housing shortage in Winchester, proposed user fees and school closings as the ten candidates for town-wide offices met the public at a forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters at the Muraco School.

The following is a list of candidates and positions.

Board of Selectmen-Incumbent John J. Williams challenged by Mark Lombardi.

Proposition 2.5
Saying officials should give Proposition 2.5 the opportunity to work, challenger Lombardi said cuts should be made from "the top down rather than the bottom up."

Incumbent Williams, on the other hand, said every attempt should be made to preserve Winchester's "quality of life" under 2.5.

He said plans to revitalize the downtown area, on-going improvement work on the town's water and sewer system and other capital improvements, should not be forgotten in the face of Proposition 2.5.

User Fees
Williams expressed a willingness to "investigate" user fees as one means of meeting the mandate of Proposition 2.5.

Lombardi, on the other hand, flatly refused to consider such fees since he considers them "an additional way to get taxes from the taxpayer."

School Closings
While both Williams and Lombardi expressed opposition to further school closings, Lombardi supported putting unused schools "in mothballs" in case the structures are needed again "10 or 15 years down the line."

Williams, while opposing further closings, said it might become necessary to close a school if present estimates of the effect of 2.5 are worse than anticipated.

School Committee — Incumbents Sandra Rodgers and Mary Jean Weylman and challenger Mary Pronski.

School Closings
All three candidates opposed further school closings. Rodgers, who said she felt the six elementary schools now existing were "responsive to the basic concept" of neighborhood schools, said that as enrollment continues to decline school closings could become necessary.

Weylman opposed the closing of the Lynch School. She said plans to close the Lynch by School Superintendent William MacDonald could result in overcrowding at the Muraco School.

Athletics
While all three candidates agreed that the elimination of transportation to athletic events and the installation of facility rental fees would lessen the impact of 2.5, Pronski said she opposed the installation of a high fee for hockey players. That fee has been estimated at $150-$300 per player. She called such a fee "very discriminatory."

Administration
Both Rodgers and Pronski favored retention of a superintendent, an assistant superintendent for business, a curriculum director and a personnel director. Both favored keeping the Sanborn House open as the school department's headquarters.

Weylman parted ways with Rodgers and Pronski on moving the central office. She said she would favor moving administrative offices to a school downtown.

She called a move that has department heads teaching more next year "a step in the right direction."

She also said a restructuring of the central administration was out of the question since administrators are under contract.

Pronski countered by saying that administrators could be eliminated, even if they were under contract, if their positions were eliminated. Rodgers contended the cost of moving Sanborn House would cost more than retaining the central office in the Sanborn.

Planning Board — Incumbent Joseph Geary, challengers Harry Lindmark III and Alexander Fay.

The discussion of all three candidates centered around the lack of housing in Winchester.

Fay said he favored the building of housing, condos and apartments in

Voluntary Water Reductions Foreseen

By ROBIN WIEST
Star Reporter

Facing a possible second year of record-low rainfall, Winchester residents may be asked to impose voluntary restrictions on their water consumption as early as June, according to Water Superintendent Richard Warrington.

"We have already had one very bad year," Warrington told The Star in an interview last week. "Last year, 1980, was the second driest year in Winchester since 1875. If we have another one, it could really be catastrophic."

He said the town's reservoirs are two-thirds full and "in good shape." But they supply only 40 percent of Winchester's average 2.5 million gallon daily demand.

The Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) provides the bulk of the town's water consumption.

"We are so dependent on the MDC that if they have problems, we have problems," Warrington said.

And the MDC has problems. Big problems.

Senior MDC Engineer Marcus Kempe said an increase in demand for water coupled with declining resources due to the northeastern drought have placed a heavy strain on water supplies.

The MDC is now operating above safe yield of 300 million gallons daily for its 43 member communities, including Boston, and has depleted its three-year storage supply by one year, Kempe said.

When the MDC surpassed safe yield in 1969, it could accommodate the expanded 312 million gallon a day plea. But the Seventies were wet years and supply had increased with demand.

Today's increased water consumption is not due solely to rising population. Warrington said people are simply using more water per person.

He said an engineering firm in Boston has projected that water consumption per person per day would go up to 120 gallons in the year 2010 from 108 in 1978. "There are more water-using devices in the home," Warrington said. "People assume water is always going to be there."

It won't. Last year, demand kept rising. But the wet years are over and the MDC was met with a serious water shortage. Both trends, increased demand and decreasing supplies, could indicate a

Blakeley Will Develop Wyman

By STEVEN AUSTIN

The Blakeley Corporation, a Boston-based developer, received Selectmen's approval Monday to turn the Wyman School building into an 18-unit condominium project with a targeted occupancy date of July of 1982.

The company, headed by Robert F. Blakeley and Robert F. Walsh, submitted a bid of $414,000 for the 2.7 acre, Church st. site and was one of two finalists considered by the Alternative School Use Committee.

In recommending the Blakeley Company, Re-Use Committee Chairman Charles Tseckares said the group had initially received 19 proposals for developing the site. That number was subsequently reduced to six and finally, to two.

The second-place finisher in the proposals, the MB Group, also of Boston, had submitted a bid of $315,000.

Under the terms of the proposal submitted by Blakeley, the building would have one one-bedroom condo, two three-bedroom condos and 15 two-bedroom condos.

Prices at the structure are expected to range from $75,000-$225,000. The average sale price is expected to be $154,000, Tseckares said.

Selectmen Chairman Wade Welch questioned Tseckares concerning the insertion of a developer's control clause, which would allow the developer to control the project indefinitely.

Tseckares said officials of Blakeley had said they would comply with the law and not insert such a clause.

Under the terms of the Blakeley proposal, Winchester will receive a $50,000 down-payment when Town Meeting votes on the project during a special Town Meeting May 11. An additional $50,000 payment will be made to the town when the contract is signed.

Tseckares said the project would take nine or ten months to construct.

The units will be managed by the Boston-based firm of R.M. Bradley. Architectural work on the project will be done by Charles G. Hilgenhurst, also of Boston.

A public hearing to consider needed zoning changes for the site will be held March 30 at 8 p.m. in the Town Hall auditorium.

Currently, the building is zoned conservancy institutional, the category in which all school and public buildings fall. The Planning Board's hearing will consider changing that zoning to a multi-family residential district.

Members of the neighborhood committee which worked with the Re-Use Committee gave Selectmen a letter that asked that three items be included in the contract with Blakeley.

While they said they supported Blakeley as the developer, they asked that adequate screening, in the form of either a wall or shrubs, be placed along the east and west perimeters of the property.

Neighbors also asked that the driveway on the west side of the property be screened adequately and that the porte-cochere be not more than twelve feet off the ground.

The Wyman is the second school building to be converted to condominiums in Winchester. Last year, Selectmen voted to allow the Codman Company of Boston to develop the Washington School building into an 18-unit condo project.

For Taxis, A Rate Increase Means Meters

By SUSAN SCHNECK
Star Reporter

For Winchester taxi drivers it's a matter of meters and cents.

Selectmen granted taxi drivers a rate increase, effective April 15, with the stipulation that they also install meters by that time. And this completely changes the 50-year-old method of calculating taxi fares in Winchester.

The controversial zoning method will now be replaced with a mandatory $340 meter.

The rate hike is the first one for Winchester in seven years.

A ride from the Purity Supreme Supermarket to the Woburn line, a distance of roughly 1.5 miles, will now cost $2 for the first mile and 15 cents for each one tenth of a mile thereafter. This represents a change from about $1.50 under the zone system to about $2.50 under the new method.

Under the zoning system riders pay $1.25 for the first mile and the rest of the fare is determined according to the zone the ride travels through. Winchester is divided into eight different zones. Rates vary with the sections of town.

This system has been questioned by town officials because a passenger could travel three miles in one part of town and it would cost much more or less than the same traveling time and distance in another part of town.

Winchester Police Lt. Andrew Crawford explained that without a map in front of a passenger, it would be difficult, if not impossible for him to understand the basis for the fare.

Now riders will know the fare simply by glancing at the meter rather than relying on the driver.

Although the hike jumped 75 cents, Winchester still lags behind Arlington and Lexington's rate of $2.20 for the first mile," said Bob Pacy of Bob's Taxi. He is convinced that seven years without a rate hike is a record somewhere.

"I think Arlington and Lexington should be the gauge for Winchester," Pacy said. "The Board of Selectmen should increase the rates every year because of gas."

Pacy said the rate increase was a necessity — not a victory for anybody. "If you don't go up, you're out of business," he emphasized. "I know of no business, that is not subsidized, that doesn't raise prices."

"Let's face it," he continued, "the horse and buggy days are over."

But some Winchester residents who remember taxi fares not long after the "horse and buggy days" are not happy with the rate hike.

"Two dollars for a mile! That's ridiculous," said Winchester resident Irma Ganchi, a member of the Jenks Senior Center. "I give people rides here so they don't have to pay that much money. $2 is a heck of a lot of money," she added.

Pacy claims the rate increase does not hurt any one particular segment of people. "I don't see how you could hurt anyone in particular because taxis are a convenience. It's a service. The poor, injured and handicapped don't use cabs," he added.

Most Jenks Senior Center participants take advantage of rides from friends as it's more economical.

"The last time I took a cab it was $13 to go to Melrose to see my son," said

(Taxi - Page 32)

Charges Up, Aid Down

The preliminary word is in on the charges and receipts Winchester can expect from the state, and, according to Town Comptroller Al Faggiano, charges are up and aid is down.

The preliminary cherry sheet (a list of charges and aid the Commonwealth provides to Massachusetts communities) contains figures Faggiano called "pretty accurate at this point in time."

In fiscal 1982, Faggiano said charges will go up by 25.3 percent and state aid will be down six percent.

Winchester can expect to pay a total of $1,916,000 this year as opposed to charges of $1,529,000 in fiscal 1981. In state aid, Winchester will receive $109,549, as opposed to $328,468 in fiscal 1981.

The heaviest increase, Faggiano said, came in those costs paid to the Metropolitan Parks Commission. In this category, Winchester will be expected to pay $393,772. Those charges last year totalled $326,524.

Charges at the Metropolitan sewer system were also up by $65,190 to a total of $292,216.

Charges for the MBTA totalled $417,300 on the preliminary cherry sheet, up $30,317.

Charges for Metropolitan water were also up, coming in at $266,161, an increase of $186,679.

On the income side, state aid is down approximately $19,000, coming in at $302,549.

The bottom line of income, Faggiano said, came in at what he termed a "respectable" $2,876,443. Last year's bottom line of income came in at $2,868,121.

Water Hearing Set

Residents will have a chance to discuss a proposed 32 percent increase in water rates and the possible installation of a sewer use charge at a public hearing at Town Hall April 8 at 7:30 p.m.

Both the proposed water rate increase and the sewer use charge were suggested by Town Manager Tom Groux as two ways of meeting the requirements of Proposition 2.5.

Groux has also suggested tapping the Stabilization and Sale of Land Account Funds as another means of dealing with 2.5.

Groux's suggestion to increase town water rates amounts to a 104 percent increase from rates of 42 cents per 100 cubic feet in place last June. Town Meeting approved an increase from that figure to 65 cents per 100 cubic feet at that time.

Groux is currently suggesting a 21 or 22 cent increase this year.

Selectmen initially discussed the public hearing March 2. At that time, Groux said that date would be ideal since the town would then have a better idea of the sort of funding it could expect from the state. He also said a survey of water rates in surrounding towns would be complete by April 8.

Groux also said Coffin and Richardson, a Boston-based firm, should have completed a study of the town's sewer system by that date.

Monday, Selectman Edward F.

O'Connell asked Groux to report on the sewer study March 30, two days before the scheduled public hearing. O'Connell said he wanted to have specific figures before him prior to the public hearing date.

Groux said the town was currently "pushing" Coffin and Richardson to complete the study prior to the April 8 hearing.

Selectman Michael Saraco said during an earlier discussion of the proposed water rate increase he would not support it, saying, "The citizens of Winchester still haven't gotten over the sting of the last spring's increase. Here we are talking about increasing the water bill another 20 cents and no one can show me a reason why. I can't see it. I won't vote for it."

Armenian Scholarship

The Armenian Women's Educational Club will give scholarships to four students in the area who are U.S. citizens of Armenian extraction and high school seniors accepted to four-year colleges. Applications are available from Mrs. Rachel Dohanian, 36 Elizabeth rd., Belmont, 02178.

Selectmen's Notes

Appointments Approved

Selectmen Monday approved the appointment of four representatives to the town's Council on Youth.

Named to the Council was Jean Dillon, Howard Niblock, Berta Swanson and Veronica Fiorillo.

The Selectmen are represented on the Council by Board member Alan MacDonald.

Winton Club

Selectmen voted Monday to rent the Town Hall auditorium to the Winton Club for the 1982 Cabaret.

Dorothy P. Santos, the club's Cabaret chairman for next year, appeared before Selectmen asking that the club be allowed to rent the building for Jan. 2-25 of 1982.

Selectmen Chairman Wade Welch warned the club they were "likely to see an increase in energy costs and custodial care."

Elevator Article

Town officials will look into the feasibility of installing an elevator in Town Hall following a presentation by resident Vincent Carroll Monday.

The costs of installing the lift was estimated at approximately $60,000. The elevator is the subject of an article submitted by Carroll.

Information Asked

Selectmen asked additional information Monday from Jasam Koo, a Lexington resident who plans to purchase the bowling alley on Swanton st. prior to issuing a license for operation.

Koo appeared before Selectmen, asking the license, but Town Counsel Douglas Randall wanted additional information on the effect of the sale on the property surrounding the alley.

Koo is expected to meet again with Selectmen next week with his attorney to provide that information.

Self-Improvement Program

Personnel Board member Liz Herberick will examine the town's policy on the Self-Improvement Program following a meeting Monday with Selectmen.

The program, part of the negotiated agreement with fire and police officers, allows officers to work toward a college degree in a field related to their occupation.

History Group

On March 30, the History Group of the Winchester College Club will meet at the home of Mrs. Martin Swanson, 47 Cambridge st. at 1:30 p.m.

Final Budget Vote Monday

The School Committee is expected to take a final vote on where approximately $1 million will be cut from next year's budget on Monday night.

School Committee Chairman Catherine Alexander added that the committee will also attempt to comply with the Finance Committee's request to detail where additional cuts would be made if Town Meeting rejects water and sewer rate increases.

"The Finance Committee said they needed such a list to make a recommendation on the water and sewer rates," Alexander said. "I personally feel we should try and at least generally give the Finance Committee that information," she said.

The "worst case" figure, Alexander estimates, is between an additional $300,000-$400,000.

The other order of business for the School Committee Monday night will be to complete identification of where the final $213,000 in cuts will be made.

The committee specified $182,000 of that reduction Monday, which was $31,200 short of the goal. The difference arose when the committee rejected Superintendent William MacDonald's recommendation that the Home Economics, Industrial Arts and Business Department coordinators all assume full time teaching duties and that the Library Aides be eliminated.

Those two areas will now require $26,000 to be cut elsewhere in the budget. The remaining $5,000 is part of a $100,000 figure the committee had left as unspecified. The committee targeted $95,500 of that amount Monday night as coming from the teachers sabbatical account.

Alexander expects Monday night's meeting to be the final one on the budget before Town Meeting. "As far as we're concerned everything will be finalized Monday night. After Monday night I can't imagine line items will be changed," Alexander said.

The major cut of last Monday's meeting was the decision to eliminate the elementary school guidance counselors at a savings of $69,000. The instructional aides staff at the high school was reduced to three, a reduction that saved $36,509.

Other cuts included a .5 elementary specialist for $12,000, a high school custodian for $13,000, a reduction in administrative responsibilities for department directors and coordinators for $56,360.

The lengthy four-hour meeting Monday bogged down late in the evening when School Committee members Mary Jean Weylman and Sandra Rodgers pushed for elimination of the high school's hot lunch program that would save approximately $17,000, that, coupled with the elimination of an elementary custodian that could be accommodated because of declining enrollment, would save the committee the $31,000 necessary to meet the $213,000 reduction.

But a motion to eliminate the hot lunch program lost by a 3-3 vote. Alexander, Constance Papas and John Duffy voted to keep the lunch program intact. The committee agreed earlier this winter to eliminate the junior high hot lunch program but Papas expressed concerns about doing the same at the high school.

She questioned problems with personnel that would have to be laid off and equipment that would have to be replaced. Also, she was concerned about the spectre of high school kids, "hitting the streets" at lunch time in search of something besides a "baloney and cheese sandwich."

Alexander suggested that the committee look at an elementary custodian and a special education counselor as an alternative to eliminating the hot lunch program. Although the elimination of an elementary custodian could be made without disrupting service, the idea of eliminating the counselor, which would probably come from the high school staff, met opposition.

Director of Special Education Frank Bianco said with the elimination of the elementary guidance counselors, further reduction in counselors would leave less than "the bare bones."

It would also further reduce Winchester's capacity to keep special needs students in the system instead of sending them out of district, where the town is responsible for picking up the more expensive tuition costs.

Bianco was also naturally disturbed by the committee's decision (5-1, Duffy opposed) to eliminate the elementary guidance staff. Bianco said the decision would necessitate a major reshuffling of remaining counselors to cover at the elementary schools.

"The elimination of the entire guidance program will certainly impact the entire student population. The elimination of the entire program will have devastating effects," Bianco predicted.

The other major reduction the committee approved Monday night was to reduce administrative duties of department directors and coordinators. MacDonald's recommendation to slash $74,000 from that budget would have required that the Home Economics, Business and Industrial Arts coordinators all assume full time teaching duties.

The $56,360 cut left means Directors of English, Math, Social Studies and Science and coordinators of Foreign Language, Physical Education, Art and Music will all pick up additional teaching duties.

Principals of individual schools are expected to assume the remaining administrative work but MacDonald admits that responsibility is not included in their job description and could be contested.

School Committee Notes

Layoffs

The School Committee approved the recommendation of Personnel Director Diane Hall that the contracts of four third-year teachers not be renewed because of declining enrollment and impact of Prop. 2.5.

The action is considered fairly routine with teachers who have yet to receive tenure. The four teachers were Sandra Beachman, foreign language teacher at McCall; Pamela Brooks, social studies teacher at Winchester High; John Pirani, director of the AID (Alternatives for Individual Development) program at the high school and Marilyn Stone, social studies teacher at the high school and junior high.

Those teachers were placed on the recall list should positions open up because of attrition.

WHS Class Size Guidelines

School Committee member Sandra Rodgers announced this week the updated class size guidelines to be followed at Winchester High School.

They were: — Because of Prop. 2.5-induced budget constraints the scheduling of courses and sections of course should have the number of students at or just below the applicable class size whenever possible. — Any course offering enrolling less than 15 students will not usually be offered. However, the School Committee will review any course if necessary before eliminating it because of class size.

— In courses with two or more sections, small sections should be avoided. Students from smaller sections should be reassigned to other sections even if it means some sections will be slightly larger in the spring. This procedure will allow all students who want to take the courses to be able to do so.

— First year enrollment in any foreign language must equal or exceed 20 students or be approved by the School Committee.

— Third or fourth year foreign language courses which fall under 15 students should be reviewed with the possibility of combined courses or individual study in mind.

— The minimum class size for double session Humanities course will be 40 students.

Athletic Fundraising

The School Committee gave High School Principal Vincent Larocco the okay to start investigating ways to offset the $75,000 reduction in next year's athletic budget.

When Larocco and Athletic Director William Colella presented their recommended cuts earlier this winter, they also suggested one method to defray the shortfall would be to start booster clubs or hold fundraisers for high school athletics.

The major areas the money would be needed for would be in transportation, which was totally eliminated, and facility rentals, which effect the hockey, swimming and indoor track teams.

School Closings

The School Committee reiterated its intention not to close any schools this year but warned neighborhood representatives to be prepared to offer recommendations if Town Meeting doesn't approve water and sewer charge increases.

The committee did not take a formal vote not to closing schools but made its position clear.

"The issue is best left alone until such time a contrary action is necessary or required," School Committee member Constance Papas said. "We certainly don't vote annually on what our physical plant will be," she added.

However, when asked by Lynch Parents Association Vice-President Maureen McWilliams what advance warning residents would have should a closing become necessary, Papas and member Roger Bauman said to consider themselves warned.

"If Town Meeting votes a budget less than we have we'll have to close schools and do it immediately," Papas said. "This is your advance notice. If we have to close a school everything will have to be done in a matter of 30 to 60 days."

The committee emphasized that Superintendent's recommendation to close Lynch School would not necessarily be the one chosen and urged residents to present any figures available that would show which is the best school to close should it become necessary.

WEA Elections

Winchester Education Association President Steve Gorrie announced the new members of the union's executive board this week.

Gorrie was re-elected as president, Joanne Martignette was elected vice-president, Helen Clark was re-elected secretary and Paul Davis was re-elected as treasurer.

Tufts At WHS

Representatives of Tufts University will be at the Winchester High School cafeteria April 1 at 2:30 p.m. to talk with interested students.

Every Wednesday during the remaining school year the Guidance Department will be conducting Mini-College programs in which students and parents are invited to attend.

Police are also looking into incidents of vandalism at the Lynch School, reported Friday. Windows at the school were smashed and an office ransacked, police reports said.

Karakiozis' body was discovered by an MDC patrolman March 8 around 8 p.m. He was lying approximately 70-feet

The robber, described as 6'2" tall, weighing 220 pounds, with dark curly hair to his shoulders, fled the scene with percedan and percocet, a Class B opiate.

The girls then drove to the police station but not before being bumped from behind twice by their attackers' car at the stop light on Skillings rd. and Washington st.

There were no injuries in the incident

The Time To Conserve Is Now

The summer of 1981 may well be the summer we all go a little thirsty.

Today's Star carries a front page story by Reporter-Intern Robin Wiest in which Water Superintendent Richard Warrington says if this season is as dry as last, we can all look forward to voluntary restrictions on usage.

Local reservoirs are in "good shape," as far as Warrington is concerned, but we draw only 40 percent of our water from those sources. The remainder comes from the Metropolitan District Commission.

If that source has problems, Warrington said, so does Winchester. And it looks like the MDC has problems.

Senior Engineer Marcus Kempe said an increasing demand for water and declining supplies have placed a heavy drain on the MDC's capacity to deliver, much less maintain reserves.

Both Warrington and Kempe said a major drought was a very real possibility. Coupled with increased usage and dwindling supplies, we could all be facing what Kempe termed "a crisis situation in one year."

We urge strict adherence to voluntary conservation measures. Not just this summer, but now. By starting now, in small ways, we may be able to avert waterless days or harsh, mandatory measures.

It remains with us all to decide whether we want to conserve now and have the water we need or ignore the handwriting on the wall and pay the price later.

By TERRY MAROTTA

I'm on the Scarsdale Diet right now, and I'll be perfectly honest with you: I'm ready to eat the wallpaper. Herman Tarnower was a cad and Jean Harris was a fool to let him string her along, but the guy did invent some terrific weight-loss plan.

I ought to know; I've been on one diet or another all my life.

I first started watching my weight when I was three. I was a chubby kid with no hair to speak of, and my mother dressed me, on chilly Berkshire mornings, in a tightfitting pink wool getup which my sister called a pinch sweater. My arms looked like little weinies in it, and my torso like an inflatable doll's; when I wore it, she could never resist taking a fistful of abundant flesh and giving it a good squeeze.

She told me I was fat, but that if I peeled down a stick of butter and ate it like a candy bar frequently enough, I'd be able, as the ladies used to say, to "reduce," and avoid all that pinching.

I believed her, and off to the refrigerator I would toddle. That was the start of it all — my romance with lard. Giving me those quarter-pounders of animal fat was like distributing heroin in the schoolyard. From then on, I was hooked. I've spent the 30-odd years since that time experiencing one or another kind of withdrawal stress.

Dieting came easier to me than to some people though, because of my family background. I was born to a tradition of seasonal self-denial. Raised in an Irish Catholic home, I was taught to follow the liturgical calendar closely. We really did eat the house down on Shrove Tuesday, but when we came home with our smudged foreheads on Ash Wednesday, the sacrificing had begun. Everyone gave up things for Lent, usually things to eat. Oh, occasionally I'd pretend to give up something really repulsive like Good 'n Plenties, but since we weren't allowed to eat candy any time of the year anyway, I knew that kind of sacrifice didn't count.

It was serious business, fasting in the strict old days before Vatican II. The grownups could only have one full meal a day during Lent. I can still remember kneeling on the dining room chairs after dinner every night as we accompanied then Archbishop Cushing on the radio with the Rosary. I remember hearing some older stomachs growling.

Sundays, too, brought childhood discipline in abstaining from food. The old rule stated that you couldn't have anything but water before you took Communion those mornings, counting from the midnight before. By the age of seven or eight, I'd be so hungry during those Masses and was so suggestible anyway that my light-headedness would make me think I was experiencing divine revelation. I wasn't, of course; I was fainting.

I fainted through a dozen Masses a year, right up until I was 19. Nobody knows better than I what the underside of a pew looks like; nobody else has spent so much time with her head between her own knees.

Then there were the teen years. That the adolescent girl is typically obsessed with body weight is common knowledge, and I was no exception. I recall messing up cereal bowls with a swish of milk and a few cornflakes so it would look to my mother as if I'd eaten breakfast. I was compulsive. At 5'6", I weighed 130 pounds. Somewhere, probably from too many "Gidget Goes Hawaiian" movies, I got the idea that I was supposed to weigh 105. It's a notion that dogs me still.

College only worsened the eating issue. There we all were, living away from home in a wonderland of exotic menus, with no guys around. There were candlelight dinners and linen napkins. There was Yorkshire Pudding with the roast beef and baked goods that rivalled those of the French chefs. We ate like ravening wolves. I remember bringing extra desserts upstairs to tuck into my desk drawers — a little something to help me get through the Rise of Nationalism later in the evening... But then, the days of reckoning. The starvation diets, the bone jarring mornings pounding the track in those hideous gym suits, the weigh-ins....

A lot of that is behind me now. I've gained and lost hundreds of pounds over the years, but since my babies were born, the vacillation is a relatively minor one. My current go-round with Mr. Scarsdale of the lean-and-hungry-look will be over on Saturday. By then a diet of some 700 calories a day will have sheared off a surprisingly substantial couple of inches of me.

But I have to say that this diet really takes the cake — or should I say the carrot stick. I get so hungry that old discarded potato skins look good to me, and it's all I can do not to lick the knife I used to spread the children's peanutbutter. I can't bear to sit next to those people at Friendly's with their smug forbidden jiggers of milk standing by their coffee.

When mealtime does arrive, I lapse into a semi-conscious state, aware only dimly of the world beyond my plate. Between meals, I have all sorts of transcendental experiences. I think of Hemingway in his poor early days in Paris, going to the museum to see the Cezannes on an empty stomach because the colors seemed so much sharper and clearer to him then. That's how it is: jogging on this diet is like watching yourself on television — you can't feel it for some reason. And singing, I mean holding a couple of good long whole notes, feels like maintaining Nitrous Oxide.

Dr. Tarnower gives you a run for your money alright. His diet is good for anyone who wants to test the outer limits of human experience. I give it my strongest recommendation.

Now if you'll excuse me, I'm just going to go lick the toothpaste cap for a while before lunch.

Terry Marotta is a Winchester resident whose column appears regularly in the Star.

Letters From Readers

On Burglaries

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Quoting from your issue of Thursday, March 19: "Police Chief J. P. McHugh said that the Winchester area is good pickins... every house and every apartment here would be lucrative to a person who breaks in... Winchester is like a green oasis for burglars."

Now that's the kind of advertising we home owner's need. Perhaps the Chief was only trying to drum up support for the fight to save jobs on the police force in face of Prop. 2½. Or maybe he was drumming up business for burglar alarm companies.

2. Quote: Chief McHugh said, "Alarms are excellent. They should be used by people to protect themselves — if they can afford it." "The alarms offered by American Alarm and Communications on Main St. range between $1,300 and $1,700."

Why bother?

Quote: "Palladio pressed the silent alarm etc." "The gunmen fled..." Police arrived 10 minutes later."

Why buy burglar alarms? They don't alarm the burglars. And, it seems, they don't even alarm the police. Maybe cutting the police budget isn't such a self-defeating idea after all.

Now what the hell are we supposed to do — buy a gun? No. Just put a parking meter in front of each home. We all know how effective our police are at catching the vicious criminals who fail to put their pennies in these meters.

Carl Schwartzman

Voke School

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The late afternoon program at the Northeast Metropolitan Regional Vocational High School will terminate at the end of the school year because of Proposition 2½.

A vocational program for academic under achievers was the first program to be cut in the vocational school. (Quite a contrast from an academic high school.)

Vocational education fits all students with basic entry skills into the world of work and provides them with profitable employment.

The academic high school prepares students to continue their education by providing them with academic skills.

What percentage of high school students go to college versus the 95 percent of graduating vocational students that have been placed before graduation.

Students in the late afternoon program are taught their academic subjects in their home town high school in the morning, and they travel to Northeast in the afternoon to learn a trade which will provide them with employment for the rest of their lives.

These students had the misfortune of losing out in competition to attend Northeast on the regular day school program. However they made a sacrifice to attend both schools to become educated.

Many of these late afternoon program students have excelled in their trade skills. They have become involved in "VICA" Vocational Industrial Clubs of America. They have entered into competition in the trade skilled olympics on the local level. They have represented Northeast in the state competition, and the state of Massachusetts on the National level.

These students would not have had this opportunity if they did not attend Northeast in the Late Afternoon Program, they would be in their regular high school on a full time basis. Some would have dropped out of school and others would physically be there graduating with the lowest passing grade — with very little hope of the future that lies ahead of them because they would not possess academic or vocational skills.

Students will not have the opportunity to choose their avenues of education next year because there will be no later afternoon program. It will also be more difficult for students to go to Northeast because of the expectations of more vocational programs being cut at the discretion of the school committee.

Parents who are planning the education of their children and who are interested in vocation education should show their concern about the direction Northeast is heading by attending the school committee meeting NOW!!! It may be too late come September.

Proposition 2½ means changing times. New innovations must be implemented to meet the needs of all students desiring vocational education. Cutting Vocational Programs is not the answer because Northeast has a waiting list of over 200 students.

German Program

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Five of us from Salem High School were privileged to participate in the first German Student Convention in Massachusetts, which was hosted by Winchester High School on Saturday, March 14. We would like to express our appreciation to all involved in organizing the convention and especially to Miss Susan Austin whose direction produced a fantastic program. The various workshops and competitions were very interesting and provided both a learning experience and a truly enjoyable time. We sincerely hope that the German Student Convention will become an annual event.

Scholarship Fund

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

On behalf of the Winchester Scholarship Foundation, I want to express our deep appreciation to those who have been sending in donations in response to our yearly fund-raising drive.

Because we do not acknowledge individual gifts under $50, I hope this public expression of thanks will somehow convey our gratitude. These small gifts are in many ways the "bread and butter" of the Foundation and the reason we do not write each individual is so that every penny given will go directly to deserving students who need our help to further their education. In this era of sharply rising costs, every dollar is important, and each dollar given is a vote of support for these young people.

Elaine Delaney

On Education

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The town of Winchester has had a long history of support for its schools by providing a quality education for all students. The academically talented, students with special learning problems or handicaps, and those students who are in the broad category of "average" have had outstanding opportunities for a comprehensive education and a better future. However, we are now witnessing the dismantling of one of the finest educational systems in Massachusetts. We urge the School Committee, the educational leaders, and the townspeople to begin to develop creative and consistent guidelines that fully address declining enrollment, the reduction of professional staff members, and the insidious demands of Proposition 2½.

We strongly recommend that a Research and Development Group be organized to include vested interest groups within this community; especially parents, classroom teachers, and students. This group's primary focus should be on students; their changing needs, their abilities, and their talents. We further recommend that the Research and Development group divide into teams to update and review population projections, sites and buildings, revenues, projected enrollments, transportation, the range of student intelligence levels, achievement test results, physical development data, the changing needs of the community, the impact of drugs and alcohol on the educational scene, discipline within the schools, administrative and management roles, the increase in family and adolescent problems, and the recreational needs of the community.

Following the review and research, a long range plan should be developed and periodically reviewed to include, but not exclusively: a sound educational philosophy; a diversified and balanced curriculum; a gifted and talented program; special needs programs and support services for students, parents, and teachers; comprehensive guidance services; library and media services; comprehensive health and physical education programs; comprehensive programs in art, home economics, industrial arts, and music; a diversified business education program; more in-house programs such as resource rooms, a school within a school concept and CLIP; and a comprehensive interscholastic, intramural, and extracurricular programs.

The Winchester teachers place the highest value on programs and services for all youth. We feel that a school system which best serves all youth includes the following ingredients: a highly qualified, experienced, and dedicated staff; high staff morale; an emphasis on high standards, a thorough grounding in basic fundamentals; the development of student self-discipline; helping students realize their potential; and individualizing curricula.

The Winchester Teachers

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

It is my understanding there is a proposal for condominiums to be built behind and beside the Mahoney Nursery land off Cambridge Rd. I suggest the town's Planning Board does their homework on this one, before the proposal becomes a reality, and the "now" residents of this area have a flooding problem similar to the one that beset the homes on the lower Johnson rd. area recently.

This latter flooding problem is not new in the area and was (and will continue to be) caused by old fashion building codes and sewer systems, when the area of homes west of Johnson Hill were built.

Let's think. Can Winchester supply water to new vast developments in town; and can it dispose of the waste water that is created in these new developments, without harming established residents?

Foreign Affairs

Editor's Note: The following is a continuation of a letter dealing with the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Professor Richard Gardner in April 1974 Foreign Affairs Quarterly named organizations to accomplish ending our nation's sovereignty "piece by piece."

They were: the international Monetary Fund, the World Bank, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the Law of the Sea Conference, the World Population Conference, disarmament programs, and a United Nations, military force. This approach, Gardner said, can produce some remarkable concessions of sovereignty that could not be achieved on an across-the-board basis. Richard Gardner's preference for destroying the freedom and independence of the United States in favor of the CFR's goal of world government thoroughly dominates top circles in our nation today. The men who would scrap our nation's constitution are praised as "progressives" and far-sighted thinkers. The only question that remains among these powerful insiders is which method to use to carry out their treasonous plan.

Unfortunately, the Council on Foreign Relations is not the only group proposing an end to the sovereignty of the United States. In 1973, another organization which thoroughly dominated the Carter Administration first saw the light of day. That one is called the Trilateral Commission.

The Trilateral Commission's roots stem from the book between Two Ages, written by Zbigniew Brzezinski in 1970. The following quotations from that book show how closely Brzezinski's thinking parallels that of founder Edward Mandell House.

On page 72, Brzezinski writes: "Marxism is simultaneously a victory of the external, active man over the inner, passive man and a victory of reason over belief."

On page 123, we find: "Marxism supplied the best available insight into contemporary reality."

Nowhere does Mr. Brzezinski tell his readers that the Marxism "in the form of communism" which he praises, has been responsible for the murder of approximately 100 million human beings in the Twentieth Century has brought about the enslavement of over a billion more, and has caused want, privation and despair for all but the few criminals who run the communist-dominated nations.

On page 198, after discussing America's shortcomings, Brzezinski writes: "America is undergoing a new revolution which masks its obsolescence." I disagree; America is not obsolete.

On page 296, Mr. Brzezinski suggests piecemeal movement toward a "community of nations... through a variety of indirect ties and already developing limitations on national sovereignty." Here we have the same proposal that has been offered by Richard Gardner in the CFR publication Foreign Affairs. Brzezinski, then calls for the forging of community links among the United States, Western Europe and Japan; and the extension of these links to more advanced communist countries. Finally, on page 308 of his 309-page book, he lets us know that what he really wants is "the goal of world government."

League Praised

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I would like very much to publicly thank the League of Women Voters for the opportunity in providing a forum for all candidates to express their views regarding their respective offices.

We are very fortunate in Winchester in having so many dedicated ladies working on many important projects.

May I also bring to all the voters attention the new polling places that will take effect March 31 for the first time.

Hospital Plans

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I have recently reviewed the proposed plans for modernization and expansion of the Winchester Hospital. This review left me with little doubt that some modernization is badly needed.

It does appear that some new construction may be necessary and even desirable from the standpoint of providing adequate service to the community. I am not convinced however, that all the proposed construction is essential. Some of the planning premises seem questionable, particularly the 1977-1979 Data Base and its projection to 1985. This comparatively short period is not adequate when considering the magnitude and useful life of the proposed facilities.

As a minimum I would like to see a projection to 1995 or 2000. I also question the effect of other hospital facilities in the area on the projection. These effects, particularly of the Lahey Clinic in Burlington, do not appear to have been given appropriate consideration. Until these points are adequately addressed, I would be inclined to vote against the proposed expansion if elected a Town Meeting member from Precinct 1.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In reading this week's edition of the Star, I was sorry to see that Richard McSweeney will be leaving. However, my sincere congratulations to him for accepting a new challenge in his chosen profession.

Before Mr. McSweeney joined the staff at The Star, coverage of athletic events at the high school was minimal. Due to his efforts this past year, reporting of athletic events in The Star has been outstanding. I would hope that this coverage will continue after Mr. McSweeney's departure.

In my capacity as Asst. Hockey Coach at the high school, as well as being a teacher in the Winchester school system, I have been in contact with him on many occasions. His genuine concern, coupled with his thorough knowledge of the areas he has covered, has made his articles a pleasure to read.

My thanks to Mr. McSweeney for a job well done.

Firemen Thanked

EDITOR OF THE STAR: I would like to begin by expressing my own and my family's gratitude to Stephen Barrow and Peter Reid of the Fire Department Rescue Squad and others who responded so quickly to a recent family emergency.

This is the third time they have responded to an emergency in our family. Each time I have been impressed by the calm, professional manner and warm concern for my father and my family. The knowledge that they are a phone call away should be reassuring to all the citizens of Winchester.

My family, neighbors and other Winchester citizens however are very concerned that because of the passage of Proposition 2 1/2, this life or death service may be terminated. How can this be considered a nonessential service under any interpretation? It is my fervant hope that Town Meeting will preserve the West Side Fire Station and Rescue Squad.

Qualifications

EDITOR OF THE STAR: This is a puzzlement — these letters under the heading of Foreign Affairs that have appeared the past few weeks. The author has stated: (1) Edward Mandell House was an avowed Marxist intent upon turning over the U.S. to a Marxist dominated world government. (2) he was supported by the Rockefeller, past and present (3) practically anybody who is anybody in our government belongs to the C.F.R. — part of the conspiracy.

Why would ultra-successful capitalists like the Rockefeller want to turn over our government to the Marxists who would expropriate and nationalize their industries, banks, etc?

Said author makes a big issue that the CFR is some kind of conspiratorial organization; yet he knew of precisely 284 members who held positions in the past Administration. I wonder how many of these members also have their names on the rolls of other conspiratorial organizations like the Boy Scouts, Salvation Army, Democratic and Republican National Party, etc.?

What are the author's qualifications and credentials? Is he a member of the Democrats or Republicans or John Birch Society? Does he belong to the Boy Scouts or National Rifle Association? Since he is so authoritative, it is only fair to ask the source of his "facts" and expertise.

Oh well, I guess that shoots it. Now my name too is probably on that list of liberal-Commie dupes that have to be watched. If we all join that list, the watchers will be so busy watching us they won't have time to scheme, conspire, and connive their way into power.

Washington Report

EDITOR'S NOTE: Century Publications Inc. publisher C. Peter Jorgensen and his wife Kathryn recently attended the 20th annual Government Affairs Conference of the National Newspaper Assn. in Washington, D.C. Highlights of the briefings they had with government officials follow:

Sen. Howard Baker: He predicts "spectacular" changes in the fundamental social and economic structure if President Reagan's budget is enacted. Eighty-three programs will be affected.

Next year's budget will still go up and most programs will be increased. What the administration is trying to do is reduce the rate of increase in the budget which he says is not hard-hearted.

Baker expects both houses to finish with the budget by August, while the House, which under the Constitution must develop tax bills, will send along a tax package.

He says it is the mandate of the country to make a difference and do so promptly.

As for energy, he says reduced dependence on foreign fuel is necessary. The U.S. must deregulate and decontrol the fuel and energy industries, get on with the use of coal and the safe use of nuclear energy. The government should get out of the synfuel business by encouraging private industries with guaranteed loans.

The real election will be in July when Congress decides on the budget, says Baker. Newspapers and polls will report the reaction to the budget cuts and the country will decide. This collective judgment on an exact set of proposals may be more important than the election, Baker said.

He believes the El Salvador issue was devised as a Soviet test for the new U.S. president to see his reaction and to get information for the future. It would have been disastrous if the administration had done nothing in its first test. The number one priority is to heal the breach with Mexico which shares the interest with the U.S. of not letting Castro go unchallenged.

Sen. William Proxmire: The Democratic Senator says President Reagan has gotten off to a fine start and is right in trying to cut federal spending, but his budget is too timid, too weak and too limited. The number one problem of inflation cannot be overcome without some cruel sacrifices by people.

Proxmire says if the administration is not going to have vigorous competition from imports or a vigorous anti-trust policy and will not call attention to price increases and will not balance the budget, it won't have much of an anti-inflation policy.

The proposed defense budget may well be necessary, he says. There are needs in personnel, readiness and equipment. The MX missile is not needed, and there are other areas that can be economized.

As for a balanced federal budget, Proxmire said President Reagan and all other presidents missed the opportunity to not let the debt limit increase. If that had been done, spending would have to be cut. That would balance the budget the hard way, he said. There is no reason why the federal budget can't be balanced.

Proxmire calls inflation an inconvenience for the wealthy, but heart-breaking for the poor. Getting inflation under control will help the poor, he said. He supports drawing a line on Social Security. Federal funds should be targeted to concentrate on poor areas.

The senator says he hopes the energy department, which is not needed, will be closed. Federal agencies should be consolidated into a smaller number. As for budget waste, he said there is no line item for waste. One way to cut waste is to reduce the size of programs, such as by raising eligibility for Food Stamps.

Defense Dept. spokesman Maj. Gen. Gerry Curry: The U.S. has emerged from a dangerous period during which the Soviet Union forged the largest war machine in history and the U.S. made a decision to disarm itself. The U.S. lost sight of the fact that power can only be effectively checked by power, he said.

The time to reverse the decline in U.S. power is now. The administration has a mandate from the American people to rebuild U.S. strength.

The MX missile itself is needed. It is funded and being developed. Major decisions of the last administration, including MX, are being reviewed. A decision on how to base the MX will have to be made this June or the project will be delayed. An independent civilian review committee's report on the MX is due by June, as is a review by staff.

Curry said the U.S. will not catch up to the Soviet Union and will not try to balance their equipment. "We think we can beat them with less," he said. The Soviets rob the private sector to reinforce the military, which the U.S. does not do.

Edwin Harper, Assistant to the President, Deputy Director of the Office of Management and Budget: Traditional answers of creating unemployment to combat inflation and remedying unemployment with federal spending will not work.

The new approach is to cut federal programs to bring federal spending under control. The Reagan program includes spending control, tax cuts and deregulation, "lifting the morass of regulatory burden" off the economy.

Harper says the least controversial tax cut proposal is the business taxes because most people know that in order to create jobs, the U.S. has to invest in new plants, be stronger in world trade and improve the balance of payments.

Controversial are personal tax cuts. They will not put $50 more in everyone's pocket, but will change the rate of taxation, reducing it 10 percent a year for three years, to produce a continuing incremental incentive for people to save and invest their money. This will create jobs.

A social safety net for the needy, a margin of safety for defense and control of federal spending are the administration's goals. Harper says accomplishing these would mean priorities have shifted. Thirty-four percent of the budget would go for defense in 1984. The safety net program which is 37 percent of the budget now would be up to 41 percent in 1984.

A tough look will be taken at entitlement programs where eligibility has gone astray, for example the Food Stamp program and the 32 cent a day lunch subsidy for school children who are not needy. Some of the problems are people temporarily out of work who get Food Stamps and companies that do not finance their own expansions because they can wait for federal funds.

Charging for special services, such as having yacht owners pay for some water programs, is being looked at. Good programs, but ones that are not fundamental to sustaining life, such as the arts programs, are being looked at. In times of fiscal crisis and double-digit inflation, cuts have to be made in what is not basic, Harper said.

His office is looking at consolidating narrow grant programs into block grants in order to cut the hundreds of millions of dollars spent on administration. Money would go further by letting state and local officials decide how to target it.

In trying to reduce the overhead of government programs 37,000 federal jobs will be eliminated by the end of FY '82.

Jim Finch, Sr. Asst. Postmaster General, Finance: The Postal Service in 1980 had a growth of 6.5 billion pieces of mail, the biggest in history. Annual volume is 106.3 billion pieces. Productivity gains in 1980 were 5.5 percent, due to mechanization, better use of equipment and the transportation network, and management.

The postal service is building a career force of managers who manage toward the bottom line. The service is beginning to see the fruits of the structural changes from the 1970s. In the past the postage rates had nothing to do with the cost of the service. The 3 cent stamp was kept for 26 years.

The Postal Service sought an increase to 20 cents for first class mail, but the Postal Rate Commission set 18 cents. If the higher rate is not approved, the service will have to file for another increase later this year in order to make up the $1 billion in revenue lost.

A $306 million cut in federal subsidy for FY '80 has been absorbed. The president hopes to end the subsidy in 1984, Finch said.

Contracts with the four major unions which represent 600,000 of 665,000 employees expire in July. The average for postal employees, excluding managers, is $22,100 for salary and fringe benefits. The average is $600 higher if management people are counted.

The addition of four figures to the Zip Code, "Zip plus 4," is for business correspondence. Finch says the automated equipment does not read the handwritten zip codes. Eighty-four percent of the mail volume is from businesses, 10 percent of the personal is bill paying and two-thirds of the remaining 6 percent is at the Christmas season.

The Zip Code paved the way for letter sorting machines and efficiencies resulting in more than 75 percent of the letter mail being mechanized. If business mail with nine-digit Zip Codes could be handled by machines the Postal Service would save $600 million a year in today's dollar.

The Postal Service would offer incentives in rates for businesses that use the new zip and supports legislation that does not make use of the longer zip mandatory. It is controversial, says Finch, with all of the same arguments that were given against the five-digit zip being made now.

Rabies Clinic Set For April 11

Winchester's annual rabies clinic for dogs will be held behind the Board of Health Office at Town Hall April 11 from 1-4 p.m., according to Dog Officer Nick Molea.

The three-year shots are $3 per dog. Molea said dogs must be on a lease and accompanied by someone over 12 years of age. Molea said licenses for dogs for 1981 go on sale at the Town Clerk's Office April 2. Those licenses will also be available at the April 11 clinic.

Licenses for male dogs are $4, for female dogs $7 and for spade females, $4. Those licenses will also be on sale at the April 11 clinic, Molea said.

Molea also said the Attorney General's Office had recently okayed a new fine structure. Fines for first offenders are $20 while second offenders will pay $30. Third offender fines are $40, Molea said.

Housing Forum Offers Suggestions

One thing came out of last Wednesday's housing forum that most people in town knew before Planning Board Chairman Charles Tseckares called the meeting to order.

Chief Writes MDC

Winchester Fire Chief Robert McElhinney was one of seven chiefs from seven North Shore towns who have sent letters to the Metropolitan District Commission saying the MDC will have to pay if it wants to go on receiving fire protection and services.

Fire chiefs from Saugus, Wakefield, Melrose, Stoneham, Malden and Medford mailed the letters as well as Winchester.

There is a shortage of housing in Winchester in all categories: for the elderly, low-and-moderate-income families and for renters of apartments and houses.

What wasn't as clear were the steps that should be taken to remedy the problem.

The forum had ten speakers at the Jenks Center who represented landlords, neighbors, local housing officials, victims of condominium conversion and attorneys.

Those speakers addressed the 70-plus crowd for, three minutes before fielding questions from the audience.

The lack of elderly housing is a growing concern and Clara Hewis, administrative assistant at the Winchester Housing Authority pointed out that the town currently has only 112 units of elderly housing available.

Hewis also pointed out the town has no form of housing "for any other type of individual, such as veterans or low-to-moderate income people."

However, the lack of housing locally encompasses more than the elderly or poor.

According to Sherman Josephson, a local realtor, entry-level housing for the young is all but nonexistent.

He said many of those who grew up in Winchester are having to settle for houses in near-by towns, where housing is available and prices are cheaper.

This exodus is complicated by the fact that Winchester has little or no apartments for rent, a fact realtor William Cacio Caci doesn't think will change much in the coming years.

He said most realtors were pulling out of the apartment rental business, converting existing units into condos, and the means of stirring interest in the construction of new housing.

While Washington School neighbor Barbro Ek supported the conversion of the structure into an 18-unit condo project, Mary Brink, a neighbor of the Parkhurst School, was opposed to condo conversion in her neighborhood. Brink said neighbors in her area opposed conversion based on their belief that an area zoned for single-family residences should not be rezoned to include multi-family units.

In terms of funding needed housing proposals, Selectmen Chairman Wade Welch said a Chapter 121A program, which offers developers a tax break as a way to encourage construction might be the course to pursue.

"We've constantly been reacting at a late stage of the game," Welch told the audience. He said the town should develop

Hansel Talks

On Solar Energy

David Hansel of Solar Solutions, Inc. of Bedford and Winchester spoke to the fourth, fifth and sixth graders at the Lincoln School recently.

The topic was making use of solar energy.

Hansel brought a solar panel with him and explained how it is used to collect the sun's rays that can in turn heat water for homes.

Teachers Present List Of Alternative Cuts

Winchester Education Association President Steve Gorrie presented the School Committee with a list of areas to explore as alternatives to budget reductions recommended previously by the administration.

The WEA's proposals, which were drawn up by the union's representative council, ranged from the start of an early retirement system to a reorganization of the central office and the closing of Sanborn House.

Many of the proposals the administration agreed with in principal but had either already met them as much as possible legally or weren't feasible to do economically.

Among Gorrie's proposals were: Early Retirement System — School Business Manager Jack Fallon said it was not economically feasible for Winchester to do it and added other communities had dropped it after starting such a system.

Reduction of Legal Fees — Fallon responded that because of an increase in collective bargaining grievances in recent years it would be impossible to do so until teachers reduce the number grievances that require legal counsel.

Elimination of Out-of-State Travel Budget — Fallon said all but $2,500 the principals are guaranteed by contract had been eliminated.

Eliminate Special Education Bus and Taxi Transportation — That has been done whenever legally possible, Fallon said.

A Per Student Cost Study at Northeast Regional Vocational School Should Be Made — Fallon said it would be looked into if any action could be subsequently taken.

Sale of Sanborn House — Until a use for the site is found it would cost approximately $30,000 more to move from Sanborn to another school building.

Voluntary Partnership Teaching Program — Fallon said the idea of allowing teachers who want to teach part-time be combined to share one full time job could be considered but may not save much money.

Reorganization of Central Office Staff — Fallon said that could be considered but said he would find it hard to respond to the issue "dispassionately."

Nursery School Sets Registration

The Winchester Cooperative Nursery School is enrolling pre-kindergarten children for the 1981-1982 afternoon class. The afternoon class, taught by Anna Olivier, is for children eligible to enter kindergarten the following September and, for those children whose parents feel an extra year of preschool would be beneficial. The curriculum emphasizes development of language and math readiness skills in addition to those activities which encourage social and emotional growth. Through a balanced program of individualized activities, as well as small and large group work, each child is given many opportunities for success. By succeeding at various tasks there is opportunity for substantial growth in self confidence and in the ability to function in an environment away from home.

For further information about this class or the nursery school, please call Mrs. Judy Busch at 729-7489.

An IRA saves you taxes. But that's only half of it.

It's true. If you don't belong to a qualified employee retirement plan, the Medford Savings Individual Retirement Account is a great way to save taxes. It lets you deduct up to $1,500 ($1,750 if you're married with a non-working spouse) on your federal income tax return every year.

But the IRA really does a lot more. Because while you're saving taxes, you're also building up a substantial retirement nest egg. And the earlier you start your IRA, the more money you'll have when you retire.

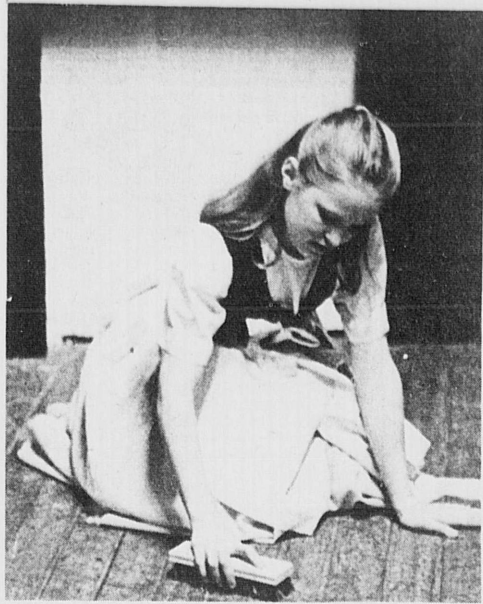

So whether you want to have tax relief now or retirement security later, there's only one account to have. The Medford Savings IRA.

'Snow White' A Success

By ANNINA McCULLY
Special To The Star

The Cooperative Theater for Children, directed by Catherine Alexander, has for the second year given audiences a theatrical smash. "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," presented in Chidley Hall of the First Congregational Church this past weekend is a stunning production.

The capacity audience was given a hint of the fun to come when costumed ushers presented a program with a hand drawn cover. The play opens with a welcome from Vanessa Biggs and a narration by Dorien Masseling. They speak with animation and charm to give us the history of Snow White. Lady Queen comes forward and is magnificent in her imperial regalia, played alternately by Katie Carroll and Kathy Furey. The Queen never allows us to forget how obsessed she is with her own beauty and her intense jealousy of her step-daughter. The Queen addresses her mirror — flawlessly portrayed and spoken by Nancy Sampson. "Mirror, mirror, on the wall . . ." The mirror scenes are a great credit to the creativity of the production staff.

Snow White, double cast with Joanna Alexander and Katherine Hewitt, is always the charming Princess. Each actress sings and dances to create the role of Snow White so that the audience is perfectly aware of all the emotions that Snow White is experiencing. The Ladies in Waiting, Jessica Purdy, Vanessa Biggs, Kathy Kingsbury, Melissa Black, Cary Williams, Danielle Didio, sing and dance their story to give additional support to their Princess.

Sir Dandiprat, Ben Dulong, is a perfect jester, stumbling and fumbling his way across the stage. Ken Barclay, the Prince looks quite regal as he seeks to marry Snow White.

Witch Hex, skillfully acted by Ann Derry and Aimee Murdock, delivers comic lines to the wicked Queen with perfect timing. The humor in the midst of detailing hexes, poison, potions and evil is the perfect blend of comedy and tragedy. The comic relief from the intensity of the Queen is just what the audience needs.

The huntsman, Berthold, sympathetically portrayed by Phil Svahn sorrowfully leads Snow White into the forest. Spared but abandoned by Berthold, Snow White meets her new protectors, the Forest Animals acted by Sara Fitzpatrick, Chris Gilpatrick, Elizabeth O'Donnell, Kent Suhrbier, Robyn Richardson, Kelly Scott and Deborah Skahan. They are a charming sight. Fantastic little furry creatures, tails held high and butterflies with beautiful wings protect and hover over Snow White. They lead her to the house of the Seven Dwarfs where she is safe for a time.

Suddenly the aisle is filled with charming little old bearded men costumed perfectly in red and green suits singing "Heigh Ho, Heigh Ho, it's off to work we go" as they go to their little house to find Snow White. The dwarfs romp and sing with delight. Doc, Seth Rosenberger, is the leader of the dwarfs and he gives the orders to Bashful, Dopey, Grumpy, Happy, Sleepy and Sneezy. Dopey, Heather Frank, although sometimes mixed up, helps them discover Snow White with her "Oh my goodness" speech delivered with great feeling. The other dwarfs played by Sandy Powers, Sandra Bennett, Brandon Macneill, Bill Weylman, Charlotte Reece, Jennifer Clotti, John Hirschhorn and Shawna Hazel never lost their character and they are scene stealers.

The Maids of Honor, Orissa Baker, Karen Bauman, Susan Bonnell, Maria-Elena Cloherly, Alyson Kessel, Susan Masseling, Kristin McKay, Caitlin Mullin, Katrina Nelson, Martha Nolan, Laura Powers, Heather Price, Anne Reno, Robyn Rogers, Carrie Rowley, Deidre Skahan, and Jane Williamson, surround the stage and look all the world like a beautiful pastel rainbow. They sing and dance and are witness to all the events much like the classic Greek chorus.

The audience is hushed as Snow White falling victim to the wicked Lady Queen is carried very carefully on a stretcher up and down the aisles until she is returned to her palace where she awakens to the delight of her new found friends. Snow White then forgives the wicked Queen and agrees to marry the Prince. These events lead to a rousing finale with full cast, assuming happiness for all.

This charming adaptation of the Grimm Fairy Tale by Walt Disney is supported musically by the professional arrangements of Doug Davidson. Carole Davidson at the piano, with Beth and Christy Davidson on the violin and flute with percussion by Russell Leach make the old familiar songs seem fresh and lively.

The costumes are spectacular. Each character is meticulously attired with a palate of soft colors set against the black and red of the Queen, the green and red of the dwarfs, the black and white animals and the harlequin jester. The colors blend perfectly with the well designed and creative sets. The choreography is suited to the moods of the story and each dance has been rehearsed to perfection.

The stage crew worked with ease. Every prop was in place, lighting was always just right and those wonderful soap bubbles appeared in just the right places. Part of the success of this production is due to the talented members that comprised the stage crew: Maura Reece, Tom Donahue, Emily Doherty, Dan Meserve, Steven Purdy, Kathy Skahan, Avril Svahn, Laura Weylman, Pam Bruno, Carrie Price and Greta Rosenberger.

The adult members of the production staff are also to be congratulated for giving their professional help to the Director to give the audience a play of this quality.

Relive your own childhood memories of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" or introduce some children to this marvelous tale this coming weekend at Chidley Hall. The theatrical talent that is present in our young people has never been more evident and more promising than in the current production of the Winchester Co-Operative Theater for Children.

Relive your own childhood memories of 'Snow White' or introduce some children to the marvelous tale this weekend. Shows at Chidley Hall at 7:30 p.m. Friday, 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Health Center Assertiveness Course

Do you believe that assertive people are pushy, loud, and overbearing?

Do you believe that only women need assertiveness training? Do you believe that assertive women are unfeminine?

If you answered "yes" to the above questions, you might benefit from a free lecture sponsored by Mystic Valley Mental Health Center Association, Inc. Thursday, April 2.

Louis Kordel, Ed.D., counseling psychologist at the mental health center who will conduct the seminar says, "Many people have misunderstandings about what assertive behavior is. Assertiveness is not being loud and pushy. Assertiveness is self-expression while respecting the rights of others. Assertiveness training teaches you to say what you want effectively. It is useful while dealing with responses in the home or with employees in the work center."

Both men and women can benefit from assertiveness training. Many men have been raised to be aggressive - to yell or fight, but they do not know how to be assertive. Many women have been socialized to help others, to deny their rights or be passive and not to be assertive. Whereas women might have more difficulty expressing negative thoughts, men traditionally have had difficulty expressing emotional, awkward comments. Assertiveness training can help men and women express both positive and negative statements effectively.

The one hour seminar will help participants to understand assertive behavior, to recognize obstacles in becoming assertive and will present methods to reach this goal.

The leader, Dr. Louis Kordel, has conducted numerous assertiveness training workshops during the past five years and specializes in counseling groups for men.

The lecture will be held on Thursday, April 2, from 7:30 - 8:30 p.m. at the Sacred Heart Church, Follen rd. in Lexington.

CAR CARE CORNER

Mario Scenna, Serv. Mgr.

Next time you've got your grabby clothes on, locate your wheel lug wrench, pry off all the hubcaps, and see if you can get all the wheel lugs loose. Just bust each one loose, then tighten it up again. If they'll all come loose, fine - think no more about it. But every now and then, you'll try this and find that one or two nuts just won't budge, they've been on there so long that they've just about sent down roots. If you find any like this, try all the tricks you know about how to deal with stuck nuts - and if you fail, go down to your favorite gas station and have them free them up with their wrench. This little inspection and fixing-it-now before you have to will spare you from getting a flat in the middle of nowhere and finding a lug nut that Samson at his harness couldn't bust loose.

pending drought, Warrington said. Normal annual rainfall for the region is 40 inches. Last year there were 28 inches.

"Some day in the future, a major drought will occur," Warrington said. "We don't know if it will be in 10 years or sooner. This one may be a false alarm. But if we don't do something, and if it isn't a false alarm, we're in pretty bad shape."

If the state has another low-precipitation year and the MDC has to dip much more into their storage supply, "we could be put into a crisis situation in one year," Kempe said.

The problem is a long-term one. The MDC will have to expand its water resources, Kempe said. Of its two major reservoirs, the Watachusett was built before the turn of the century and Quabbin was constructed in the Twenties or Thirties. The MDC must also encourage decreased consumption.

Kempe said that by asking communities for voluntary conservation measures this summer, the MDC hopes to avoid future mandatory restrictions or water rationing.

While voluntary conservation may insure that residents have water in the future, they will still pay the same price for water regardless of how they conserve.

"One of the unfortunate consequences of conservation is that consumers will be billed just as much," Kempe said. "We still have to maintain our physical system and must charge just as much for water no matter what amount is sold."

However, if consumers conserve enough to render a major capital investment in a new supply source unnecessary, conservation would be cost effective.

The MDC held a meeting March 6 with member communities to discuss effective ways of inducing their residents to reduce their water consumption. Kempe said the MDC is now studying the suggestions of the communities but has not yet formulated a conservation policy for them to follow.

Warrington said the town Department of Public Works is waiting for a formal request from the MDC for voluntary restrictions before the town will confront the public.

"We will impose strict conservation if all the communities are asked at the same time," Warrington said. "It would be difficult to impose strict requirements while other towns go along as usual."

When the MDC does launch its media education program in early June, Warrington said it will probably call for a reduction of non-essential water use such as lawn sprinkling, car, driveway and all outdoor washing, and the operation of swimming pools and fountains.

Kempe said the MDC will check for leaks in its own system, replace inaccurate meters, and possibly impose rate changes.

If the water shortage becomes critical, he said the MDC would consider declaring a water base mandatory and assess fines on residents who did not comply.

Warrington said that if the town will allocate the $1200, he would like to have a pamphlet entitled "Water Conservation In Your Home" sent to every household.

He would then try to educate the homeowners through their children. "Kids are eager to learn and transfer their knowledge to their parents," he said. "Sometimes we reach more of the population by getting the youngsters involved."

"There is no reason consumption cannot go down," Warrington added. "The handwriting is on the wall. The water shortage had to come. We are using too much water."

A Few Tips On Saving Water

By ROBIN WIEST

Star Reporter-Intern

Winchester residents are flushing almost half of their total water consumption down the toilet. Literally.

"Forty-five percent of household water is used to flush the john," Water Superintendent Richard Warrington said. Fifty percent supplies bathing, dish washing and laundry needs while only 5 percent is actually used for drinking and cooking, he said.

"We're treating water to prevent dental cavities and make sure it has the right PH level," he said in an interview last week, "and then we water our lawns with it."

Water conservation does not mean anyone needs to go thirsty.

Warrington said that one of the most significant ways a resident can reduce his water consumption is to repair major leaks in the home.

Leaks are major water wasters and can cost consumers up to $600 a month.

"We get arguments from people who are greeted with a high water bill after they return from vacation," Warrington said. "They have leaks. And they pay for thousands of gallons a week if the leak is a bad one."

"I know it's cruel, but that's how they learn — the hard way," he said.

To check for toilet leaks, add a few drops of food coloring to the toilet tank. If color appears in the toilet bowl, you have a leak.

"You wouldn't believe how many people in Winchester have leaky Johns," Warrington said. "Those leaks cost them several hundred dollars."

Newly-manufactured toilets now hold four gallons of water instead of six, but by placing heavy plastic containers in the bottom of the tank, old toilets can be altered to require less water.

Residents should immediately replace washers on dripping faucets and be sure to shut valves tightly to prevent slow but sure water loss. "A drippy faucet that is cracked can double, triple or quadruple water consumption," Warrington said.

"Our men inform people that they can hear leaks in some resident's households," he said. "Some leaks are so loud it's a wonder the people can sleep."

"Some people don't want to pay for water that leaks in their homes," Warrington added. "But once water goes into a home, it is the property of the consumer. It's like a shopping cart, you have to pay for everything that's in it."

It's A Lot Of Fun

By Judith DiNobile
Special to The Star

Pre-school children have fun and learn new skills at the Muraco Elementary School program for gymnastics.

Every Monday morning, children ranging in age from 3 to 5-years-old, participate in a program taught by Noreen Arcari.

Arcari is a free-lance teacher for the Recreation Department. She teaches two 45-minute sessions with twelve children each.

One group consists of 4 and 5-year-olds while the other group ranges from 3 to 4-years-old. The younger children are assisted by their parents.

Some of the skills the children learn are rolling, handstands, balancing and climbing. They use beams, horses, balls, ropes, and sometimes even a parachute.

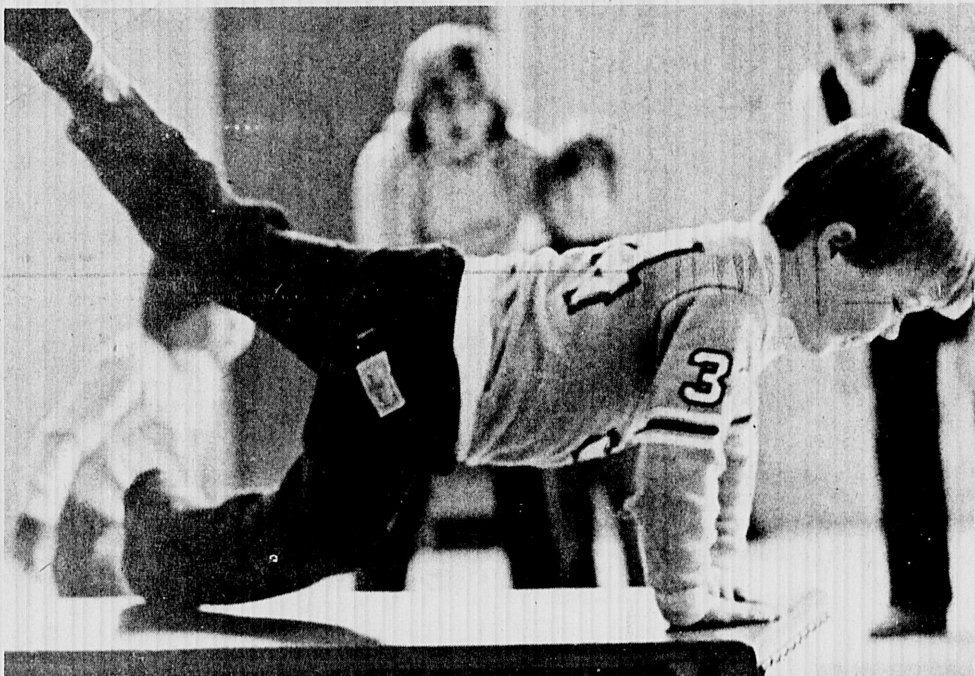

Samantha Margles, one of the children in the younger group, climbed to the ceiling of the gym. She was the first in her group to achieve this feat.

The children are taught to walk on the balance beam by watching another child's fingers which are placed on the opposite end of the beam.

NEW SKILLS and usually a lot of fun was in store for 3 to 5-year-olds who participated in a gymnastics program at the Muraco Elementary School. In top left photo Karl Oliver just gets a feel for the floor. Above, Samantha Margles conquers the rope climbing test. And bottom left David O'Leary tries out the balance beam. Sort of. Sachem Lacrosse Team Counting On Depth

By RICHARD McSWEENEY

Lacrosse Coach Gene Bouley knew he'd have a few more folks out than usual, this being the first year of freshmen eligibility. But even he didn't expect this many.

Ninety-five boys came out for the sport and only eight of those seniors. He had to cut eight from the varsity and approximately 15 from the junior varsity. That's a first.

"I'd say that's the most we've ever had come out," Bouley, who has been Winchester's one and only lacrosse coach, said. "But it's the first time we've had to cut like this. We're keeping 28 on the varsity and about 30 on JV. You feel bad when you have to cut boys that would like to be out there," Bouley added.

Although the numbers are impressive Bouley is well aware that this season, which starts Tuesday against Framingham North, will mark the second in a row in which he has three returning regulars. There's a lot of bodies, all right. Inexperienced bodies.

"From last year I have Dave Lawton back at attack and Neil Frink and Paul Abbanat who played second midfield are back. Those are the only kids I have back that had regular playing time last year," Bouley said.

But that's precisely the same thing Bouley said last season and the team recovered from a 1-3 start to finish with a 13-4 record and a berth in the state tournament. And with just eight seniors, Bouley knows his junior class, which last year compiled a 12-3 JV record will have to produce.

"I'm going to be relying on the seniors but I'm also going to have to get a lot from the juniors," Bouley said.

The most promising junior shapes up to be Mark Steranka at crease attack, an offensive weapon that was missing from last season's midfield-oriented team.

"He's just an excellent athlete. This year we'll have a strong creaseman. He can score," Bouley said of Steranka.

Eric Lowenstein and Mike Gorrasi are the other juniors that Bouley expects will see a lot of playing time from the

'I hope to be in the playoffs again but it will be hard to get in on a percentage basis. We'll be looking for second place.'

—Coach Gene Bouley

attack position. Co-Captain Lawton should combine with those three to form the regulars up front.

Two of the elder statesmen, Neil Frink and Co-Captain Abbanat will lead the midfield group along with seniors Doug Ross and Jim Gibbons. Bouley projects juniors Bill Ferry, Jonas Bjarnsgard and Steve Noble will get a fair amount of playing time at midfield.

But unlike last year, that group will not be counted on to replace the scoring of last year's midfielders, Stu McCord (30 goals, 16 assists), Peter Tracy (16 and 18) and Ken Blasi (18 and 2).

"I have a feeling we'll be scoring more from the attack this year. I usually like to do it that way but last year our strength was at midfield and you have to go where your strength is," Bouley said with a shrug.

Despite the switch in offensive philosophy, Bouley expects offense to be the strength of this year's club.

"Offensively we do look pretty good. In practice we have shown a lot of offense. But it's unsettled offense. We're not scoring out of set plays. Against good teams we won't be able to score like that without set plays. But the kids are used to doing it like that at the JV level. Against the good teams they won't be able to do it," Bouley insisted.

Defensively, seniors Paul Fuller, Rich Beal and Ken Vancini will return and will be pushed by juniors Mark Johnson and Jeff Levey. Those are the two (juniors) that should play and might even be starting," Bouley said. "The seniors have all played before but at the JV level. They don't have the experience yet."

And that's something that's going to have to come quickly if the Sachems hope to fend off Peabody, Beverly and Billerica for second place and a state playoff spot.

"Defensively, we have to learn how to cover a man. That will be the biggest problem, how to play defense," Bouley says simply. He has been working with the defense in clearing it upfield quicker but they still have a way to go.

"We just don't show enough experience. They don't have the good stick-work yet," he said.

As for making the playoffs, Bouley says it will be more difficult than last year. He and everybody else have already conceded the North Division title to Concord-Carlisle, last year's defending champ. "Concord we're hearing is going to be super this year. They went all the way last year and they have just about everybody back," Bouley shuddered.

The top two league finishers make the playoffs along with teams that win at least 70 percent of their games. Bouley is hoping to get in via the first route.

"First of all we don't have Woburn on the schedule because they dropped the sport. And we had to drop Wayland because they wouldn't play us. Those were two easy wins for us. I hope to be in the playoffs again but it will be hard to get in on the percentage basis. Right now we'll be looking for second," Bouley said.

A potential key to that second place finish may lie in the goal where the Sachems have to replace last season's First Team North Division All Star Jack Barret with a couple of juniors. But Bouley is more than happy with the progress of Joe Donlon and Mark Miciche.

"Those two both look good," Bouley insisted. "They were the JV goalies last year and right now neither kid has an edge. For juniors those kids are very good."

A pretty good indication of how ready the club will be will come Saturday morning (9 a.m.) when Winchester hosts a jamboree with Waltham, Brookline and Burlington at the high school field.

Perhaps the most attractive date on the regular season schedule may be Friday, April 10. The Sachems will be traveling to Peabody to play under the lights, a first for any Winchester team. The game will start at 7 p.m.

"That should be exciting," Bouley said. "For anyone interested in seeing a match that should be a good one."

James Campo Wins Award For Sportsmanship

Each year recognizes one of its players, numbering over 160 boys this year, with a Sportsmanship Award. The criteria for the award are fair play, good character, and hard work.

This year the nominees were Chris LoCascio, Hech Fattoum, Shawn Sizemore, Michael Doherty, Mark Fantasia, Matt Olson, Edward Holleran, James Campo and Ted Dever.

In a very hard decision the WYH Directors selected James Campo, a blue chip right wing, who skated on the 1980-1981 Winchester Pee Wee AA Team.

Jim will be given his Sportsmanship Award by Bobby Orr March 29 at the Natick Hilton Inn.

Congratulations to all these fine boys and especially Jim Campo.

It pays to look in the CLASSIFIEDS.

Summer School Course Offerings

Winchester Summer School course offerings were announced this week and along with them came a 35 percent hike in tuition costs.

The increase was made necessary because the program now has to be totally self-supporting because of Prop. 2.5 "The choice is simple," School Committee member Constance Papas said. "Either we raise tuition or we don't have summer school."

All enrichment and remedial elementary and secondary courses will now cost $65 for children and $75 for non-residents. Mini-Courses will cost $25 per child. All elementary and mini-courses will be held at the Lynch Elementary School. The secondary courses will be held at the high school. The classes will start June 29 and run through Aug. 7. The classes will be from 8 a.m.-noon.

The course offerings presently being offered are as follows: (Summer School Director John Pirani said there may be additional mini-courses added depending on interest.)

Stevenson Made A Difference

What a difference a year makes.

Last season Winchester's Holly Stevenson, a center on the Northeastern women's Basketball team, spent most of her time on the bench, even though she showed some flashes as a rebounder.

This season everything has turned around for the 5-11 junior. She led the team in both scoring and rebounding with averages of 12.7 and 7.3 respectively and was a major factor in the team's success this season.

"Holly has improved tremendously from the beginning of the season," said first-year coach Joy Malchodi. "I don't think she participated much last year and this year she's our leading scorer and rebounder. She's working hard on her defense, the one spot she must still improve on. I'd say the one area she is best at is offensive rebounding."

Stevenson's improvement and the coaching tactics of Malchodi, formerly head coach at the University of Indiana, led the team to a 18-8 record, just missing one of the eight berths in the EAIAW (Eastern Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) New England-New York regional playoffs.

At the beginning of the season nobody expected the Huskies to even come close to a regional playoff berth. NU opened with five straight losses before finally beating Long Island University, 65-51. The Huskies then went on to win 11 of its last 14 games, including seven straight, propelling itself into the EAIAW playoff race right up to the end of the season. However, the team's poor start proved to be too much as Northeastern missed out on a playoff bid in Malchodi's first season.

With gradual improvement and the recruitment of more players like Stevenson, the Northeastern women's basketball team might soon make the playoffs itself, and maybe even add the likes of national powers Rutgers, Old Dominion and Louisiana Tech to its schedule.

35mm POCKET CAMERA
Amazing, how they made a camera this little this good!

It weighs just 7.9 ounces. And it measures only 4 1/2 by 2 1/2 by 1 1/2 inches, about the size of a pack of cigarettes.

Yet it's capable of truly fine 35mm photography, and it's loaded with big camera features. The XA has aperture priority automatic exposure - you just select the aperture and the camera automatically sets the right shutter speed.

It has easy rangefinder focusing. There's a special lever that automatically compensates for backlighting situations. The self timer beeps and blinks with super bright LED.

And the sliding Dust Barrier not only eliminates the need for a case by protecting the viewfinder, the rangefinder and the lens - when it's opened it automatically switches the camera on and unlocks the shutter release.

There's a lot more. So come in, lift it, feel it, fiddle with it. We think you'll walk out with the new XA in your pocket!

Film Classics

What could be more in keeping for a library than to buy 16mm films based on books? Well, the Winchester Public Library has done it again. The first of these films is Franco Zeffirelli's version of "Romeo and Juliet" in color, running time - 45 minutes. The principals in the cast are Olivia Hussey and Leonard Whiting.

Zeffirelli's film visually recaptures Verona in Renaissance times, a stunning "young person's" interpretation, heightening the conflict of love and hatred and minimizing the role of providence in the tragedy.

A short story classic by O. Henry, "The Gift of the Magi" is the second film, running 16 minutes. It is a beautiful Christmas story set in New York in the year 1905. A young couple live in a simple, slightly shabby apartment, not far from the railroad tracks, and they are very much in love.

O. Henry had the gift of suspenseful surprise in story telling and this tale, full of tenderness, won't be seen with a dry eye.

The third film is "The Great Gatsby" by F. Scott Fitzgerald, which comes in two parts, the first running 27 minutes and the second for 34 minutes. It is edited from David Merrick's production of the Jack Clayton film. The cast includes Robert Redford, Mia Farrow, Karen Black, Scott Wilson and others.

"The Great Gatsby" is the major chronicle of American life in the Jazz Age of the 1920's. The people of the book, depicted in the film, are those drawn to the exotic and the expensive seen through Fitzgerald's perceptive, philosophical frame of mind. A work of lasting importance.

Sale Set

The annual rummage sale of the Second Congregational church located at the corner of Washington st. and Kenwin rd. will be held April 3 from 10 a.m.-2:30 p.m.

There is a selection of clothing, draperies, household goods, jewelry and dishes. A snack bar will be open during the sale.

Registration Set April 2 For Babysitting

Registration deadline for the babysitting seminar, conducted by the Winchester Jaycee Women, is Thursday, April 2.

The seminar will be held at the Winchester Public Library from 7-9 p.m. on April 6, 7 and 14. Notices will be sent home to sixth and seventh graders through the schools.

On April 6, there will be registration from 7-7:30 p.m. Dr. Blanch will talk about illness and injury and what the sitter should be prepared to do in each case. Anita Meyer will discuss appropriate and inappropriate behavior of the sitter and the entertainment of children.

On April 7, Officer McKinley will speak from 7-7:30 p.m. on safety. From 8-9 p.m., a fireman will show a film and discuss what to do in case of fire.

On April 14 the seminar will meet in small groups with an adult to practice holding and diapering, using dolls. Then a written test will be given.

Participants must attend all three sessions, pass the written test, and bring with them paper, pencil and the registration fee. Registrations may be made by calling Robin Shannon, 1 Lakeview rd., or Pat Malcolm, 16 Chisholm rd.

Sears Addresses Republican Women

John Sears spoke to over fifty persons attending the March meeting of the Winchester Woman's Republican Club in the home of the James Blackhams recently. He spoke on many issues now confronting the present government. He is the only Republican member of the Boston City Council elected since 1949. Sears is concerned about the Middlesex County government.

He suggested those who spend the money should raise it. On education he would stress quality based on common sense and collecting the millions due in taxes to help with 2½. When asked, he stated he would like to be Governor, but cautioned "Keep your powder dry and wait a bit".

Mystic Parents Sponsored Dance

The students of Mystic School, their parents, brothers and sisters, attended a square dance Friday, March 20. The dance was sponsored by the Mystic School Parents Association (MPA) and was held at the Lincoln School.

Each family brought a picnic dinner prepared at home, to enjoy from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m., and purchased refreshments and dessert prior to the dance.

Square dances were called from 7-9 p.m.

Garden Club Will Participate In Flea Market

Members of the Winchester Garden Club will participate in a Flea Market sponsored by the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts to be held Saturday April 4, at the Suburban Experimental Station on Beaver st. in Waltham (U. Mass Waltham across from Girl Scout Cedar Hill camp).

From 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., antiques, collectibles, crafts, culinary treats, and plants will be among the many treasures presented to the public.

For further information about this admission free event, call Mrs. Claude W. Callahan, 729-3956.

MAVIS

Egypt's peace treaty with Israel had allowed her to turn considerable energy toward her third largest foreign exchange revenue producer, tourism. Upper Egypt's Luxor and Abu Simbel have used interest free loans to develop indoor and outdoor museums, major archaeological sites, roads, airports, and telecommunications. At least, the great Nubian temple monuments of Ramses II will be accessible. The Cairo Museum has benefited financially from the Treasures of Tutankhamen Tour enough to upgrade it substantially as well.

For complete travel planning assistance anywhere in the world rely on the staff at McGRATH TRAVEL SERVICE, 14 Eaton Ave., Woburn, 935-0600. Depend on our expertise to arrange your transportation, accommodations, sightseeing and more. Open: Mon. - Fri. 9-5, Sat. and evenings by appt.

TRAVEL TIP:
Twelve thousand hotel rooms are available in Egypt. This number will double by 1983.

For just $10, learn how energy efficient your home is. Or isn't.

When you request one of our home energy audits, you get much more than the usual conservation tips like weatherstripping windows and turning down thermostats.

You get a personalized, two-hour, cellar-to-attic analysis that lists - in writing - many possible ways you can save energy in your home. And you get it from an objective, completely independent energy expert.

Many of our recommendations will cost you little - or nothing. Others may require a modest investment. But in every case, we'll provide you with full estimates of how much each improvement will cost and how much you can save annually.

We'll even give you a list of dependable, state-listed contractors. And the names of banks that offer energy-saving home improvement loans.

How much does a thorough audit like this normally cost? With most private energy consultants, up to a hundred dollars.

But if you take advantage of our program now, you can get it all for just ten dollars.

So call the toll-free number below. And do it today! The ten dollars you spend now could save you hundreds - even thousands - during the years ahead.

REAL ESTATE

by Ann Blackham

PERSONAL OR REAL PROPERTY?

When a home is sold, the question often arises: "What stays with the house as part of the purchase and what property goes with the buyer?" Real estate is usually defined as the land and everything attached to it, such as: buildings, trees, shrubs, etc. The buyer normally gets all of the real estate, but none of the owner's personal property. The problem arises when personal property has become a part of the real estate. This is called a fixture and does pass with the real estate.

There are three usual tests which must be satisfied. Has the personal property been permanently annexed to the real estate? Is it intended to become part of the real estate? And finally, what is the local custom? Usual fixtures might include: shades, heaters, ranges, screens, storm windows, lighting fixtures, etc.

It is important that the seller spell out specifically in his sales agreement exactly what he intends to give to the buyer as part of the real estate.

In all your real estate needs — buying — selling — rentals — appraisals — consultation — please phone or drop in at:

Why not? Have your ad set in larger, darker, bolder attention-getting type! Yes, it does cost a little more. You can save a few little cents on your ad and lose many big dollars in sales. Now that really isn't economy, is it? It is especially important to have a big, attractive ad if the items you are selling are perishable or have a short season. Call us at 643-7900 to place your CPI Classified ad. Remember, one call places your ad in all three of our publications.

Abuse Said A Problem

The problem of child abuse is becoming more and more of concern to the Winchester Police Department, Chief John P. McHugh said recently.

"There's a great need for extensive public awareness and education on this subject," he said.

"Child abuse," he continued, "can leave physical scars: poor eyesight, impaired hearing, brain damage. It can also result in emotional scars: fear, isolation, failure in school, emotional retardation, and juvenile delinquency."

Pointing out that child abuse is against the law, Chief McHugh asks local residents to report immediately any suspected or witnessed incidents. The purpose of reporting this type of crime is to identify the child in peril, he stated. Only after the danger has been identified can protective services respond.

According to Massachusetts CRIME WATCH, child abuse is an injury or a pattern of injuries to a child for which there is no reasonable explanation. Child abuse includes non-accidental physical injury, sexual molestation, neglect, and emotional abuse. It is not usually a single physical attack or a single act of molestation. It is generally a pattern of behavior.

Typical indications of child abuse include cigarette burns, repeated patterns of bruises, marks on the soles of the child's feet, the outline of a blunt instrument on the child's skin, a scalding from hot water or some other liquid, bumps on the head, lacerations on the face, and/or broken bones.

Fear of contact with adults, persistent sobbing, continued crying or whimpering can also be signs of an abused child. An unresponsive child with a blank stare sometimes is a victim of abuse.

In addition to the above, Chief McHugh asserted that an abused child is often unclean:

- clothes are sometimes dirty or inappropriate for the weather.
- has severely abnormal eating habits.

- exhibits extremes of behavior — is unusually aggressive or destructive, or extremely passive and withdrawn.

- cries excessively, or shows no response to pain or pleasure.

- is either unusually adult in actions or overly immature.

- seems unduly afraid of parents.

- is unpleasant, hard to get along with; demanding; a cause of trouble in a group.

- is wary of physical contact, apprehensive when approached by another child, particularly one who is crying.

- is habitually absent from or late to school (may be kept home until physical evidence of abuse disappears)

- begs or steals food.

"With help, the vast majority of parents can learn to cope with their problems and to enjoy their children," the Chief added.

Notice
The Winchester Public Schools will hold pre-kindergarten screening for all children entering kindergarten in September, 1981, during the week of April 6-10 and April 14.

As mandated by Massachusetts state law, the screening is a non-intensive scan conducted by school specialists to check a child's vision, hearing, speech and coordination. ★ Taxi

Mildred Kulda of Adams st. "and that was before the increase. I can only imagine what it is now."

But as some Jenks members pointed out, "some people get to the age where they shouldn't drive anymore. A lot of people in their 70's just shouldn't drive."

Jenks faculty member Jean Bradley said that very few members use cabs now because they find the rates high.

"We share rides and take care of each other," explained Irma Ercolini of Nathaniel rd.

While Winchester's taxi companies are in complete agreement concerning the necessity for a rate increase, they completely disagree over the justification for mandatory meters.

"For a town that's six square miles it's completely ridiculous to install meters," said Winchester Taxi Association President and owner of Green Taxi Service, Richard Terzian. "The selectmen give us a rate increase with one hand and then take it away with the other hand."

Pacy however is not upset over the $340 meter cost and plans to install four. "I can't see where $340 can make or break anyone in this day and age," he said. "Ten speed bikes cost that today. I think it's nice to pull up and look at the meter and know the price without having to ask," Pacy added.

Terzian stressed that regardless of his reservations towards meters, he plans on fully cooperating with the Selectmen. "I don't want to start any wars," he emphasized.

Terzian has installed the only meter he plans to purchase and claims that it was an unnecessary cost.

"These people trust you with their life," he explained, "they'll surely trust you with their money."

Since he installed the meter, Terzian claims that customers feel embarrassed about it. And he said he's afraid that now he'll lose his business to Woburn where they are not required to use meters.

'Meters are the only way we can determine rates fairly.'

Pacy disagrees. "Meters are the only way we can determine rates fairly with no arguments between the cabbies and the customers," Pacy pointed out.

Lane's Limosine Service owner John Lane, although personally unaffected by the changes, said, "meters would be the fair thing. They're beneficial to everyone."

But Terzian said he found it insulting to be required to install meters in "a small bedroom community where you know your customers."

Lt. Crawford proposed the meter requirement to provide an equitable method for determining rates. "I had suggested meters before and the town agreed that the old zone concept was too complicated for customers, but the taxis kept saying meters were too expensive."

When Pacy requested a rate increase earlier this month, the Selectmen agreed to grant the hike only with the stipulation that taxis also install meters as this would now be necessary to accurately determine fares.

Meters were seen as the solution to inequalities built into the zoning system. "Meters will narrow down the margin of error in fares," said Joseph Capone, Sealer of Weights and Measures. "Now the customer will understand how the price was calculated. There was quite a bit of room for error with the old system," he added.

"Now there shouldn't be any more fights with the cabbies," Pacy said. Crawford did report that he had received complaints over unjust cab fares but that he had not received a large number.

Terzian insists that Winchester doesn't attract enough taxi service to merit meter installation. He estimates that he receives three to five calls a day. Pacy also agreed that the taxi business is not flourishing in Winchester.

"We're in a recession and we're looking for relief," said Terzian. "I don't see how this demonstrates relief by raising our costs."

Pacy feels just the opposite. "The rate increase will cover meter costs," he said.

Terzian also finds the meter costs inflationary and contradictory to the national policy of fighting inflation.

"Meters and more controls and regulations are not in line with Ronald Reagan's policy of freeing up businesses and letting them do their own thing," he stressed.

Terzian also claims that meters "really mess up a good car" as they strain the battery and installation requires holes drilled into the dashboard. "I don't consider that a rate adjustment."

"Business is extremely poor," said Terzian. "If we're going to get rate relief, let's not contradict it with increased costs."

DPU Eyes Phone Rates

By SUSAN SCHNECK
Star Reporter-Intern

There was more good news last week for the Winchester Chamber of Commerce concerning its year-long battle with New England Telephone (NET) over rate structures.

The Department of Public Utilities (DPU) assured the Winchester Chamber of Commerce last week that they are willing to investigate the Chamber's claim that NET is engaged in discriminatory rate practices.

All the Chamber has to do is petition the DPU for the investigation, a simple process that can be undertaken by either 20 businessmen, the town manager or the Selectmen.

"This is an avenue that is open to the Chamber under Massachusetts statutes," said DPU telecommunications attorney Shawn Nestor.

"This was definitely a breakthrough," said Chamber Executive Director Rita Spence.

She said the DPU's willingness to investigate the matter probably resulted from the support of the Chamber's position from Representative Whip Saltmarsh and Senator Sam Rotondi. Both legislators sponsored a bill the Chamber presented to the legislature in early March which would force NET to offer Winchester the flat rate option.

For the past year, the Chamber has been trying to obtain a flat rate option for businesses and other non-residential customers — a choice open to neighboring towns.

Despite several negotiation sessions with NET and the pressure of the bill filed with the legislature, the two groups have been unable to reach a compromise.

The cost for NET to convert to a system which would offer Winchester and other effected communities the flat rate option would be a major question in the DPU investigation.

When the Chamber originally questioned NET on this in mid February, Spence said NET claimed they did not know the costs and were not inclined to check.

One week later at the legislature's government regulatory committee hearing, NET said the cost for changing rate structures would be $750,000.

At last week's meeting, that figure had risen to $1,750,000 — an increase of one million dollars.

"The telephone company derives their figures to their benefit," said Spence. "NET is unable to document those costs. They conveniently don't have information when they don't want it out."

"They're playing games," she said. Spence said the Chamber was very fortunate to have filed a bill with the legislature as quickly as they did.

"We're getting just what we wanted," she said. "Our case has been presented to the DPU, we're obtaining more information, and we've shown the DPU this is a pervasive problem."

The legislature has not taken any action concerning the Chamber's bill as yet.

★ Candidates

Winchester Center, particularly for elderly and low-to-moderate income families.

Incumbent Geary called himself a supporter of "the relative sanctity of individual neighborhoods." He also said he would support the building of apartments in area zoned for business rather than residential areas since he considers such concerns businesses.

Lindmark, a member of the Holton Street Study Committee, said the Planning Board was often in a "reactive position" and urged the Board to do more planning ahead.

He said the Board should define, in specific terms, the size of condos and industrial projects the town would allow.

Housing Authority — Candidates John J. Regan and John R. Pasillo.

Pasillo said the Housing Authority should work to double the current number of elderly housing units available. Currently the town has 112 units of elderly housing.

He urged the Authority to seek funding from federal sources and from the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency.

Following questions from the audience, Pasillo said he would favor the construction of 50 apartments at the Lynch School, setting aside a certain number of elderly residents and a certain number for low-income residents. He proposed using a federal Section 8 subsidized rental program to pay for construction.

Regan, a captain in the Winchester Fire Department, said he would like to see the Housing Authority continue existing programs and investigate the possibility of constructing housing for low-income and elderly residents.

Regan also said he wanted to examine a housing survey sponsored by the League of Women Voters which said Winchester had 340 families eligible for some form of subsidized housing.

Pasillo and Planning Board Chairman Charles Tseckares squared off when the chairman asked the candidate if he would support the construction of low-income housing for families who qualified.

Saying Winchester needed new construction, Pasillo said a certain number of units at the Lynch could be reserved for low-income families.

Tseckares pressed Pasillo further, asking him if he would favor the construction of three- and four-bedroom apartments for low-income residents.

Pasillo said he would first find housing for the 100 elderly residents he says are on the Housing Authority's waiting list before addressing the problem of 340 low-income families.

He said it was "out of the question" for the Authority to find housing for these families.

He said funding could be obtained from the MHFA by sitting "down with the proper people."

"It's not a big deal," Pasillo said. "You don't have to see Ronald Reagan."

After Pasillo said the town had let the Noonan School slip away, Tseckares pointed out the Noonan would be converted into low-income elderly housing under a Section 8 program.

Regan said he hoped the League's survey would provide information that would persuade state officials that Winchester does indeed need funds for housing construction.

Failing state funding, Pasillo pointed to federal funds or a local bond issue as a means to raise funds for housing.
